ASKS FOR THE CHARGES AGAINST CHIEF KIELY

Police Commission Takes First Step Toward an Investigation.

AGAINST ANY DELAY

Commission Wants the Truth to Come Out As Soon As That End Can Be Brought About.

Official cognizance of the charges made against Chief Kiely by Councilmen Tyler and Bullock in their report to the Common Council has been taken by the new police commission. The action expected of the body was inaugurated at a meeting last night, at which the following resolution, offered by Commissioner Ivins, was passed:

Whereas, Councilman Tyler and Bullock in a report to the Common Council of the city of Plainfield have made statements relative to the chief of police which, if true, demand his discharge and punishment;

And whereas, the chief has publicly demanded that the charges be put in writing, signed and, as required by law, presented to the proper authority in such manner that he may answer them and be tried and proved guilty or innocent;

And whereas said Councilmen have so far failed to respond and have failed to present said charges in any legal way to any court of board or body which has or claims to have any authority to try or to determine them;

And whereas it is manifestly unfair both to the chief and the public that this matter be left in its present condition;

Resolved, That said Councilmen be and are hereby called upon to present to this board their charges properly signed and attested and that the corporation counsel is requested to aid them in framing the same in legal form;

Also, that if said Councilmen refuse or neglect to so present said charges within the next ten days, that the Mayor or president of the Council be and are hereby requested to present or cause to be presented to this board such charges, in such legal form that the chief may be enabled to plead thereto, and that a trial may be had on the merits of the case.

Commissioner Marshall, who is secretary of the board, gave out the resolution this morning. Mr. Marshall said there was nothing else to give out.

"The charges were not discussed," he said; "the board simply dealt with the conditions confronting them. It is felt that matters should not rest where they are a minute longer than is necessary to establish the truth one way or another. The facts should be brought out, the board feels, without an hour's delay. It is scarcely to be doubted that practically every citizen wants the truth known as soon as it can be brought out, and the board is seeking to compass that end in the most direct way open to it."

It was suggested that the board had power to order the chief before it for investigation independent of any initiative on the part of the two councilmen or anybody else, but Commissioner Marshall said the right to take such action was not established in the minds of the commissioners. The law under which the commission was appointed gives them express power to subpoena and swear witnesses.

THIEVES IN THE BOROUGH.

Ransack M. Abrams' Home But Take Only Two Rings.

While the members of M. Abrams' family were absent from the home on Grove street, last night, thieves effected an entrance by forcing a basement window. They ransacked bureaus, dressers and even turned beds upside down, but so far as could be learned, only two gold rings were taken. A large quantity of silverware had been taken from the sideboard in the dining room but the intruders were evidently frightened away. The ransacking was done between 7:30 and 9.

The borough police were notified and have since been working on the case, though they have but little evidence to guide them.

Stole a Razor.

Saveni Bellmont, a barber, was arraigned before Justice Mosher this morning charged with stealing a razor from his employer, Frank Peretti, of Richmond street. He pleaded guilty, and was held under his own recognizance for the Grand Jury.

4,660 VOTERS' NAMES ON REGISTRY LISTS

TOTAL NUMBER 101 LESS THAN A YEAR AGO.

While in some districts of the city the registry is much larger than a year ago, the total registration completed last night, shows that there are 101 less names on the lists this year. This year's figures total 4,660, while a year ago it was 4,761.

There is quite a falling off in the figures in the Second district of the First ward, while the First district is about the same. There is an increase in the First district of the Second ward, and the Second district is about the same. The First district of the Third ward shows a slight increase and the Second district is about the same as last year. In all but the First district of the Fourth ward there is substantial increase, and in the First district there is a falling off. The registry this and last year is as follows:

	1904	1905	Added	Total
First Ward.
1st Dist.	689	601	67	668
2d Dist.	336	233	17	250

2d Dist.	340	319	18	337
Third Ward.
1st Dist.	634	553	43	596
2d Dist.	324	331	2	333
Fourth Ward.

Borough Registration.

The last day's registry in the borough caused the addition of many new names in both districts. In the first district the figures have not been completed, but the number of voters will be about 700. In the second district ninety-two names were added yesterday, bringing the total registration to an even 800, an increase of about 150 over last year.

THIRTY-SIX BILLS RETURNED BY GRAND JURY,

It was sentence day in the Union County Court today and several cases were considered by Judge Vail. Lugi Scaduto, the Italian fish peddler, charged with killing a fellow-Italian fish peddler in this city several months ago, and indicted for manslaughter, entered a plea of not guilty. He was placed under $3,000 bail, Michael DeRosa, of Elizabeth, furnishing the security. Scaduto was then released. His trial was set down for November 14. J. P. Owens is his counsel.

Harry Molleson, of this city, charged with stealing milk from the Stillwell Milk and Cream Company, entered a plea of not guilty and was released in $100 bail. His trial was set for Wednesday, November 8. F. J. Blatz, Esq., is his counsel.

The Grand Jury returned thirty-six additional indictments, including one in the case of John J. Goff, making forty-six in all up to the present time. The Grand Jury expects to complete its labors on Wednesday, November 8.

Her Eighty-fifth Birthday.

Mrs. Hannah J. Leland celebrated her eighty-fifth birthday last evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Manning. The house was decorated with lanterns, and there were other evidences of the October festival. At dinner, Mrs. Leland was seated with her four children, two sons, Henry Leland and Elwin Leland, being on one side, and two daughters, Mrs. Carman and Mrs. Manning, on the other. She was kindly remembered by her children and also by grandchildren not present. During the evening, she received congratulations in personal calls from the neighbors, and telephone messages from well wishing friends.

Borough Republican Mass Meeting.

The borough Republicans have completed arrangements to hold their second big mass meeting Friday night. It will take place in Saengerbund Hall, and former Mayor B. A. Hegeman will preside. The list of vice-presidents will be made up within a day or so.

EXEMPTS' CELEBRATION

Hallowe'en Parade in Borough in Which a Couple of Hundred Took Part.

SOME FUNNY COSTUMES

Supper at the Clubhouse Late in the Evening—Some Features of the Demonstration—Committees in Charge.

While the city depended upon house parties and the "rough-and-tumble small boy" style of observing Hallowe'en, it remained for the borough Exempt Firemen's Association to hold a formal outdoor celebration last night. At its bidding several hundred merrymakers, all intent on fun, assembled in front of the clubhouse on Somerset street at 8 o'clock and from then on until 10:30 men, women and children enjoyed the antics. The spirit of the night was abroad and nobody took offense at what somebody else did, though as a rule it was just good natured Hallowe'en frivolity.

Such an array of paraders as took part in the procession has not been seen in many a day. There were outlandish costumes by the score, and home of them fere decidedly clever makeups. There were clowns, Chinamen, darkies, soldiers, policemen and many others, either masked or so decorated as to deceive intimate friends. David Bodine acted as marshal in leading the merry host throu[illegible] the streets, and he was ably assisted by Harry Coddington, Robert M. [illegible]ntain, Frank Kesselring and Lewis Clark, in the exempt's uniform, heading the procession. The Crescent Band, of Raritan, took charge of the main end of the musical equipment, and in addition two "homemade" drum corps kept time. One of them came down from Prideville, escorting Colonel A. G. Perry on a fiery charger and a big delegation from that section. The fifers and drummers were William Perry, Linden and John Journeaux, Fred Allen, William Parsch, Herman Klinsman, Joseph Pawson and William Gaub, while Howard Perry and Charles Bremmer acted as drum majors. The Warren Drum Corps was composed of Joseph Newman, John Schenck, William Higgins, James Block, Winfield Conover, Lee Hammond, Joseph Skinner and Harry Hann, with Garret Shepherd as drum major.

Well up in front of the parade was a line of horsemen, some of whom added a touch of dignity to the occasion, while the others thought more of keeping their places than they did of anything else, and it was all several of them could do. John Goodwin, on a noble steed of high pedigree, hired from a liveryman, was greeted with enthusiastic shouts everywhere and responded in his own stentorian way. Other equestrians were Charles Keller, Herman Klinsman, Brooks Carson, Charles Dean, Joseph Ruttledge, Andrew Carney, Elvin and Walter Smalley, Robert Hand, Henry Uhrhahn, John Cooley and George Donovan. One lone automobile guided by George Wilson and bearing David Dreier, William Firstbrook, Harry Hoffman and Joseph Sweeney, gave the affair a modern aspect. Frank Neidig and Adrew Mulford had a unique float and William Uhrhahn carried a score of "Rubes" in a hay wagon.

The route traversed was exactly as published previously and everywhere the paraders were accorded a royal welcome. Even fire headquarters, at which every exempt looks askance, threw open its doors, and at Chief Woolston's order apparatus bells were kept jingling and the big gong sounding all the while the crowd was in sight. Many houses along the way were prettily decorated, among them being former Chiefs Stahl's and Fairchild's.

When the return to the clubhouse was made those who had worn costumes and masques or had entered rigs, were invited inside and treated to supper. While this feature was in progress the Crescent Band remained on the street and furnished a musical programme for a crowd of several hundred. It marked the end of one of the most successful affairs the borough exempts have conducted since they became organized.

The plans for the entire affair were arranged and in charge of John Shroop, who worked unceasingly for weeks to give everybody a good time. He had decorated the clubhouse in a fantastic manner with corn stalks, pumpkins and paper lanterns and was present all evening to welcome visitors. He was assisted in serving supper by Mrs. George Schlereth, Mrs. Charles Hardenfelder, Mrs. George Mardenfelder and Miss Lillian Cousson.

In Justice Hand's Court.

Action was commenced in Justice Hand's court this morning by F. W. Runyon, formerly proprietor of the Courier-News, against C. S. Meyers, on contract. The suit is for unpaid subscriptions.

BIG CROWD AT REDMEN'S FAIR ENJOYS HALLOWE'EN

HALL FILLED WITH MERRYMAKERS; REPETITION OF THE SHADOW DANCE.

There was a Hallowe'en crowd at the Redmen's fair in Vardon's Dancing Academy last night. The hall filled early in the evening, and remained full all evening.

Business at all the booths and attractions was brisk, and dancing room was almost at a premium. There would have been no room for dancing at all if all the copes in the hall had wanted to circle at the same time.

One of the interesting features for those who enjoyed the Terpsichorean pleasure was a revival of the old-time shottische. At 10 o'clock the shadow dance was repeated. Its effect was as pretty and as popular as on the first night.

Solos were sung by professional vocalists from E. W. Mills' music publishing house. Other singers and some novel features of amusement will be on the programme tonight.

ENVELOPED IN FLAMES, MASQUERADER BURNED

MISS BRECK HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM HORRIBLE DEATH.

While playing the part of a witch at a Hallowe'en party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde, of Woodland avenue, last night, flames from an alcohol lamp set fire to a fancy dress worn by Miss Breck, and before they could be extinguished her arms and face were badly burned. A considerable portion of the young woman's dress about the arms and body was consumed.

So far as possible the accident was kept a secret from the guests, and Miss Breck was quickly taken to her home on Woodland avenue, where Dr. Endicott was summoned. Although she suffers considerable pain it is not thought that Miss Breck will be disfigured in any way.

TAX BILLS ALL TO BE DELIVERED THIS WEEK

COMMISSIONERS OF APPEAL WILL HEAR OBJECTIONS, NOVEMBER 28.

Tax Collector Robert L. Lee expects to have most of the tax bills delivered by the end of the week. The delay has been caused by the inability to secure envelops an time. A force of three men has been busily engaged at the collector's office for two or three weeks preparing the bills and this work is nearing completion.

There are about 1,200 bills to be delivered and in the business part of the city they will be delivered by help from the office, while for those in the residential part, the mail carrier service will be used.

The Commissioners of Appeal will meet in the Common Council rooms on Tuesday, November 28, to treat with taxpayers who have any objection to make over their assessment, and it should be remembered that it is up to the taxpayers to have any changes made there and not by the Common Council later on.

All taxes will be due on December 20, and those not paid on that date will be returned and interest added to the various amounts. Heretofore the taxes were due on November 20, but a general law adopted since makes taxes due on December 20 all over the State.

Johnson-McNally.

Miss Susan McNally and Samuel Johnson, of Oak Tree, were married Monday night at St. Mary's church by Father Bogan, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. Miss Nora Kelly was bridemaid and John Conway, was best man. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride at Oak Tree. The groom owns a large farm at Oak Tree and the couple will reside there. The bride received a large collection of handsome and useful gifts.

—Don't miss Levy's mill end sale Saturday.

—The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the residence of Mrs. H. Chase, 116 Putnam avenue.

—Those who once visit Neuman Brothers' store know that their display of fancy fruits is not equaled anywhere in the city. They make a specialty this week of fancy Malaga, Tokay, Niagara and Concord grapes, delicious grape fruit and fancy table apples.

HALLOWE'EN AMUSEMENT

Many Parties in the City And in the Borough Last Night.

PRANKS OF CHILDREN

Some Jolly Good Times — Surprise Parties As Usual—Notes of a Number of Them.

Hallowe'en in the city came and went with the usual noise on the street, made by the usual crowd of irrepressible small boys, and the usual trepidation on the part of nervous householders with gates and windows and doorbells in accessible places, which is where such things usually are. Family gatherings and parties were held by all classes and degrees of young people.

There was no serious disorder, although the cops were kept busy shooing boys away from untied wagons and other movable things. Probably on account of the parade over the brook, there were more grown-ups on the streets, usually given over to the youngsters, than in ordinary years.

Fifteen friends of Miss Anna Bach, of Somerset street, tendered her a Hallowe'en surprise party last night. Hallowe'en games were played and refreshments were served at midnight.

Coons & Co. forgot to take in the candy showcase in front of their five and ten cent store on West Front street, and some small boys seized the opportunity it offered without delay. The lock was pried loose and several pounds of candy disappeared. The cops discovered the open showcase before all its contents disappeared and notified the manager.

One of Scheuer & Company's delivery wagons was dragged from Exchange alley to Washington street. It was not damaged.

A surprise party was given to Miss Anna Martin, of East Sixth street. Music, dancing and the time-honored games were the features.

Being no respecters of persons and notabilities, the boys ran off with a chair from Chief of Police Kiely's porch. The chief's chair was found at the top of the Bryant School flagpole, a few doors below his house.

The home of Mrs. G. S. Whitlock, of 440 West Front street, was the scene of a merry masquerade party. Vocal solos were rendered by Horace Martin, Jr., Clarence Rittenhouse and Miss Anna Boss; recitations by Miss Helen Wooley and Miss Helena Huber, and piano duets by Miss Eva De Camp and Mrs. George Saums. Refreshments were served at midnight after the guests unmasked.

Miss Frances Hyde and Charles Hyde, daughter and son of Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde, of Woodland avenue, gave a Hallowe'en party at their home last night, entertaining forty young friends. The home was decorated in autumnal foliage, including cornstalks and pumpkins. The guests were dressed in fancy costumes, including "Punch," "Sunny Jim," "Mother Goose," and many other characters. The young folks danced throughout the evening, and interspersing the numbers there was lots of fun and Hallowe'en pranks. At a late hour refreshments were served.

One of the many Hallowe'en parties in the borough was given by Miss Blanche Sharkey, of Whitewood avenue. Fifteen of her young friends were in attendance and enjoyed themselves until after midnight with music and "spook" games. Refreshments were served at a late hour. The rooms were prettily decorated with autumn leaves.

The members of the First Church of Christ, Grove street, enjoyed an old-fashioned time at their Hallowe'en party last night. The older folks as well as the young people threw themselves in the frolic.

All the old time amusements and games were indulged in. An amusing feature was a make-believe spirit rapping seance, which answered yes or no to any question put. Refreshments of coffee, sandwiches and pumpkin pie were served.

The committee was made up of Mrs. John Manley, chairman; Mrs. Henry DeMott, Mrs. William H. McKane, Henry DeMott, Mrs. George Rockfeller, Walter Stewart, Mrs. George Wyckoff.

There was a surprise for Miss Olive DeLany, of Madison avenue, in the Hallowe'en party at her house last night, although the affair was not a surprise party in the usual sense of the term. Miss DeLany is the city nurse. One of her favorite topics of conversation is the number of queer people she meets in the course of her professional work among the poor of the city, and a number of what she calls her "characters" have become familiar to her friends. A few days ago, when Miss DeLany suggested that a party be held at her house last night her friends seized on the idea of one of

MUST OBEY THE BOSSES

Correspondent Applies a "Sun" Sermon to the Local Political Situation.

ARRAIGNS "MACHINE"

Presents An Indictment, With Eight Counts—"Obey the Bosses Or Say Good-Bye."

J. A. Babcock, of Clinton avenue, has found in a New York Sun sermon an application to the political situation here, and he has sent to this paper his thoughts on the subject in the shape of the following communication:

Editor The Daily Press:

In a Sunday Sun editorial entitled "Jerome for the People" is a sentence which is a sermon in itself. It reads, "Obey the bosses or say good-bye to political preferment." While the Sun applies it to Jerome's splendid and, I hope, successful fight against bossism in New York, it is of well-night universal application throughout the country.

Take the case of Plainfield. Everyone who understands the actual local situation knows that Councilmen Bullock, Higham and Wilson were defeated at the primaries, not by the people, but by the bosses. At every polling place in this city the bosses or their henchmen worked unceasingly to bring about the defeat of these men, without whose aggressive independence of thought and action much of the civic progress of the last twelve months would have been impossible.

The bosses did not want Leslie M. Daniel to be elected President of the Common Council, yet he has made the most efficient official who has occupied this responsible position in bany a day.

The bosses fought bitterly against the $1,000 license fee and the restrictive ordinance.

The bosses opposed until the last moment the appointment of Robert L. Lee as tax collector, yet Mr. Lee has proved to be thoroughly efficient, courteous in his treatment of the public, accurate in his work and attentive at all times to his duties. The bosses—not the people—have thrown him down. He was not "their" man.

Equally opposed, at the time, by the bosses was Charles C. Randolph, who was selected as an Independent to fill Mr. Lee's unexpired term in the council. Perhaps more bitter than in any other case was the fight of the bosses against the appointment by the council of J. Fred MacDonald to fill the vacancy in the Board of Freeholders which was caused by Capt. Hubbard's death.

This appointment met with very general approval from all classes of citizens, among whom Mr. MacDonald is known as a man of wide business experience, broad views and unquestioned integrity. But the appointment did not please the bosses. They had in mind a "worker," and workers must be dewarded. They did not dare contend that Mr. MacDonald was in any sense unfit to fill this position of trust—they simply didn't want him, that was all there was to it.

I wish to predict that the bosses, if they are in power next year, as they will be if the right-thinking citizens of Plainfield do not arouse themselves from their lethargy, will do everything in their power to see that William S. Tyler is superseded in council by a man much less aggressively independent than he has been.

There is one man who looms large on the local political horizon for whose election to office the bosses are responsible, and that man is Mayor James F. Buckle. Comment on this fact is wholly unnecessary to anyone who has followed his Honor's official acts during the past, and would be idle to those who had not. Mr. Buckle has held office in Plainfield for years. How truly the Sun says, "Obey the bosses or say good-bye to political preferment."

Boys Fire Storage House.

Boys in search of Hallowe'en amusement out of the ordinary run, set fire to a small bicycle and storage house in the yard of Charles M. Slocum, on Mercer avenue, last night. An alarm was turned in from box 157 and the borough department responded and put out the flames in a few minutes. The loss was slight.

Cause of Bell's Single Tap.

Lieutenant Campbell, of the borough fire department, was compelled to climb the tower and fix the fire bell at 11:30 last night, because of a disarrangement of the mechanism. In doing so it was necessary to adjust the guilding chain, causing the hammer to fall and give one tap.

TEACHING MANUAL WORK

Grace Church Has a Fine Industrial School For Colored People.

IT IS FREE TO ALL

Classes in Dressmaking, Cooking and Housekeeping—A Banking Institution is a Feature.

A most valuable adjunct to the work of Grace church parish is the Colored Industrial School. From the kindergarten classes for children, boys and girls, to the adult classes in dressmaking, cooking and housemaid duties, the work is in the hands of skilled, faithful and responsible teachers. That the advantages offered by the school are appreciated by those whom it is intended to benefit is shown by the fact that while it was organized only two years ago, with thirty scholars, last year it had on its roll one hundred and five.

The school is entirely free; it is simply a question of need, and the wish to learn. All are welcome. It is non-sectarian, all creeds being represented among the scholars.

The girls are instructed in hand and machine sewing, darning and mending; the boys in basket and rug making. On Thursday afternoons at 3:30 there are classes in dressmaking, cooking and housemaid's duties. No one who has ever observed the results of this branch of church work will fail to appreciate the great benefit of such training on all who are brought within its influence.

A very important feature of the Industrial School is the Penny Provident Bank. In this way children, and through them, often the parents can put away sums smaller than they could offer at a savings bank. Even one cent is an acceptable deposit, and it is pleasing to note the evidence of self-respect and importance of even the youngest depositors.

The winter classes of the different branches of the work of the Industrial School will be opened Saturday morning. The children, boys and girls, will meet at 10 o'clock sharp. The classes in cooking, dressmaking and housemaid's duties will meet Thursday afternoon, November 9, at 3:30. Both teachers and scholars are to be congratulated on their new quarters in the beautiful parish house just completed. There are large, airy, light rooms for sewing and a well appointed kitchen. All who are interested in this work are cordially invited to visit the school and see for themselves the good work that is being done.

RASORES CLUB ENTERTAINED.

Members Treated to Musicale at Dr. Waldo's Home.

Through the courtesy of Dr. Waldo, of West Eighth street, the Rasores Club was delightfully entertained at a musical given at his home yesterday. There was a large attendance of women and the house was attractively decorated with flowers.

The artists were Dr. Waldo, 'cellist; Miss Mary Hubbell, alto; Mrs. George H. Cobb, of Orange, pianist, and Mrs. W. D. Beach, violinist. This well-selected programme was presented and greatly enjoyed:

Each number was perfectly rendered and elicited genuine applause and the club extended a hearty vote of thanks to those who furnished the musicale.

FREDERICK SUCCEEDS MILLS.

Dunellen Man Now Express Company Manager.

It was announced today that Wilson Frederick, of Dunellen, would succeed E. W. Mills as local manager for the United States Express Company. Mr. Mills is to relinquish his duties today and the new incumbent will at once assume charge.

Mr. Frederick is one of Dunellen's best known residents and at the present time is candidate for mayor of that borough, on the Republican ticket. He has been connected with the U. S. Express Company at the main office in New York for many years and is fully competent to give the Plainfield business men the best of service. Mr. Frederick was the worst injured of the victims in the New Jersey Central wreck at Westfield and only recovered after one of the greatest skin grafting operations known to medical science.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Hallowe'en festivities of approved nature were enjoyed by the borough and village people last night. Parties were held in several houses and the young people were in their element. The usual pranks were played by the boys, and unprotected gates and chairs, not to mention wagons and signs, were shifted without regard to the convenience of their owners. No damage was done, however, and the boys were not more reprehensible than Dunellen and New Market boys have been since Hallowe'en first was observed in this section.

Indications point to a most enthusiastic meeting of the Republican forces in the borough hall tonight. Dr. Crowther, who is to speak, is a forceful and popular campaign orator, and always draws a big crowd. Wilson Frederick, the mayoralty candidate, will probably be one of the other speakers.

Evangelist Chester Birch and his wife, who assists him materially in his gospel campaigns, arrived in the borough today. They will take charge of the evangelistic services tonight, leading the meeting at the Presbyterian church. New hymnals will be used for the music of the revival.

President Cole has issued a call for the first meeting of the Checker Club for this season. It is set for next Tuesday afternoon. If the weather is not chilly enough for a fire the meeting will be postponed to the following Friday.

Mrs. Sarah Perrin, who died Saturday afternoon, was buried at Hillside cemetery, Plainfield, this morning. The funeral service was held last night at 7 o'clock, at her late residence. Rev. S. K. Doolittle conducted the service.

Several young people went to Newark last night to take part in the Hallowe'en carnival festivities. Others, to whom a long night journey did not appeal, went to North Plainfield, where a parade and celebration was held.

The revival service will be held in the Presbyterian church tonight. A large congregation heard the evangelistic service at the Methodist church last night. Rev. Dr. Halleron, presiding elder of the district, preached.

Miss Mary Baldwin has just been through a trying but successful experience in the dentist's chair. She was under the charge of a New York dental surgeon.

The workmen engaged on the new street through the Bird tract are making rapid progress. Mr. Bird has not yet fixed on a name for the thoroughfare.

A Hallowe'en entertainment was held at Friendship Hall by the Farther Lights Society last night. It was well attended and much enjoyed.

The Board of Registry met at the borough hall yesterday from 1 o'clock in the afternoon until 9 o'clock at night.

Albert Grieb, of Brooklyn, has returned home after a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grieb, of North avenue.

Roy Miller, of Tarrytown, N. Y., will spend the week-end with his grandfather, O. M. Hetfield.

Miss Estelle Sofield will be the organist of the revival services at the Baptist church next week.

Van Garretson, of New York, has returned home after a visit to Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Garretson.

The excavation work for the new Ruhl house on South avenue has been completed.

H. S. Garretson has purchased the house on Front street just vacated by Willard Apgar.

John McMahon has returned from a visit to friends in Newark.

W. B. Smith expects to move to Caldwell this week.

Arvid Johnson is recovering from his recent illness.

UNHAPPINESS DISPELLED.

Men and Women Unanimous About It.

Many women weep and wail and refuse to be comforted because their once magnificent tresses have become thin and faded. Many men incline to profanity because the flies bite through the thin thatch on their craniums. It will be good news to the miserable of both sexes, to learn that Newbro's Herpicide has been placed upon the market. This is the new scalp germicide and antiseptic that acts by destroying the germ or microbe that is the underlying cause of all hair destruction. Herpicide is a new preparation, made after a new formula on an entirely new principle. Anyone who has tried it will testify as to its worth. Try it yourself and be convinced. PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Some of the town's people were out this morning exchanging gates and door mats with their neighbors, as last night was Hallowe'en and of course the small boy had to have his fun and among some one. After the work of removing loose gates, etc., had been accomplished flour and corn throwing was indulged in and woe unto the wayfarer who lost his temper as it only made things worse.

Several new names were added to the registry list at the Board's meeting held yesterday in the town rooms. This year's registry is the largest the township has ever had.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Clark and family, who have been residing at Finderne for some time past, will spend the winter with Mr. Clark's parents.

The Ladies' Circle, of the Baptist church, hold a cake, candy and apron sale tonight in the church parlors.

A party of young people from here attended a Hallowe'en dance held last night at Berkeley Heights.

Mrs. George L. Dunn and daughter, Miss Ruth, have returned from a visit with Newark friends.

Mrs. Mary Darby, of Plainfield, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. John R. Marsh.

North Plainfield's celebration last night was taken in by many from here.

Miss Edith Marsh has been entertaining out of town friends.

Investigating Committee Appointed.

At the meeting of the executive committee of the New Jersey State Exempt Firemen's Association, held in Newark on Saturday, a committee comprising the president, D. W. Littell, E. T. Humphrey, Secretary-Treasurer Edward Spittell, chairman of the executive committee, and two other members were appointed to complete the investigation into the affairs of Peter J. Murray, former secretary and treasurer.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Todd, of East Third street, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haberle, of West Front street, are home from a trip to Niagara Falls.

KIDNAPPED GIRL ONCE MORE WITH HER MOTHER

DAUGHTER OF DR. AND MRS. MILLER, CALIFON, HOME AGAIN.

Califon, Nov. 1.—The mystery surrounding the kidnapping of Clara Miller, thirteen years old, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Miller, of this place, which occurred last Friday while the child was attending the public school in Bedminster township, near Lamington, was solved Saturday afternoon when Dr. Miller drove in town with the child and left her at the home of his brother, Charles Miller.

Dr. Miller left town with horse and carriage last Thursday afternoon. Previous to his departure, it is reported, he approached one or two friends and solicited their assistance in his efforts to obtain the possession of his daughter, which was refused. Unable to obtain assistance here he drove to German Valley, then to Mendham, where he remained all night with his sister, Mrs. John Apgar, who accompanied him Friday to Lamington, it is said, where he succeeded in getting possession of his daughter. They took the child to Mendham, remained Friday night at the Apgar home and returned here Saturday.

On his return the doctor immediately sought an interview with his wife relative to the possession of the child and domestic matters. According to representations, the doctor declared that if Mrs. Miller would return home and perform the regular household duties, the daughter would be brought home. The matter was amicably adjusted, the child returned to its mother and Dr. and Mrs. Miller are again living as husband and wife.

FEEL EVERY CHANGE OF THE WEATHER.

A Bad Back is Always Worse During Wet or Changeable Weather.

Is your back like a barometer?
Does it foretell every change of weather?
Does every cold settle on your kidneys?
Bring aching, throbbing pains?
The kidneys are calling for help.
Use Doan's Kidney Pills,
Guaranteed by Plainfield testimony.

John H. Stewart, carpenter, of 413 New street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Last winter I suffered with severe pains across my kidneys and what is more commonly called backache. When my back hurt the worst cold sweat stood out on me, and if I caught cold it always settled on my kidneys. I got so bad with these troubles that I had to quit work, but though I doctored faithfully, no medicine struck the right spot until I began using Doan'e Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph's pharmacy. I took in all three boxes and they stopped my many aches and pains and regulated the action of the kidneys. Since taking them I have worked steadily, without any ill effect on the action of the kidneys."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

John J. Leahy, the Richmond street plumber, guarantees his work and his charges are reasonable.

Putnam & DeGraw are showing a superior line of dry goods, men's furnishings, laces and embroideries.

For superior carpentering work consult Ralph Bullman, of Grandview avenue. He will furnish estimates for the asking.

If you have not secured your winter hat and furnishings stop at O. M. Dunham's store in Park avenue and make your selections.

Besides serving the best meal in the city, Timbo, of North avenue, handles the best grade of cigars and all the well-known tobaccos.

When you want legal papers drawn correctly or in fact any legal work attended to, call on F. J. Huff, Esq., of West Front street.

Worth & Marsh, the Somerset street hardware dealers, make a specialty of stoves, either for kitchen or parlor. Better see their line before buying.

W. W. Dunn's wagons deliver groceries to any part of the city or borough and orders sent by telephone will receive prompt attention. His prices are as low as the lowest.

James R. Blair, who conducts the "Town Toggery" on Park avenue, maintains one of the best lines of men's furnishings to be found outside the metropolis. He is agent for the celebrated Hawes hats that are the standard the world over.

Smalley Brothers exercise great care in selecting their meats and poultry. They have been in business for many years and it has always been their aim to please customers. Their Jersey sausage has become famous throughout the State.

Shirley & Johnson, whose store is at Madison avenue and West Front street, deal in carpets, shades, mattings, curtains and fixtures. When you are in need of any of these visit their establishment and see their superior display. They also make, repair and rent awnings.

L. W. Randolph has spared no expense in making his pharmacy modern and up-to-date and his recent improvements are the admiration of the town. He is better able than ever to serve customers with the best drugs, medicines and toilet articles. A special drive is being made on his benzoin witch hazel soap.

Agent Hayes has returned to the Grant Avenue station of the New Jersey Central, after being detained at home by illness.

TO LOSE MONEY
is a simple matter. It's just as simple to lose it in buying clothes as in any other way. But the fact that Watson's customers come back year after year is pretty good proof that they are not losing money—pretty good proof that they find Watson's clothes a well-paying investment.

Perhaps you've heard what a knack Watson's tailors have in designing, cutting and fitting suits; but—it's more than a knack; it's science; it isn't luck—it's a care.

Suppose you come in before the colder weather nips you and see how well Watson's way in making suits will suit you. The wide choice of material will help—Tweeds, Cheviots, Worsteds, Cassimeres,—in blacks, blues and popular grays, with some fancy mixtures added.

$10 to $25.

And a fancy vest—it will give variety that'll simply seem to double your visible stock of clothing. We have them to please the swellest and the quietest. All at Watson's prices.

$2 to $4.50.

Plainfield, N. J., November 1, 1905.

Quite a contrast is shown between the business sections of the city and borough today, and one that does not reflect very creditably on Plainfield. The streets are sprinkled "across the brook," especially on windy days, whether it be summer or winter. Come, come, Mr. Wilson, and do something.

It having been repeatedly claimed that the influence of The Daily Press has contributed in a great measure towards the political success of Mayor Smalley, it was determined, at the outset of the present campaign, to take no part in the contest, feeling confident that the voters of North Plainfield would decide the issue solely on its merits. This has not been because we have lost any faith in Mayor Smalley. We still believe in what has been said in these columns time and again—that Newton B. Smalley is the best mayor North Plainfield ever had. He now stands before the voters as a candidate for a fourth consecutive term. Opposing him is William J. Conroy, who in addition to being the Democratic nominee is the choice of the Citizens' party. This organization is composed of men irrespective of party who believe that the best interests of the borough demand the retirement of Smalley and his friends. That they are sincere in their belief is not to be doubted. Whether their cause is just it is up to the people to decide. On several occasions, we have found reason to criticize the administration of affairs. Whatever mistakes the Mayor, himself, has made we firmly believe were not with any intention of not doing his full duty. His motives have been good so far as we can see, although the independents take an opposite view. The independent movement against him is founded on the arugment that his official acts have been wrongful and that he is not a fit man to be at the head of the government. The people have read the speeches of those for and those against him as reported impartially, in these columns. And now it is up to the voters to decide the issue.

PERSONAL.

B. S. Christy, of Richmond street, is confined to the house by rheumatism.

Miss Essie Suffern, of Sycamore avenue, is the guest of Chicago friends.

Mrs. F. W. Runyon, of Madison avenue, who has been quite ill for some time, is improving slowly.

Peter Garretson, of Clinton avenue, who fell several weeks ago and sustained severe injuries, is improving slowly.

Mrs. Fred Ellis and Miss Bernice Cottrell, of Alfred, N. Y., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Homan, of the New Madison.

L. B. Woolston, of the firm of Woolston & Buckle, who has been very ill at his home in Fairview avenue, is slowly improving.

Peter O'Connors, of Westfield, who lost a leg by stealing a ride on a New Jersey Central coal train, is still at the hospital. He hopes to return home soon.

George Johnston, of Scotch Plains, for many years employed in the office of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company, New York, has resigned his position.

Charles S. Lee, general passenger agent of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, who has been living here for some time, has moved to New York for the winter months.

POLITICAL NOTICE.

A GOOD RECORD

The Newark Evening News Endorses the Candidacy of Ernest R. Ackerman For State Senator.

Mr. Ackerman's Good Record.

In view of the peaceful condition of politics in Union county, which is Republican by about 2,000 majority when the factions in that party bury the hatchet, the man most likely to succeed Judge Cross as Senator is Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield. There is therefore much interest in him, even outside of Union, not only because he follows in the footsteps of a statesman of high order, and of eminent success, but because the issues coming before the next Legislature will require the most careful and intelligent treatment at the hands of capable and conscientious legislators.

Happily there is no room for questions as to Mr. Ackerman's integrity, ability or political experience. In these respects he stands unchallenged, even by his political opponents, one of his open supporters in his own home city being George S. Clay, formerly president of the Parker Independent Club, who declares that Mr. Ackerman's acceptance of the office is "a distinct gain for the side of good morals and honesty in politics," and that if every legislator selected this fall were of the same high character "a new era would begin and 'graft' and self-seeking be unknown."

But the inquiry that is uppermost in the popular mind is, How does Mr. Ackerman stand on the question of limited franchises? Will he be as independent as was Judge Cross? Does he appreicate this issue as one of great importance? Fortunately, Mr. Ackerman has made a record on this question. When he was a member of the Plainfield City Council in 1891 the company which is now a constituent element of the Public Service Corporation applied to the Council for a franchise to operate an electric street railway in that city. What the company demanded was, of course, a perpetual franchise. This was fourteen years ago, before the corporations had gotten all cities by the throat as they now have, and before the people understood and appreciated, as they now do, the value of the privileges they were giving away for nothing and for all time.

Fourteen years ago, when everybody seemed to think that perpetual franchises were to be granted as a matter of course, Ernest R. Ackerman stood up in the Plainfield Council and opposed, with all the argument he could command, the giving away of franchises for nothing and in perpetuity. "We are considering the advisability," he said, "of doing something that is to last, not for a day, a month or a year, but, by granting a franchise, we set in motion forces the consequence of which we may be compelled to submit to for many years to come." Even at that time he favored the granting of franchises only after they had been submitted to the people by referendum.

The ordinance was passed notwithstanding his opposition, but in the fourteen years that have intervened Mr. Ackerman has seen a marvelous awakening of the people on this question of perpetual franchises, and nothing he has seen has weakened the convictions he ably maintained in the Plainfield Council fourteen years ago. If his own city had taken his advice it would now be in condition to dictate to the trolley corporation instead of being dictated to. His record is his platform.—Newark Evening News.

No Pledges in Private.

The Plainfield Courier-News very properly reminds the voters in Union county that Ernest R. Ackerman, the Republican candidate, if elected State senator, he will assume that position untrammeled by private pledge of any kind.

In the performance of his duties as State senator Mr. Ackerman will be guided entirely by his own conscientious judgment of what is right and just for the people of Union county. He did not seek the honor of a nomination. On the contrary, he was urged to allow his name to be used in that connection. As the first promise to becoming a candidate he made it plain, very plain, that if elected he would hold himself responsible to no political leader or leaders, no corporation or set of corporations; not a promise, implied or otherwise, has he made, or will make, that will serve to embarrass him as a legislator bent on doing his plain duty to the people, fairly and squarely, open and above board in every detail of the work which will devolve upon him in the Upper House at Trenton.

The trend of events in New Jersey indicates that legislation of the greatest importance is to be enacted during the term of the senator to be elected this fall. With this prospect in view a man of Mr. Ackerman's calibre is needed to represent Union county in the Senate.

Mr. Ackerman says—and everyone who knows him believes it—that if his election depended upon one vote, and the casting of that vote in his favor depended upon a private pledge of any sort, he would elect himself to remain a private citizen. That is the kind of a man Union county wants to represent her as a successor to Joseph Cross. The voters of Union county may rest assured that if elected Mr. Ackerman will have no promises to redeem other than the plain, honest pledge of trying to serve them loyally and intelligently along such lines of action as public opinion and a clear conscience warrants.

THE FORUM.

This is for Wilson—That's All.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I will gladly pay the chairman of the street committee a fair day's wages if he will stand on the corner of Park and North avenues and take the dust blowing today. Offer good any day, until freezing weather, when there is a fair wind and no street sprinkling.

A. E. HOAGLAND.

Why Delay Street Work?

Editor, The Daily Press:—

Knowing of the interest which your valued paper takes in the welfare of the public, I beg through your columns to call the attention of the tax-payers to a small job of macadam paving which was started early last spring, and which lays today less than half completed. The street to which I refer is Monroe avenue from Fourth to Seventh streets, and upon making inquiry as to the cause of the delay, I am informed that the contractor is holding up the job on account of not being able to obtain slag which is being used for the bottom layer.

The last work was done on this avenue in June or July, and it seems to me that instead of fighting among themselves like a lot of school children, that it is up to our Common Council to take this matter up at once and see that the contract is properly completed before winter sets in.

In rainy weather, people who patronize the Fourth street line of cars are forced to wade in mud over the shoe tops if they wish to alight at any point between the streets mentioned. One of the members of the Council resides on this avenue, but their Honorable body is undoubtedly too much occupied with other things to give such a trivial matter as the welfare of the public any of their valuable attention at the present writing.

Respectfully,
SUBSCRIBER.

Indictments Mixed.

Atlantic City, Nov. 1.—William Smith, of Atlantic City, called on yesterday at May's Landing Court to plead to three indictments, proved to the court that he had only been indicted for one of the crimes, that of larceny. Investigation of the jail records proved that the other two charges had been brought against two other men of the same name, both of whom had been discharged under the belief that no bills had been found against them by the Grand Jury. The police have bench warrant orders to round up the missing William Smiths.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Harvey, of London, England, are parents of a ten-pound boy born recently. Mrs. Harvey was formerly Miss Minnie Wood, of Franklin place.

Miss Wildey, superintendent of Muhlenberg Hospital, who has been away on a vacation, is expected home soon. During her absence the position has been filled by Miss Venner, the assistant.

WORKMAN KILLED.

Elizabeth Man Mangled by Centrain Train.

While on his way to work at the Singer Sewing Machine Works, John Trafton, an old employe of the company, was run over and killed yesterday at the Spring Street station of the Jersey Central by the special train from Elizabeth that conveys Singer employes to the plant.

The train was just pulling into the station when the man accidentally stepped in front of the locomotive. The engine and three cars passed over Trafton's body.

His legs were cut off and he was otherwise mangled. He expired in a few minutes. The body was taken to Martin's morgue. The occurrence happened in full view of hundreds of people.

Captain Trafton was an old sailor and had charge of a vessel which for several years was engaged in the whaling business. He was a native of New Bedford, Mass., and cruised all ove rthe world. He was a Civil War veteran and during that great conflict served both in the Union army and the navy. Besides his widow he is survived by grown-up sons and daughters. The dead veteran's wife is a lineal descendant of the Borrows family, which came over in the Mayflower. The Trafton family came to Elizabeth from Perth Amboy.

AMUSEMENTS.

It has been years since a play has been produced in which dogs have taken parts so that the mere announcement that "The Way of the Transgressor," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night and which has a large group of thespians in the cast, will be welcome news for those looking for novelty. The magnificent Landseer dogs who play parts with the play and will do this in such an artistic manner that they will surely win the applause of every audience. These dogs were educated and developed by William T. Stephens and it is safe to say that no dogs ever approached them in intelligence. They seem to act as if endowed with a human brain and perform feats without word of command. The play, while it has dogs as heroes, is not simply a vehicle to show their talents. It is a stirring and interesting story of life, full of unexpected situations, dramatic climaxes and clever comedy features. Special attention has been paid to the scenic equipment and the whole production will be one of the biggest of the year.

Sadie Connolly, who plays a rollicking Irish character in "Shadows of a Great City," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, is one of the best portrayers of the Celtic race on the American stage. Her characterization is of that clean, wholesome nature such as we all like to see and she keeps the audience in a roar of laughter all the time she is on the stage. The production itself is a marvel in realism. Forty thousand gallons of real water will be used in the beautiful river scene.

Miss Sophia Brandt, who is to be heard in the comic opera, "A Madcap Princess," at the New Plainfield theatre Tuesday, matinee and night, is not only a beautiful young woman but a singer whose voice is powerful and sweet. She has been heard before as the widow in "The Prince of Pilsen" and in "The Princess Chic," and they say that those who hear her in "A Madcap Princess" will sit up and take notice that the new American prima donna has arrived. Some of the titles of the songs she will sing are, "The Little Words," "Happy Island," "I'm Called the Madcap Princess," "Two Love Letters," "Should I Greet Him?" and a rousing march song sung as a cavalier with plumed hat and sword. Supporting Miss Brandt is a company of singers and comedians numbering sixty. The opera is presented with three acts of beautiful scenery and costumes.

Undoubtedly one of the most important engagements of the entire season will be the next appearance of "When We Were Twenty-one" at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday matinee and night. The unmistakable hit this sterling play has made is more impressive than anything the management could say. In view of the fact that many persons will wonder whether or not the forthcoming production of this play will be as good as in the past, we would say that the very manuscript Mr. Nat Goodwin had is being used by this company and as far as the ability of the company is concerned, they have been selected with the greatest care, no time or expense being spared to obtain only the very best artists and those particularly adopted to play the characters assigned them. The company in fact includes several of its original members.

The production of Maurice Maeterlinck's famous play, "Monna Vanna," by Harrison Grey Fiske, at the Manhattan theatre, New York, and its introduction of Madame Kalich as an English-speaking star under Mr. Fiske's direction, has at once taken rank as the most significant dramatic event in the metropolis this season. Seats are now selling for a month in advance, and there is every indication that "Monna Vanna" will achieve a success here as great as that which marked its production in any of the great cities of Europe, where it has been a dramatic sensation now for some two years. Mr. Fiske's production is udoubtedly the most artistic and beautiful that "Monna Vanna" has yet had, and this first representation of the play on any stage in English will attract the admirers of Maeterlinck as well as the general theatre public. Madame Kalich has won a distinct success in the role of Monna Vanna, and in every way justified the notable reputation she has won in other languages as an actress of fine temperament, great charm of personality, and exceptional dramatic versatility and power. Her advent to the English-speaking theatre is a great addition to the American stage, and it is freely predicted that she will quickly win a very large following among those who love the theatre. The Manhattan theatre, under Mr. Fiske's direction, has been distinguished by many beautiful and elaborate productions, but in "Monna Vanna" is seen undoubtedly the best that Mr. Fiske has yet put forward.

"SCOTTY" INJURED.

Badly Hurt While Racing In An Automobile.

Walter Scott, formerly of Plainfield, the Death Valley miner who a few weeks ago attracted wide notice by a record run in a special train over the Santa Fe Railroad from Los Angeles to Chicago, was perhaps fatally injured in an automobile accident at Los Angeles, Cal., Monday night.

J. Davidson, a newspaper reporter, and Harry Milling, proprietor of a cafe, also were injured in the accident.

The three men were in an automobile which was being driven to Pasadena and return from Los Angeles, Cal., on a wager of $500 that the trip could be made in forty minutes.

On the return journey, while leaving the approach to the wagon bridge at Elysian Park, the tire from one of the rear wheels came off, the wheel was smashed, and the automobile swerved and upset.

Scott and Davidson were thrown against the stone abutment of the bridge. Scott was injured about the head, back and shoulders, and was taken to his home.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Benton thought it over. The guard were to come for him at six, and long ere this had discovered his escape. Pursuit and search would of course be made. "Anybody own bloodhounds around Charlottesville?" he asked, and Hector said "No." Still Dan had gone back, Dan might be lashed and tortured until he revealed what he knew—such things had happened—and the sooner Benton reached the upper waters of the Rappahannock and secure hiding places back of Warrenton, known to Hector, the better it would be for him—for all. He doubted not that by noon couriers would come galloping out from Gordonsville telling of his escape and ordering guards and sentries on the lookout everywhere along the Gap.

"Not a second to lose!" He sprang to the saddle-bags and began a search. What had occurred to him would probably have occurred to her, and it was Miss Rosalie, Dan affirmed, who packed them. With eager hands Benton pulled at the contents of the nearmost—a flask of brandy from the doctor's store, towel, handkerchiefs, sponge, soap, comb and brush, socks, shirt and underwear—Jack's, of course, and probably a tight fit; small tin boxes containing ground coffee, sugar and other things—no time to examine now! Then came a shout from Hector, rummaging on the other side, and over the broad back of Marse Pelham's old Pyramus came a worn gray sack coat and waistcoat, of Richmond make, and pinned to the lapel a scrap of paper on which in pencil appeared in Roman characters, not script, these words: "Map and spectacles in coat pocket. Small pistol also. Look out for federals about Warrenton."

In less than half an hour, a tall, pale-faced, studious-looking young man in spectacles, slouch hat and worn sack coat of gray—thrown loosely over a slung right arm—with a dark-brown horse, a doctor's saddle-bags and a darkey follower on a nondescript nag, turned deliberately from a mountain path and took the highway to the eastward. A few rods further the road twisted to the left and brought him in view of a mountain cabin, where a squad of soldiers in queer-looking frock coats of dingy gray were filling their canteens. Another of their number, sick and dejected, was squatting on the steps, his sallow face the picture of woe. "Gawt any physic that will care the cawlic, dawatuh?" drawled a sun-tanned young fellow in sergeant's stripes, and the doctor reined in, studied the patient attentively one moment, then swung out of saddle and stepped to his side. He gravely felt the pulse and glanced at the coated tongue, fumbled a minute at the saddle-bags, stirred a compound into a stone china cup that stood by the trough—a compound whereof powdered sugar, spring water and spirits vini gallici were the sole ingredients, and in three minutes had the satisfaction of seeing the light of reviving interest in life in the dull eyes of the invalid and receiving the plaudits of half a dozen would-be patients. Gladly would they have held him, though from no hostile intent, as, with apparent serenity yet with thumping heart, he rode away. He had heard enough to make it expedient that he should move at once.

"You're the first dawktuh we've seen since we left home, 'cept those in the army, suh," said the young sergeant. "Guess they need 'em all."

"You're not Virginian, then," hazarded Benton, as he was mounting.

"No, suh—Fifteenth Alabama, Trimble's brigade, suh. We b'long down at Gawd'nsville, but they sent a few companies out this way last night."

"Know any of the Eleventh?" queried Benton, rashly, yet thinking it not unwise to display some knowledge of the southern service—"Lieut. Ladue, of Mobile?" he continued at a venture.

"Not many, suh. They're all with Gen. Longstreet and Anderson down toward Yohktown."

"Lieut. Ladue ain't!" said the sick man, uplifting his sallow face. "He's on Gen. Ewell's staff—made me ride his hawse this mornin' an' he ain't a mile away this minute."

CHAPTER XIV.

THROUGH THE MESH OF THE FOE.

Late that evening two tired steeds were painfully struggling up a stony, winding pathway among the heights at the headwaters of the Hazel. Dodging hamlets and settlements, fording branch after branch of the Rapidan, keeping ever to the wood-path and byways, Fred's black guide at last had landed him in a sheltered nook among the hills, just as darkness settled down.

Then away went Hector to refill the canteen and get such news as he could. It was late, near nine o'clock, when he came back laden—oats for the horses, corn dodgers for their riders and big news for Fred. The Yankees were pushing forward in heavy columns along the Rappahannock, moving perhaps on Culpeper. They could be off at dawn and work eastward until they fell in with the Yankee cavalry that ought to be out on the right flank of McDowell's advance. Hector had a friend who could "baw" a mule and meet them at the ford of the Thornton back of Sperryville, and show a way to the Hedgman. After that if Hector was to go back, Benton would have to shift for himself.

And so, wearied yet refreshed and full of hope, Fred Benton slept until aroused by the din of dogs among the farms below them. It was just at the chill of the earliest dawn. Far down among the scattered settlements there came floating quick, stirring and spirited the soft trumpet notes of the cavalry reveille, played just as he had heard it played four successive mornings on that ambulance journey to the railway. Now, what could this mean but that the squadron had bivouacked far out on their flank, far north, too, of the confederate positions below the Rapidan, and was scouting these mountain by-paths, perhaps in search of him? To Robertson and men of his rank the game might not be worth the candle, but there was that strangely vindictive fellow Lounsberry, armed with power to order hither and yon.

Saves Hard Work

FOR SALE BY—A. M. Griffen, H. E. Gayle Hardware Co., Worth & Marsh and Woodhull & Martin.

NOTICE!

"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

GIRLS AT CORNELL FORM MOSQUITO CLUB

INITIATES COMPELLED TO WEAR BLACK COURT PLASTER INSECT.

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 1.—New Jersey girls at Sage College, the women's hall at Cornell University, emulating the men students from New Jersey, who for along time have been banded together in the New Jersey Club, have recently organized into a society, which they have called the Mosquito Club.

At the club's recent initiation, held in the Sage gymnasium, five New Jersey "freshies" were admitted to the mystic circle of the "Skeeters." Bound and gagged, lest their agonized cries should be heard by the unappreciative, the initiates were led amid an oppressive silence, into a darkened room, where the only light was a smudgy glow of joss sticks. As they passed over the threshold they were thoroughly drenched with citronella and pennyroyal oils for old times' sake.

Suddenly from without the gloom five human mosquitoes, fantastically fitted out with diaphanous wings, darted out and circled toward their victims. Meanwhile the rest of the members of the club kept up an ominous buzzing, gradually increasing in intensity as the mosquitoes approached their prey. Citronella and pennyroyal did not frighten away these human mosquitoes in the least, but as they lit down upon the "freshies" instead of stinging them as the sophisticated Jersey mosquito does, they affixed on their foreheads, with much solemnity, the great seal of the order—an enormous black mosquito, cut from court plaster.

Under penalty of expulsion the initiates were enjoined to keep these mysterious emblems on their brows for three whole days. The ceremony of initiation over, they were unbound and escorted to a sumptuous repast.

The initiates were marked women on the campus for the next three days.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

In the semi-final play for the Mumford handicap cup between Miss Maud VanBoskerck and Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers on Friday, the contestants did not play the full eighteen holes, the match ending at the sixteenth hole, when Miss VanBoskerck was the winner by 3 up and 2 to play. That the contestants were playing very close, is shown by the fact that in going out Miss VanBoskerck was only beaten by one stroke, she making the first nine holes in 46, while Mrs. Rogers took 45. On the second nine holes Mrs. Rogers made a 48 and Miss VanBoskerck a 45. Mrs. Rogers allowed Miss VanBoskerck one stroke on the first, fourth, fifth, seventh, ninth, eleventh, fourteenth and sixteenth holes. Judging by the play it was even golf throughout. In the final play on Saturday Miss VanBoskerck defeated Miss Edith Tracy by 3 up and 2 to play.

DIAMOND DUST.

Reports are in circulation that "Christy" Mathewson is going on the stage, but they lack confirmation.

The Hoboken Club has finished the season, its last game being with the Royal Giants a wee kago last Sunday.

Reports seem to confirm the statement that "Cy" Seymour, the fast fielder of the Cincinnati team, is to play with the New York Giants next season and that Roger Bresnahan will go to Cincinnati. McGraw has been trying for a long time to secure Seymour, for he believes him to be one of the best fielders and batsmen in the game. He will probably use him in left field in place of Mertes.

FOOTBALL.

Leal's School football team will meet the North Plainfield High School eleven this afternoon, and on Saturday Leal's School eleven will play Newark Academy at Newark.

The Plainfield High School eleven will play Westfield High School on the local gridiron Saturday. This should be a fine game, as the Westfield team has been playing a fast game, while the P. H. S. is exceptionally strong this year.

HEALTH BOARD MEETING.

Has Received No Report From Trenton Anent Diseased Pork.

Although it has been several weeks since the officers of the Board of Health submitted a piece of diseased pork to the State Board of Health asking for an analysis of the same, no word has as yet been received from Trenton. It is said that Health Officer Thurlow has written two or three letters concerning the matter but no answer has been received from them and the health authorities do not know how to account for the delay.

The matter was one that called for quick action. A local butcher discovered that some pork he purchased from a farmer was diseased, and he promptly reported it to the Board of Health. The remainder of the pork was buried and steps taken to prevent the further sale of such meat in this city. Immediately a piece of the pork was sent to Trenton, but as stated no report on it has been received. Since then Health Inspector Addis has been busy making inspections of the local butcher shops in an effort to see that the standard quality of meat is sold.

No Hallowe'en Arrests.

No arrests came from the Hallowe'en merrymaking on the streets. The cops were sent out at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and hour and a half earlier than usual, to see that the boys did not carry off too many loose sections of residences and business places, but no exercise of authority excepting the "move-on" mandate was necessary. The only prisoner in court this morning was James Fitzgerald, a drunk case. He was released under suspended sentence.

The Republican "Parade."

In the advertising columns of today's Daily Press, Edwin S. Hooley calls the attention of the borough voters to the fact that the Republican "parade" will be held on Tuesday, November 7. "And," adds Mr. Hooley significantly, "no masks or disguises will be worn; you will be able to see just who is in it."

HALLOWE'EN AMUSEMENT

their number and arranged to come to the house dressed as the different oddities of which Miss DeLany had so often spoken.

Miss DeLany knew nothing of that plan. She thought it was going to be a nice little Hallowe'en party of the usual sort, and dressed in her prettiest clothes to receive the guests. The latter came in body, and Miss DeLany gasped with amazement when she saw them. All her old friends of the Industrial Home, of the slum cottages and rookeries, bobbed engagingly at her. Her's was the only Sunday-go-meeting dress in the gathering.

The little surprise gave a novel turn to the party that added much to its success. The affair was vastly enjoyed.

Among the enjoyable Hallowe'en parties last night was one at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh, of Richmond street, where they entertained twelve guests. The home was appropriately decorated and the several unique ideas were carried out in the arrangement of the table, where jack-o'-lanterns and other symbols of Hallowe'en were used to good effect. Unique favor cards prettily decorated were distributed.

During the early part of the evening there was a five-hand game of euchre. Mrs. Theodore Mantz received first prize for the women and John G. MacLaughlin the first prize for the men, while Harry H. Coward and Mrs. Fred VanEmburgh received the booby prizes. Hallowe'en games wer played afterward and Mrs. Theodore Mantz and Harry H. Coward were awarded prizes. After the playing of games the rest of the evening was passed in a social manner and at a late hour the guests departed for their homes.

The Misses Elizabeth and Hazel Martin, of Marion avenue, entertained forty friends at their home with a Hallowe'en party Monday night. The grounds were prettily decorated with Jack-o'-lanterns and in the house an air of autumn was lent by the use of cornhusks and leaves. Games were played and refreshments of crullers, apples, sweet cider and peanuts were served.

It will be devoted to the manufacture of library and office furniture, of the kind turned out by the Globe-Wernicke Co., of high grade. There is a large field for such products and the company starts in with splendid prospects.

UNUSED BARN DESTROYED.

$200 Blaze Enlivens the Local Hallowe'en Celebration.

Fire broke out mysteriously in an unused barn in the former Ivins lumber yard on Watchung avenue last night, and was all but destroyed. Captain Addis, of the hook and ladder truck, was standing at North and Watchung avenues when he saw the flames shoot in the air and turned in an alarm from box 21. The structure was a mass of flames when the department arrived, but they were put out before reaching any surrounding property. The barn was back of 311 Watchung avenue and inflammable buildings are all about it.

The loss will reach $200, which was about all the barn was worth. Chief Doane could offer no explanation as to the start of the blaze, but the opinion previals that boys might have done it for Hallowe'en fun.

GIFT FOR SHERIFF.

Gold Watch for B. Frank Coriell by Constables and Friends.

Sheriff B. Frank Coriell was pleasantly remembered this morning when the constables of the county, together with a few personal friends, presented him with a handsome gold watch. The presentation was made by Warden Dodd, on behalf of the donors, stating that it was in appreciation of his uniform courtesy and kindness during his entire term of office.

Mr. Coriell made a happy response, thanking one and all for the gift, which he said would always be a reminder of the conscientious and faithful work of the attaches of the court.

The Fays Coming.

Probably what is the most novel entertainment on the stage today is that presented by the Fays, who will next Monday evening begin a week's engagement at the Casino. For the pest three years the Fays have been performing in the West and South an entire new programme, embracing many features never before witnessed, and the principal one of which is their latest and greatest Oriental sensation, "Thaumaturgy," an act so mysterious and wonderful in itself that it cannot be properly described, but must be seen. To add to the evening's entertainment, a large company of refined and very talented artists accompanies the Fays.

—McShane, of the Mills Publishing Company, of New York, will sing several of the Mills' latest publications at the Red Men's fair tonight. Edison's moving pictures and illustrated songs will also be features.

Children's Home Meeting.

CONTRACTOR BLAMED FOR NEGLECTING CITY WORK

Chairman Wilson Says Meeker Has Delayed Macadamizing Street.

HE IS INDIGNANT

Councilman Believes There Should Be More Competition Here—Meeker May Lose Heavily, It Is Said.

As a result of a communication published in last night's Daily Press regarding the failure of the street committee to complete the work of macadam on Monroe avenue between Fourth and Seventh streets, Councilman Theodore D. Wilson, chairman of that committee, puts the blame entirely on C. M. Meeker, the contractor.

"I have exhausted every means at my disposal to compel Mr. Meeker to complete this job, but have been unsuccessful," he declared. "I have consulted Corporation Counsel Marsh thinking that he could suggest some way to bring Mr. Meeker to terms, but I am informed that the only redress the city has in the matter is to charge Mr. Meeker $10 a day for every day he fails to work after the expiration of the time limit, which will be on Wednesday, November 15, and you can bet that this will be done, if Mr. Meeker fails to keep his contract.

"Mr. Meeker claims that he has been unable to secure slag and help, which I know to be absolutely untrue. There is plenty of slag to be had at the Bond Machine Tool Works and as for labor, he can get plenty of men to finish the job. Mr. Meeker has acted totally indifferent to my appeals asking him to finish the work, and I am simply helpless to do anything more. But as soon as the time limit is up on the contract the ordinance will be enforced to the letter in case the work is not completed then.

"In the light of recent events I am more convinced than ever that more competition for city work would be the best thing for Plainfield and would result in work being done promptly and at low prices. Mr. Meeker was the only bidder for this work complying with the provisions of the ordinance, and he practically had things his own way, which fact he seems to realize fully."

Mr. Meeker has other street work under contract on Randolph road, Spooner avenue and Lee place. In the case of Monroe avenue, the Common Council gave him an extension of time, but at the present rate he will not complete this job this winter. It is understood that he is also doing private contract work and neglects one for the other as it suits his convenience. At present he has his force of men at work on Randolph road.

It is said that one firm controls the output of stone for Plainfield, another for North Plainfield, while Garretson & Gray cover Dunellen and vicinity, and another firm looks after Scotch Plains, Fanwood and vicinity. It is also said that a certain contractor who submitted a bid for some macadamizing work tried to get a price on stone from the members of the trust and that at first it was refused him. Afterward, acting on the advice of a friend, it is alleged, the price was given, but it is understood that it was higher than that quoted to other parties.

There are two Plainfield parties who are thinking seriously of making a bid for city work in the future, and this will make a lively competition, through which the city should greatly benefit.

Those who know conditions say that with a few carts and a small gang of men the work on Monroe avenue between Fourth and Seventh streets can be completed within a short time. However, the street committee declares that in case Mr. Meeker fails to complete the work he has contracted for the city will do the work and have it finished by December 1.

Lecture on the Saviour.

Rev. Phil. Parsons will deliver the third of his course of lectures on the "Life and Times of Jesus," tonight, in the Christian church. The subject will be "The Birth of Jesus and His Influence on Humanity."

—There is no butter in the market to compare with the Rockdale print or creamery. It is guaranteed by Neuman Brothers, who handle it in Plainfield.

—Levy Brothers' store is being transformed into a great bargain bazaar for their big mill end and factory sale which begins Saturday. First 15-minute sale, umbrellas, 15 cents, at 9 o'clock.

FELLED BY AN AUTO; ONLY SLIGHTLY HURT

PUMPTOWN MAN HIT BY A MARTIN MACHINE TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

Stepping from his wagon on Park avenue, near Randolph road, to speak to a friend in another wagon last night, Emil Dembowsky, of Pumptown, was struck by an automobile belonging to the F. L. C. Martin Automobile Company and knocked down. The machine was driven by one of the firm's employes and he hurried Dembowsky to Muhlenberg Hospital. An examination showed his injuries to consist only of contusions and a slight laceration of the right hand. He went to his home after receiving attention.

Dembowsky stepped from behind his carriage directly in front of the auto as it was passing. The chauffeur made every attempt to stop, and had almost succeeded when the man was struck. The auto was on the way to Metuchen to bring a newly married couple to this city, where they were to catch a train.

"LACK OF FUNDS"—WILSON.

Street Committee Head Explains Why Dust Flies.

Despite the fact that the street committee has stopped the street sprinkling for lack of funds, the Public Service Corporation continues to sprinkle along the lines of the trolley in this city. The company is doing this work notwithstanding the fact that according to the ordinance it is only compelled to do so between May 1 and October 1. Contractor Keely put a sprinkler at work in the business section yesterday. He bore the expense himself.

Chairman Wilson, of the Councilmanic street committee, in speaking today of the many complaints about dusty streets, said that the committee is out of funds for this work and cannot continue it. He said that he regretted the condition which confronts the citizens as well as the committee, but he is helpless to act.

When asked whether he didn't think the Common Council would support the committee in an effort to keep the dust down, Mr. Wilson said he had no opinion to offer.

ALLEN JOINS ISSUE.

General Plea of Denial Filed By Craig A. Marsh in Harkins' Suit.

Issue has been joined in the action for $25,000 damages brought by Joseph Harkins against H. Francis Allen, for the alleged alienation of Mrs. Harkins' affections. Craig A. Marsh, counsel for the defendant, has filed a plea of general issue.

The plea denies that Allen "committed any of the wrongs and injuries" charged against him by Harkins, and says that he did not commit any of the charges made. An affidavit is also made by Allen in which he says he "believes he has a just and legal defence" to the said action.

The filing of this plea brings the case to trial and nothing else can be done until the January term of the Union County Circuit Court, at which the case will be tried before Judge Fort and a jury.

Paper on African History.

The unusually large attendance at the meetings of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, is evidence of the marked interest in the year's study of Africa. The large audience yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the church listened to a paper of absorbing interest on "Important Events in African History" by Miss Margaret W. McCutchen. The paper evinced careful research and scholarly skill in the grouping of events. The devotional service, with which the meeting opened, was led by Mrs. DeWitt P. Brokaw, and Current Events in missionary fields were given by Mrs. Samuel St. J. McCutchen.

Death of Mrs. Larson.

BIG PRODUCTIONS COMING

New Plainfield Theatre Gets Placed on the Principal Eastern Circuit.

W. A. BRADY LIKES IT

Recommends the Local Playhouse to New York Managers at Recent Session of the Green Room Club.

Because of the patronage accorded the high class attractions that Manager Counihan has provided Plainfielders his cosy theatre has been selected by the New York producing managers as one of the houses in the Eastern circuit that is to get only the best in the line of straight drama, musical comedy and light opera that is sent on the road. The New Plainfield theatre was recommended to leaders in the business at a session of the Green Room Club a few days ago by William A. Brady, the owner of "Way Down East," "The Marriage of Williame Ashe," and many other notable successes. As a result, the local amusement seeker will have brought directly to his door the plays that hitherto came no nearer than Newark.

Through Mr. Brady's recommendation some of the productions that were immediately booked for early appearance in Plainfield are "The Pit," with Wilton Lackaye and the original New York cast; Robert Mantell, in "Richard III.;" Al Leach and the Three Rosebuds in "Girls Will Be Girls," one of the best musical successes of two seasons; "Little Johnny Jones" and the popular actor-manager-composer, George M. Cohan; Lew Dockstader and his minstrel troupe, including the world famous Neil O'Brien, who was last seen in Plainfield with Al G. Field at Music Hall; "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," the greatest of the Madison Square theatre's recent successes; John Drew in "DeLancy," now playing at the Empire, New York, and many of the best plays controlled by Charles Frohman, Klaw & Erlanger and Liebler & Co.

For next week Manager Counihan has two big productions. On Monday night will be seen "The Redemption of David Corson," the latest play from the pen of Mrs. Lottie Blair Parker, who gave the public "Way Down East" and "Under Southern Skies." It requires a big cast for interpretation and several carloads of scenery. It is said to be even stronger in dramatic merit and striking climaxes than "Way Down East," and additional interest to its local appearance will be lent by the presence of Mrs. Parker, who will come to Plainfield Sunday. She has already seen the stage version, but wanted to witness it again before the New York run commenced.

On Tuesday night the attraction will be the merry musical comedy, "The Madcap Princess," with dainty Sophie Brandt and a company of sixty. This play delighted Broadway for many months and is now in its second season. tI will be one of the largest productions that has yet held the boards at the Plainfield theatre.

RED MEN'S FAIR.

Biggest Crowd of Three Nights In Attendance at Bazaar Last Night.

Large as was the attendance on both the preceding nights, the crowd at the Red Men's fair was even bigger last evening. The hall was a shifting mass of people all evening.

The musical feature was the singing of J. H. McShane, of the Mills Publishing Company, who sang "We'll Be Happy When the Clouds Roll By," and "Good-bye, Sweet Marie." The songs were illustrated.

Moving pictures were thrown on the screen by A. E. Willard. A remarkable group of scenes from the St. Louis Fair were shown. The shadow dance was repeated.

Tonight the singer will be from Jerome Remmick's publishing house. The songs will be illustrated.

A First-rate Attraction.

The public of today likes novelties as well as bargains in business, and certainly a most decided novelty will be presented at the Casino every evening next week commencing on Monday, November 6, when The Fays will make their first appearance in Plainfield and offer a programme of which every feature is a distinct novelty, each of a most pleasing and fascinating nature to the audience.

HIS $2,000 AUTO DESTROYED BY FIRE

J. P. STEVENS' MACHINE CAUGHT FIRE AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

J. P. Stevens' $2,000 touring car was destroyed by fire last night at Scotch Plains. Mr. Stevens himself was attending a meeting of Fanwood Council, R. A., at the time and he had left his machine standing in front of the fire house.

Suddenly a loud report disturbed the session and several of the members, including Mr. Stevens and George Scheelein, rushed to the street to learn the cause. When they reached the sidewalk the auto was enveloped in flames.

The Fanwood fire department was summoned, and through the use of the chemical engine and water the fire was finally extinguished, but not until the machine was practically a total loss. The machine was insured. It is supposed that an overheated axle caused the fire.

APPLIES FOR DIVORCE.

Mrs. Anna Peterson Charges Husband with Deserting Her.

Through her counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, Mrs. Anna Peterson, of this city, has filed a petition for divorce from her husband, Charles Peterson, on the ground of desertion. The couple have been married fifteen years. Mrs. Peterson was Miss Anna Marienscheck. There is one child, Mary, twelve years old.

In the petition Mrs. Peterson recites that she was married in Plainfield on September 8, 1890; that she resided with her husband and that he supported her for two years after their marriage, when he left her and left the State of New Jersey, and has never returned, and she does not know where he is now; and that she has no means of support.

She asks the court to divorce her from her husband and order him to provide for her support and the support of her child.

LOOK FOR BIG MAJORITY

Secretary Newcorn, of the Republican Committee, Estimates It at 1,500.

HE MAY BE WRONG

Another Leader Says He Does Not Think It Can Be so Large Factors in Campaign.

Great expectations are fluttering in the Republican organization's breast. It looks for a majority of 1,500.

Secretary Newcorn made the announcement after a meeting of the city executive committee last night, at which the outlook was discussed. The members canvassed the situation carefully, and the indications gave them great encouragement.

"We will have at least 1,500 majority in Plainfield," said Mr. Newcorn positively. "I cannot seet probability of any less. You may quote this as my cold-blooded calculation."

Mr. Newcorn waved his friends the enemy into outer darkness.

"There is no Democratic party here," he said.

One of the other party leaders, not a member of the committee, but in a position to know perhaps more of the actual conditions in force than even the secretary of the committee himself, shook his head doubtfully when the Newcorn estimate was shown to him.

"I would be glad if that figure might be proved correct," he said, "but I can't see it. Of course, there is no doubt of a majroity and a big one, but I cannot bring myself to believe that we will go down to the city line with 1,500 votes to the good."

Fifteen hundred majority is not a stupedous one for Plainfield Republicans in lively years, but it belongs more to a Presidential year than to an off-election. Not only does general apathy enter into the present campaign, but a certain percentage of the Republicans in revolt against the organization may be expected to ermain away from the polls, for they don't go so far as to vote against the ticket. Another element in the campaign is the natural friendship of the Knights of Columbus for Edward Nugent, the Democratic candidate for Senator.

THEIR OPENING GAME.

P. H. S. Basketball Team Plays Y. M. C. A. Tomorrow.

The Plainfield High School basketball team will play the Y. M. C. A. five at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night. This will be the first game of the season for the High School.

Instructor Leary, of Leal's School, a former member of the Colgate University team, will play for Y. M. C. A., and Smith will probably be in the game again. Capt. Scull, Letson, Utzinger, Thompson, Gavett, Collins and Collier, all good players, are candidates for the team.

FRIENDLY SOCIETY SESSION.

All Parishes in Diocese Represented at Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Girls' Friendly Society of the New Jersey Diocese convened this morning at Grace church, when a service was held at 10:30 o'clock. An address was made at that time by Rev. Charles Fisk, of St. John's church, Somerville. There are about twenty delegates from out of town.

At noon the local branch of the society entertained the delegates and friends at lunch. This afternoon a business meeting of the society will be held in the Parish House, when officers will be elected and other matters considered.

SERIOUS CHARGE MADE IN POLITICAL FIGHT

FALL FROM TROLLEY CAR FRACTURED HIS SKULL

J. R. BOYD HURT LAST FRIDAY IS STILL UNCONCIOUS.

J. R. Boyd, prominently connected with the National Lead Company, of New York, and who, with Mrs. Boyd, had been living at Truell Court for some time, is at Roosevelt Hospital, New York, suffering with a fractured skull. His general condition is reported to be slightly improved although the physicians in charge consider it to be critical.

Mr. Boyd was riding on a Broadway trolley car Friday night about 6 o'clock, when he fell off and struck his head on the pavement. He was picked up unconscious and failed to rally for several hours. Since then he has only been conscious for brief periods.

It cannot be ascertained whether Mr. Boyd was accidentally pushed off the car or whether he slipped and fell off. It was several hours before he was identified and on Saturday morning, Mrs. Boyd's brother came to Plainfield and notified her of the accident and she immediately went to New York. An investigation is now being conducted into the details of the accident.

CAMPAIGN POSTER.

Smalley's Friends Have Gotten Out a Good Card.

Window posters advocating the reelection of Newton B. Smalley as Mayor of North Plainfield have been circulated throughout the borough. They are attractive in design.

In addition to a splendid likeness of the Mayor they contain this statement:

"When Newton B. Smalley was first elected Mayor in 1899, the very first act of his administration was to reduce the salary of corporation counsel from $500 to $350 per year and the salary of borough clerk from $700 to $500 per year.

"During his administration Duer street was opened through from Craig place to Front street. Somerset street was widened from Green brook to Jackson avenue, and storm sewers were laid in that street and elsewhere. Street sprinkling throughout the borough was also introduced. The new engine house was built and the new police station and borough court room fitted up during his administration.

"He has been instrumental in forcing every one of these public improvements in the borough to a successful issue by devoting his personal attention and supervision to the same. Every official act of his while Mayor has been for the public good.

"The new fire headquarters and police station are lasting credits to his administration.

"All of the above mentioned improvements, and many others, were accomplished while at the same time borough tax rate was being lowered.

"A vote for Smalley for Mayor means a vote for progress and further advancement of the borough of North Plainfield to the benefit of its citizens."

PARISH FESTAL SERVICE.

The annual parish festal service of Grace church, which is observed on All Saints' Day, was held last night. Rev. Otis Glazebrook, of Elizabeth, delivered the sermon and Episcopal clergymen from this city and other places were in attendance.

Ivins, on Hillside avenue, on November 9. Other business of a routine character was considered, after which a social time was had and refreshments were served.

All Saints' Day.

Three masses were held at St. Mary's church yesterday morning at 5:30, 7 and 9 o'clock. Father Delehanty was in charge of the first mass, Father Federici the second and Father Bogan the third. Last night at 7:45 o'clock the services were in charge of Father Bogan. Services were also held at St. Joseph's, Father Miller conducting several special masses.

Both Factions in the Borough Accuse Each Other of Illegal Registration.

CITS INVOKE LAW

Have Large Number of Residents Cited to Appear Before County Board of Canvassers.

The strenuousness of the campaign in North Plainfield took another turn today when the regular Republican side declared publicly that three members of the Board of Registry in the Second district had been padding and juggling the lists. It was asserted that over seventy voters of pronounced Smalley proclivities had purposely not been enrolled, yet the total registration was more than sixty over last year. In retaliation, or rather as a direct charge, the Citizens maintain that the administration faction has been illegally registering names and that steps will be taken to call the attention of the proper authorities to this fact.

The registration board in the Second district is made up of L. B. Bodine, Levi Kline and Jacob Higgins, who are in sympathy with the Citizens' movement, and Walter Walker, who leans toward the present administration. In making their canvass of the district they were followed up by William McLaughlin, an administration man, who alleges that he found seventy legal voters who had been skipped. All of them, he claims, are men who regularly attend the Good Government meetings and who would not be likely to vote for Conroy.

McLaughlin went before the Second district Board of Registry Saturday and requested the names of these seventy to be placed on the list. He was made, he alleges, to swear in each one. When the total registration figures were given out it was seen that, excluding the seventy, the number of voters was sixty in excess of last year's list, when President Roosevelt was elected. This is the gist of the Republicans' charges, and in addition they are up in arms on another tack. Today Messrs. Cooley and Webb, of the Cits, served notice on eight colored boroughites that their residence is illegal, and this has given the Smalleyites something else to think about.

After the registration figures were made known yesterday the executive committee of the Citizens' party held a special session in Spencer's Hall last night and carefully considered the list of seventy names presented by McLaughlin. According to one of the committee, twenty of these are illegal, and application will be made to the County Board of Registry to have them stricken off. Many more were marked for challenge at the polls on various grounds.

This same committee member declared to a Daily Press reporter that the methods of the Republicans were outrageous and that the matter of illegal residence would be pushed to the courts.

"Why," said he, "eleven names were given us with the same address on Race street, and when one of our canvassers went to investigate he found that only four made their home there and two of these were doubtful residents. The same state of affairs exists with regard to other of the McLaughlin names, and when it was attempted to serve notice on the men we charge with being illegally registered, not one could be found at the address given."

It was also hinted by the Cits that the registry list would be examined further and that some startling statements might be made at the big mass meeting in Saengerbund Hall Saturday night.

Legal summons was served on a number of registered men, this morning, to appear before the County Board of Canvassers at Somerville, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, to show cause why their names should not be stricken from the registry list. Mayor Smalley will accompany them and he declared today that there would be no trouble in proving the legality of their registration.

"It's the last cry of the vanquished," said the Mayor, "and this latest Citizen move reminds me of the story of the boy that got lost in the woods and started to whistle to keep up his courage."

During the day many friends called to offer congratulations and last night Mr. Duyckinck gave a dinner party in honor of the event. Mr. Duyckinck has been a resident here for years, having until three years ago lived on his handsome country place in Washington Valley. Several years ago he retired from active business and selling his home in the Valley settled with his daughter, Mrs. Julia Mann, in the Cook cottage. Mr. Duyckinck is still active and one to see him would hardly believe he had nearly reached the century mark in life.

The Ladies' Circle, of the Baptist church, held a most successful cake, candy and apron sale last night in the church parlors, the rooms being filled with the friends of the circle, who were out to help swell the receipts. GIVES HER FARM A TO QUAINT SECT

SON WILL CONTEST TRANSFER TO THE PENTECOSTAL UNION OF DENVER.

As the result of her conversion by the missionaries of the Pentecostal sect, who recently have been working in this section, Mrs. Carolina V. Garretson, a member of an old and prominent family of Somerset county, has given away her homestead farm consisting of 81 acres to the Pentecostal Union. With other members of her family she will join the colony of the sect at Denver, Col.

The farm has just been transferred by Mrs. Garretson to the union in the county clerk's office at Somerville. The transfer will be contested by William Garretson, a son of the woman, who has arrived at Somerville from Chicago, and employed a local lawyer to take steps to have the gift annulled on the ground of undue influence.

The missionaries during their sojourn in this section were guests at the Garretson homestead at Weston. They had a series of meetings in the Town Hall, at Bound Brook, at which they indulged in a tirade against the churches and ministers of the town, and used such strong language in condemning persons on the street that they were notified by Recorder Robert S. Brampton to cease or suffer arrest as disorderly persons.

The missionaries, who were composed of both sexes, indulged in dancing and boisterous antics on the platform during their religious services.

PEEKE MUST STAY IN JAIL.

Judge Lanning Dismissed Convict's Appeal.

Trenton, Nov. 2.—Judge William M. Lanning, in the United States District Court dismissed yesterday the petition filed by Scott Scammel, of this city, praying for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of E. C. B. Peeke, who was sentenced to five years in the State Prison in this city for conspiring against the government, by which he was employed as a Secret Service agent.

Mr. Scammel contended that the sentence of five years' imprisonment and $3,000 fine must be regarded as a single sentence, and, therefore, excessive and void.

Judge Lanning said in his opinion, there was nothing to show that the sentence upon the different counts was cumulative and further that no such question could be raised in the matter of habeas corpus until the expiration of the time for which the Court might lawfully impose sentence, and that if the present sentence is void it is only void as to the part of the five years' sentence, which the Court had not the right to impose.

In dismissing the petition, Judge Lanning orders that Peeke be remanded to the custody of the keeper of the State Prison.

GOT HIS HAIR BACK.

Was Perfectly Bald When He Started to Use Newbro's Herpicide.

Frederick Manuell, Maryland block, Butte, Montana, bought a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide, April 6, '99, and began to use it for entire baldness. The hair follicles in his scalp were not dead and in 20 days he had hair all over his head. On July 2 he writes, "and today my hair is as thick and luxuriant as any one could wish." Newbro's Herpicide works on an old principle and with a new discovery—destroy the cause and you remove the effect. Herpicide destroys the germ that causes dandruff, falling hair, and finally baldness, so that with the cause gone the effect cannot remain. Stops falling hair at once and a new growth starts. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Girls' Stylish Outerwear.

We have arranged an unusually attractive array of values in Misses' and Girls' Outergarments. Ours is admittedly the most expensive showing in the state; everything is here from the simplest play dress to the most elaborate party frock. The styles are exclusive and the prices noticeably moderate. For instance:

Warm School Coats—Pretty models in long Zibeline Coats—colorings in brown, blue, red and green—some plain, others neatly trimmed—full back or belted styles—sizes for girls of from 4 to 14 years—extra special value, 3.98

Children's Coats—These splendid coats are made of kersey in several very pretty models—with or without capes—military collars—some trimmed with braid, others plain—new shades—4 to 14 years—$7.00 would be a fair price, we say, 5.98

School Dresses—A fine lot of pretty frocks for school wear. Several new models in cashmeres, serges and cheviots—all of the latest colors—sizes 4 to 14 years. Many stores would ask $5.00 for these dresses—our price, 3.98

WABASH TO RUN OVER LEHIGH VALLEY ROAD

STORY DECLARES IT WILL USE JERSEY CENTRAL ALSO.

Jersey City, Nov. 2.—From an authentic source it was learned here yesterday that the Reading system, in connection with the Wabash, has secured the controlling stock of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and that on or about January 1 next the Wabash will come into New York over the Lehigh Valley Railroad from Buffalo or Roselle or Jersey City, and will use the Central Railroad ferry between Communipaw and New York. It is very probable that the Lehigh Valley will deliver all passenger trains to the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Roselle, where they were delivered some fourteen years ago, and where the two roads still do an interchange business.

This will give the Wabash the shortest route to Chicago and St. Louis via. Buffalo and Detroit. It is also said that at points where the Central Railroad of New Jersey and Lehigh Valleys railroads parallel each other, the stations will be consolidated, thus doing away with the expense of maintaining two stations. The stations that would be consolidated should this plan be put into effect are Jersey City, Newark, Roselle, Bound Brook, Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown and all stations as far West as Wilkesbarre, Pa., where the Central and Lehigh Valley roads parallel each other.

President Baer, of the Reading, and several Central Railroad officials were out on a tour of inspection of the road through South Jersey yesterday. For the past year the Central Railroad Company has been constructing interlocking switchtowers and a block signal system between New York and Scranton, probably in anticipation of this change. It is said that there is a likelihood of a ferry being established on Delaware Bay, between Bay Side, N. J., and Clayton, Del., in the near future, which will be used in establishing a new short line to Washington through South Jersey.

Officials of the Central Railroad here, when asked about the consolidation, refused to discuss it.

MARRYING PARSON STOPS STREET FIGHT

FORCES HIS WAY THROUGH CROWD OF ONLOOKERS AND SEPARATES MEN.

Trenton, Nov. 2.—Rev. Charles H. Elder, the marrying parson of Central New Jersey, used full bodily strength Wednesday night in stopping a street fight.

Near his residence three men engaged in a fight. The streets were crowded with Hallowe'en mummers and the encounter was greatly enjoyed by hundreds who circled around the men. The cries of the men rang out above the din and they attracted the attention of the clergyman.

He fought his way through the ring by main strength and made a terrific charge on the three combatants. He pushed one man and then the other away. Two of the fighters were covered with blood.

The minister's interference broke up the fight and the crowd cheered. Though out of breath the minister administered a kindly rebuke to the fighters, who escaped before a policeman came.

TO INVEST $150,000.

Meeting of Trustees of State School Fund Have that Amount on Hand.

Trenton, Nov. 2.—The trustees of the State school fund, the board comprising Governor Stokes, Secretary of State Dickinson, William J. Bradley, President of the Senate; J. Boyd Avis, Speaker of the Assembly; Attorney-General McCarter, Comptroller Morgan and State Treasurer Briggs, met at the State House yesterday to consider the question of investing $150,000 of school money.

Bids had been received from various financiers to take the amount, and these with rates of interest offered were discussed. Finally, the matter was laid over until Thursday, to give the trustees time to tabulate the offers and decide which would be the most advantageous to the State.

The $150,000 is an accumulation of interest and various payments to the school fund. The report of the comptroller for 1904 showed that the total assets in the school fund amounted to $4,309,880.53.

"Ham" a Practical Politician.

Hamilton Kean, brother of the Senator, who is involved in the Plainfield police scandals, has been gaining prominence of late for his devotion to the very practical side of practical politics. tI is a bit surprising, because he is a man of education and good social training; but over in New York they say that "when a dude goes into politics with the gang, he'll go further than the boss himself." One of Kean's remarks in the Plainfield case was typical of the machine politician. He wanted something for a saloonkeeper and when it was questioned, he wanted to know: "Why don't you stand by your leaders?"—Newark Call.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

A beefsteak dinner "stag" will be given at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday night, November 11.

The weekly competitions for the president's and Park Golf Club cups will be concluded at the Park Golf Club on Election Day.

D. H. Rowland, of the Plainfield Country Club, has been a frequent visitor at the Park Golf Club, where he has been making good scores.

Competition for the T. R. Van Boskerck cup will begin on the course of the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday and continue until the Saturday following Election Day.

FOOTBALL.

Ray Biglow, formerly of this city, now of Yale, continues his good work on the Varsity footfall team.

The Orange Field Club eleven will play the Franklin Football Association on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The local interest in the big college football games each week is constantly increasing, each college having a host of friends in this city. They can scarcely wait until the games are over before they begin to make inquiries about the results.

The manager of the Cranford High School football team has cancelled the game scheduled with Plainfield High School for next week because the local team outweighs them. It is likely that the Somerville game will be played on that date at Somerville.

The P. H. S. team is putting up the best game in recent years. Only once this season has the team been scored against, and that was four points by North Plainfield H. S., while the local team has rolled up nearly a hundred points against its opponents. Great interest is being shown in the game between P. H. S. and Leal's, to be played Election Day morning.

Because several members of the team were injured in a game played on Saturday, Dr. Payson has compelled the Rutgers Prep. football eleven to quit the game for the rest of the season, and all games have been cancelled. The team had a game scheduled here with the Plainfield High School a week from Saturday. Dr. Payson says that it is bad enough for the college men to play the game.

A Big Production.

Owing to the magnitude of the production, "The Madcap Princess," at the New Plainfield theatre, Tuesday night, Manager Counihan has found it impossible to give a matinee. Two carloads of scenery are carried and it cannot be gotten into the house on time. The company will be one of the largest coming to Plainfield this season, numbering sixty people. A special matinee of "The Shadows of a Great City" will be given tomorrow afternoon.

Plainfield, N. J., November 2, 1905.

That Foster M. Voorhees has resigned the presidency of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company is pretty good evidence that there is one insurance company in the world where the head office is no "fat" job.

The report that Senator Kean is assuming the State leadership of his party is rather inopportune. The people do not seem to be following self-appointed leaders this year.—Newark News.

But "money talks" in politics, as out of it.

In a speech in the interests of Jerome's candidacy delivered before the lawyers of New York last night, Joseph Choate, the late ambassador to England, gave a pretty good definition of a political "boss." This is it: "It is a recent word; it is a disagreeable word. It is a vulgar word, but there is no other word to express the vulgar thing to which it is applied. A creature, I should call him, without scruple or conscience, who fills his capacious maw with graft; who feeds his greedy followers upon political garbage gathered from the official fleshpots and swill pails."

While it would be preferable no doubt, at least so far as the accusers are concerned, to have the Kiely investigation conducted by the Common Council, the law vests the authority in the police commission. The action of the latter body in making a demand upon Messrs. Tyler and Bullock, of the councilmanic police committee, to file formal charges, in order that the chief may be given a hearing in due time, is only what should be expected. In doing this they have taken the opinion pronounced by The Daily Press, the resolution passed by the commissioners stating it to be "manifestly unfair both to the chief and the public that this matter be left in its present condition." That the complainants will be given a hearing that their public and private position in the community demands and the nature of the accusations should receive, there is no doubt. How much any fair-minded and honest citizen may be opposed to the commission, he will hesitate to say that Messrs. McCardell, Ivins, Marshall and Andrews will not do their full duty and do it in a satisfactory manner. Both Councilman Tyler and Councilman Bullock, as well as any other witnesses they may present, will be assured of a respectful hearing. As yet the police commission has not stated that the trial will be an open one, but knowing the men, we do not believe for an instant that the investigation will be conducted behind closed doors. It is safe to say that the matter will be sifted out in a straightforward and thorough manner, for if it were otherwise the commissioners would be in disrepute for all time. Let the trial proceed.

THE FORUM.

Senator Childs on Liquor Question.

Editor, The Daily Press:

We think it important to the cause of moral reform, that all citizens who seek fair temperance advancement, should know of the attitude of Senator Childs in such a matter. He has been a friend of legislation looking to the advancement of the cause of temperance. He believes that the principle of "home rule" should obtain in civic and municipal matters. His position is, that any community should have the privilege of deciding as to the presence or absence of the saloon. He has courageously stood as sponsor of just such legislation as will permit the exercise of this simple Democratic prerogative. And because he has done this, there are those who would seek to defeat him at the polls.

It behooves all good citizens to see to it that he be returned to the office for which he stands, and which he has hitherto filled with such signal ability.

To do this, good citizens can for once at least, afford to transgress the usual party lines. Better do this than have it said, a man was defeated for no other reason that that he dared to introduce a temperance measure, when no other could be found willing to take so decided a stand in matters so important to the vital interest of the people.

Some Methodist Visitors.

Eighteen members of a Methodist church at Mariner's Harbor, Staten Island, enjoyed a trolley ride to this city yesterday and were entertained at dinner by Mrs. Winfield Decker, of West End avenue. Mrs. Decker formerly was a member of the Staten Island church and her friends planned to make a visit. Among others present were Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan, of Albert street, and Rev. George Mooney, pastor of the Monroe Avenue Methodist church, both of whom were pastors of the church at Mariner's Harbor several years ago. After dinner the afternoon was spent in a social manner.

MR. MURRAY'S WORKS ARE IN USE IN CHINA

BIBLE SCHOLAR'S PUBLICATIONS STUDIED IN MISSION SCHOOLS.

The great advantage of William D. Murray's religious publications is shown in their use in the Young Men's Christian Associations of China. Their adaptibility in increasing the study in the Bible is attested to by D. Willard Lyon, one of the Y. M. C. A. secretaries in China, who has written the following letter to Mr. Murray:

September 25, 1905.

William D. Murray, Esq.,
3 West 29th St., New York.

My dear Mr. Murray:

These annual whiffs from Northfield always do me a lot of good. I wish I could have been with you this year to have heard the men you mention, ande specially to have seen the Bible class work. The great progress which is being made in Bible study lines in America is certainly a matter for profound thankfulness. At our three summer conferences, at Hangchow, Weihsien and Foochow, this year Bible study has been given a leading place. In both Hangchow and Foochow one of the classes was led by Chinese. Prof. Ding Ming Uong, who was our delegate to the W. S. C. F. several years ago in America, made a strong leader in Foochow; and Prof. H. L. Zia, of the Anglo-Chinese College, Shanghai, did splendid service in this line at Hangchow. You will be interested to know that Prof. Zia is now translating for "China's Young Men" your "Studies in the Minor Prophets." He sasy he finds them very well adapted to our purpose. Your "Studies in the Life of Jesus according to St. Mark," which I translated and adapted about two years ago appeared in book form last autumn. We have already exhausted the first edition of one thousand copies, and the second edition of the same size is half gone. You will be interested to know that in Boone High School at Wuchang your "Studies in Mark" have been introduced into the curriculum, and last year's class used about twenty-five copies of the English edition. The Chinese edition has been re-translated into the Ningpo colloquial, where it was used for a year in the Sunday-schools of the Presbyterian Mission. Some months ago a request from some of the missionaries at Amoy came, asking for permission to translate the Chinese edition into the Amoy colloquial. We, of course, gave them the permission; whether the book has been issued as yet I do not know. Gillett is also having the book translated into Korean. On April 13th last, Rev. A. E. Cory, of the Christian Mission, Nanking, wrote as follows regarding these studies: "I have used "Studies in Mark' in the Institute and in regular night work with the whole school, and find it one of the best outline courses of study, and most workable." The Institute to which he refers was a special Bible Institute, attended by delegates from all parts of their central China Mission.

Our programme for the coming year provides for a considerable enlargement in Bible study literature. I hope we may be able to carry out this programme.

With kind regards, I am,
Yours very sincerely,
D. WILLARD LYON.

LEAL'S SCHOOL 6; BOROUGH PUBLIC 0

PRIVATE ACADEMY BOYS PLAY SUPERIOR GAME.

The football game between the elevens from Leals and the North Plainfield High School played on the Cricket Grounds in the borough, yesterday afternoon, with an exciting contest throughout and the fact that the borough school team was only defeated by a score of 6 to 0, shows that they did good work in holding their opponents down.

Leals' team did not display quite the usual snap that has characterized their play this season and in the second half there was considerable fumbling on their part. The team was a little slow at times, and in fact did not make as good a showing against their opponents that they hoped they would.

Owing to the injuries of the regular men the N. P. H. S. was obliged to use four scrub players, McClintock, Kenney, Smith and Dunning, and while they did good work, the absence of the regular men weakened the team. It is doubtful is the regular men will be able to play again this season.

The first half opened by Leals kicking off to N. P. H. S., and the former held their opponents for downs. Dallas took the ball over the line and then kicked the goal, the only scoring in the game. The second half was marked by considerable fumbling. It opened by Leals kicking to N. P. H. S., and throughout that half the borough school boys made their opponents play very hard to prevent them from scoring. The game was witnessed by a large crowd of enthusiasts, including many of the fair sex. The lineup:

Leals.	N. P. H. S.
Haughey	Powlison

Eoff	Fisher
right guard.
Rushmore, Rhodes	Day, Kenney

Rushmore	VanArsdale

Umpire—Roy Phillips. Referee—Mr. Heicker. Time of halves—20 and 15. Score—First half—Leals, 6; N. P. H. S., 0. Second half—Leals, 0; N. P. H. S., 0. Final score—Leals, 6; N. P. H. S., 0.

POINTS ABOUT PEOPLE.

John A. Merritt, the present postmaster of the nation's capital, was in early life a farmer, and before studying law worked in a grocery store.

Professor Theodore A. Schurr, who has just died in Baltimore, was a pioneer in the crusade against killing birds for hat ornaments.

Miguel Antony, a murderer under sentence of death in San Quentin State prison, California, feigned insanity, but was cured by a cold bath every time he manifested symptoms.

An interesting woman who has been giving talks about her work in London drawingrooms is Miss Annie R. Taylor, who for the last eight years has been endeavoring to do missionary work in Thibet. She has supported herself by living as a trader, and while selling cloth and medicine and hardware in her little store she has bee nable to distribute books widely through the country and numbers of the Thibetan chiefs have been glad to receive them.

Famous People in Jersey.

The news that Charles Dana Gibson, the famous illustrator, has sold his city dwelling recalls to mind the fact that the world of art and literature are well represented in the suburbs. The brain worker, whatever his vocation, requires quiet surroundings, and quietness is a thing difficult to obtain in a city that boasts of four million inhabitants. Among authors Amelia E. Barr, Julian Hawthorne, Robert W. Chambers, Tudor Jenks, Henry Loomis Nelson, Ruth McEnery Stuart, and many others are suburbanites. Lawrence Hutton, Edward W. Townsend, the creator of "Chimmie Fadden;" Myra Kelly, author of "Little Citizens;" H. M. Alden, the editor of Harper's Magazine; Hamilton W. Mabie, editor of The Outlook, and Carolyn Wells, whose humorous verses are familiar to magazine readers, are all residents of New Jersey suburban towns. Edwin Markham, author of "The Man With the Hoe" and other poems, lives in the suburbs, as do also William Winter, dramatic critic of the New York Tribune; John Burroughs, the naturalist, and Edith M. Thomas and Clinton Scollard, the poets. Among artists the names of Remington, Zogbaum, Christie and Kemble occur as among the many who prefer suburban homes to city residences. Clara Morris, Francis Wilson and others well known to theatregoers are also members of the great and increasing army of suburbanites.—The Suburbanite.

SOMERVILLE OUTPLAYED BY THE P.H.S BOYS

LOCAL TEAM ROLLED UP 12 POINTS WHILE VISITORS DO NO SCORING.

The Plainfield High School eleven lined up against the Somerville High School on Hope Common yesterday afternoon in one of the best games since the P. H. S.-Leal contest. Both teams were very evenly matched, especially in weight, and the playing was fast throughout the entire game.

Somerville won the toss and Douglass kicked to the visitors. The ball sallied up and down the field throughout the first half. The nearest the home team came to scoring was the twenty-five yard line, which was reached on a long run by Mahaffey. During this half Somerville could get no nearer the home team's goal than the middle of the field.

After five minutes' intermission the second half was started, Somerville kicking to P. H. S. The locals started off with a rush, and by long runs by Douglass and Mahaffey the former was finally pushed through a tackle for a touchdown after five minutes of play. Flanders kicked a neat goal. Douglass then kicked to Somerville, and the visitors were soon held for downs near their own goal. Loizeaux again made a long run and this time on a double pass scored a touchdown. Flanders then kicked a difficult goal. This made the score 12 to 0, no further scoring being done during the half. After this the ball kept surging up and down the field, changing hands often. When time was called for the second half Somerville held the ball thirty-five yards distant from the local team's goal, the nearest they came to scoring.

The best work for the local team was done by Douglass, Loizeaux and Mahaffey, the last named showing spirited action, figuring in every play, proving a good tackler and running with the ball well. Flanders at quarter showed good judgment in mixing up his plays.

For the visitors Edwards and Ryther did good work, the latter making a twenty yard run around end for his team, the longest run on his side. tI is probable that another game will be arranged with the Somerville team at Somerville, as the visitors are desirous of having another chance to redeem themselves. The lineup:

P. H. S.	S. H. S.
Leggett	Haberle
center.
Gideon Fountain	Trembath
right guard.
Todd	Sisser
right tackle.
Loizeaux	Timmins
right end.
Osgood, Mosher	Myers left guard.
Rittenhouse, Guyon Fountain	Noll
left tackle.
Mahaffey	Brokaw
left end.
Flanders	Hickey
quarterback.
Lyness	Ryther
right half.
Douglass	Edwards
left half.
S. Freeman	Hoagland
fullback.

Umpire—Mosher. Referee—Brokaw. Linesmen—Grimes and Titsworth. Timers—Nevisu and Burr. Time of halves—15 minutes. Touchdowns—Douglass and Loizeaux. Goals from touchdowns—Flanders, 2. Score—First half, P. H. S., 0; Somerville, 0; second half—P. H. S., 12; Somerville, 0. Final score—P. H. S., 12; Somerville, 0.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

You can't spend any time hating people if you want to go forward.

After a man has worked hard to get a thing he has to fight hard to keep it.

No one loves a crying baby, and the same is true of people who are grown up.

While your friends promise you big things, the "if" they put in the promise is bigger.

All your troubles are exaggerated, including the uneasiness that conscience causes.

When friends urge you to come and see them "any time" it requires some figuring to find out just when that time is.

Decisions after mature reflections are so often wrong that greater respect should be paid the decisions of a penny coming down heads of tails.—Atchison Globe.

TO AVOID COLDS.

One must give proper attention to her dress. That is, clothe herself according to the weather.

In some climes where the weather is fickle it is hard to keep prepared for the sudden changes. A reliable thermometer is necessary to a well regulated living room.

If people are in a natural state of health they should find 68 degrees comfortable and healthful. Those who are moving about and active are not in a position to judge for the inactive. One may be overheated while the other is not sufficiently warm.

The thermometer should always hang in the coolest spot in the room.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

JAPANESE WOMEN MODERN.

Tourists in Japan find that gentlewomen in Nippon differ very slightly in their home customs from the gentlewomen of England, writes Helen Adair, in the Boudoir. So quickly have they krown accustomed to Western ideas, so closely have they followed the example set by grande dames like the Viscountess Hayashi, that the peeresses who have decided to westernize have established houses which (allowing for difference of climate and taste) are as modern as the best in Park lane, and are training their daughters much as our English girls are trained at Cheltenham or a convent school.

Fortunately for the picturesqueness of life, many of the old habits are retained and dovetailed into European customs. For fete occasions and to receive British guests, for example, a lady of rank at Tokio will don a Redfern costume or a Worth ceration, but when she is living en famille the probability is that she and her daughters will wear the kimono.

The Japanese gentlewoman is by instinct and preference light hearted, merry, determined to see the best in life, prepared to enjoy small pleasures greatly, and to minimize troubles. She has the placid, well balanced temperament which is natural to a healthy young life. The cynic might add that it is equally to be hoped she will inoculate us with her inborn politeness, but I gather from conversations with Japanese that they fear that elaboration of courtesy will be killed by our plentiful sarcasm. Flowers of speech which are quite pretty in the land of the chrysanthemum have to be dropped in our colder drawing rooms, and when our fair visitors return it comes upon them with a slight shock that the home style of politeness is a shade overdrawn.

IN THE FEMININE WORLD.

"Frisson radium" is a new silken material which is to take the place of crepe de chine. It is very brilliant, and, having a very find cord weave, has a certain desirable crispness that is lacking in crepe de chine of the same weight.

Fabrics the name of which have the moire prefix are multiplying and the number in fall lines is already remarkable.

A moire antique chameleon has small shadow cubes over the moire ground and large satin jacquard coin dots. This is in pink, white and nile and of superb quality.

Another moire chameleon is in violet, pale blue and white with a very fine shadow stripe and bocade design in leaf shape.

The embroidered lace idea seems to be extending. It seems like "painting the lily and adding perfume to the violet" to attempt to enhance the charms of a fine piece of Irish crochet lace by crossing it with an embroidery design, but in some cases the effect is exquisite; as for example in a caraco—the new short loose coat with pagoda sleeves—of baby crochet with a vine-like border of ribbon work in pompadour coloring, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Val. laces also have their designs emphasized by effective work in large stitches with colored silk and chinelle for use in yokes and plastrons, with cuffs to match.

The caraco is "stunning" developed in taffeta, embroidered all over with English work, when worn with a skirt of the same color, but contrasting material, such as henrietta, broadcloth or prunella.

Taupe, or mole color, promises to be as popular as when the vogue of the fur of that small rodent was first inaugurated. It is too sombre alone, but with certain relieving colors has much cachet.

Pale blue, shell pink, champagne or pale apricot are the most tasteful shades to combine with taupe.

HOW LOVE MAY BE CURED.

Henceforth the "detrimental" should cease to be a terror to mothers and chaperons. Henceforth should the green-eyed monster lie quelled at the feet of lovers and husbands, and henceforth the jilted may take heart and the lovesick be made whole. For a means has been discovered by which love can be measured, reduced, cured and generally treated, like any other malady. Unromantic as it may sound, unpoetical as all Cupid's victims may consider it, and fatal though it may be to the popularity of the novel, the fact must still be faced that science has reduced love to the level of an ordinary disease, the symptoms, progress and effects of which can be studied like those of the measles or influenza.

The scientist has not spared the heart in his researches; he has been no respecter even of the grand passion, and in continental and transatlantic laboratories he has been at work on machines and schemes uow perfected, we are told, by means of which the strength of an affaire du coeur can be tested and the results sutdied. But all this would be of little use if not turned to some practical account, and it will therefore, as we say, ease the burden of mothers to learn that great Viennese, German, French and American specialists are now agreed that the most virulent cases of lovesickness are curable. If there is an undesirable lover in the case he can be erased from his victim's mind rather more easily than an attack of tonsilitis could be cured. If madame is grieving over an old love affair, monsieur, her husband, has only to call in the specialist, and the malady will be at an end. If silly ads are spoiling their careers because of some heartless maid; if sillier maidens are growing pale over men who do not want their affections, they have only to undergo a course of hypnotic treatment and their reason and hearts will be forthwith restored.

It all sounds very simple and seems to suggest a kind of revolution of romance, but somehow one seems to fancy that there is more danger after all in Cupid's arrows than the love measuring machine of the modern scientist is equal to coping with. If it has really come to pass that heartbreaks can be arranged to order like cheap tours, then how, one may reasonably ask, are the poor novelist, the still more to be pitied poet and the hapless dramatist to get a living in the coming by and by?—London Lody's Pictorial.

CATS.

"I used to sell cats," said Mr. James C. Durbin, of San Francisco, at the Caswell.

"Profitable?"

"Yep, for the fancy kind—not for rat purposes. It isn't like it used to be in the old days, when people paid fabulous prices for cats to chase the rodent. Now they have traps and poisons, and so many families are so poor that the rats won't stay around to starve. So in these days the only sale we have is for the fine breed—the blue-ribbon variety. I had one cat, a Madagascar, with a tail shaped like a corkscrew, that could trace its ancestry back to the first Pharaoh by trying hard. What? Certainly they had cats in Egypt, loads of them. Why, the cat was as common in Pharaoh's day as the family photograph album with the green velvet back is in the modern rural home.

"But I got out of the cat business and went into fruit packing—that is our industry on the Coast. Cats? Well, to get back, then, did you ever see one of these Chinese cats, with ears that flop? Fact. Nobody but a student of the felis domestica would suspect a cat of having anything but short, straight, up-and-down ears, but Chinese cats' ears hang, and that's what makes 'em valuable. And then there's the Manx cat, whose only value is that he hasn't any tail. He's more ridiculous in that respect than a rabbit or a guinea pig. Of course, the fine Angoras and Maltese cats and the Chartreuse depend upon their coats for their rating on the bench. So do the Spanish cats, with their odd but beautiful fur in black and yellow splotches. The cat is a large family, with a lot of branches, and I'm deeply interested in the subject, but, excuse me, here's a man who wants to talk Riverside oranges."—Baltimore News.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

The tiny hot water bags holding hardly more than a teaspoonful are useful in cases of neuralgia of the face and jaw. Filled with boiling water, they can be held in the mouth, thus bringing the heat directly to the source of the pain. Of course, the taste of the rubber is not agreeable, but it is better than blistering the gum or cheek with capsicum.

An economical and at the same time highly palatable stew may be made of ox tails. One will be sufficient for a small family. tI will be better to have the tail cut into the required lengths (about two joints) by the butcher. But it on the stove with enough cold water to cover thoroughly, let it come to a boil and skim carefully. Then add half a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of black and the same of cayenne pepper, a few alspices, a couple of small onions and two or three carrots. Let the ox tails cook slowly until perfectly tender.

Many persons who find the seeds of dried figs difficult to digest can obviate the trouble by cooking the fruit. Wash the figs thoroughly, put them into an agateware or porcelain saucepan well covered with water. Let them simmer gently until they are soft, then add the juice of one or two lemons (depending on the number of your figs) and the sliced peel of one lemon. To make a dessert of them, add a glass or two of cooking wine. If the wine is not desired, two or three pieces of ginger root and a few cloves stewed with the figs give a good flavor.—Harper's Bazar.

THE TIME WILL COME—

When it will be a disgrace not to work when one is able.

When to get rich by making others poorer will be considered a disgrace.

When the same standard of morality will be demanded of men as of women.

When the golden rule will be regarded as the soundest business philosopher.

When all true happiness will be found in doing the right and only the good will be found to be real.

When the business man will find that his best interests will be the best interests of the man at the other end of the bargain.

When all hatred, revenge and jealousy will be regarded as boomerangs which inflict upon the thrower the injury intended for others.

When the "best society" will consist of men and women of brains, culture and achievement, rather than those whose chief merit and distinction lie in the possession of unearned fortunes.—Success Magazine.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Rousing Hector he told him of the new danger, and the darky's eyes bulged in their sockets. He was up and well scared in less than no time and, taking Benton's glass, disappeared among the rocks and trees up the hillside to the west. There was a lookout, he said, in the branches of an oak, from which much of the country could be seen to the southeast. It was full 20 minutes later and just after Benton had heard the distant signal "boots and saddles" from the same trumpet, when he came scrambling down. No time for coffee, no time for feeding or rubbing the horses, he said. Like as not these troopers would be out searching every by-path. He had seen them doing that after the first Bull Run when a dozen Yankee prisoners broke away from the cars at night and slipped for the mountains. They had all but two of them back inside of 12 hours. Hurriedly saddling, Hector then aided his charge to mount; then again led the way, crooked and devious, through all manner of scrub and tangle; threading ravines, skirting clearings and creeping ever higher toward the crest until the foothills at last were left far below. Then on again northward, and, so tortuous was their way, so many were the halts, making on a bee line little more than a mile an hour, they bored through the wilderness until late in the afternoon, from a bare projecting ledge, they obtained their first unimpeded view of the eastward, and saw the North Fork, the Hedgeman, like a silver thread.

That night the moon stood high toward the zenith. By midnight it would sink behind the Blue Ridge, and Benton ordered "forward" while the faint light lasted, despite Hector's demurrer. They must try to cross the Hedgman while the moon served, then hide in the woods on the further shore until the dawn of another day.

A scrambly ride was that to the lowlands, but toward ten o'clock they struck a wood path, and began to stir the dogs of scattered homesteads in the foot hills. A sudden turn of the path brought them to the edge of a cleared field and in view of a scattered [illegible] or two. Then came double challenge. First the impudent snarl and dash of a brace of back country mongrels; then the stern "Halt thar! Dismount!" of a cavalry vedette, starting from the shadow of a clump of stunted trees, not 50 feet away.

Before Hector, limp and trembling, could slip to earth in obedience to the order, Benton's hand was on his arm, lugging him back into saddle, while his heels made vigorous play. "Stoop low, you fool, and follow!" he swore between his set teeth as he whirled his horse about and at plunging gallop tore westward again by the way they came. A shot rang out. A bullet went whizzing into the shrubbery, but before the solitary sentry could reload, or the men from the picket reach him, Benton and Hector were 400 yards away back along the wood path and heading through the darkness for the higher refuge of the hills. Unwittingly they struck a northward-bending path at an unseen fork, and there, as no sound of pursuit reached them, Benton bade Hector cease his terrific heeling of his horse's ribs, and gladly enough the half-blown beasts came down to heaving walk. The ill luck that had led them into the outermost picket of the confederate force turned to blessing when, near midnight, they found themselves at an unguarded reach of this far-away branch of the Rappahannock, and the thirsting horses, eager for drink, found their own ford to the other shore.

That night they slept in a barn some distance south of Salem, hidden by friendly darkies, for now Hector feared to return. He felt sure that his connection with Benton's escape was known, and that dire punishment awaited him. He would unite his fortunes with those of his new master, and be his groom and hostler for the rest of his days. A young negro promised to fetch a mule at four in the morning and guide them over the hills toward New Baltimore, eastward—they dare not try the roads, or Thoroughfare Gap—and from New Baltimore, once across the Warrenton pike, Benton hoped to be able to reach the union lines. True to his word and his hopes of reward, the young fellow roused them an hour before the dawn and had them clear of the valley roads before sun up. Then from the heights back of the Warrenton pike Benton scoured the low ground toward Manassas with his glasses, and only far south of Broad Run could he see sign of cavalry of any kind, and so, bidding their latest guide adieu, he and his faithful Hector rode hopefully—yet slowly, for the beasts were leg weary—down from the wooded range toward the long seam through the open country, the once well-traveled high road to the lovely old county seat of Fauquier. They were looking for abandoned shack, cabin or barn where they could hide until twilight.

Toward noon their startled ears caught the sound of hoof-beats on the hillside, and there came shambling into sight a wild-eyed negro on a remonstrant mule. "Run, Marse!" he cried, at sight of Benton. "Run, fo' Gawd's sake! Dey's 100 sojers huntin' every house an' bahn just over the hill, suh, and comin' dis way!"

Then came a ride almost for life. They turned into a lane leading away southeastward between desolate fields; halted to "blow" their panting, reeking horses at a little clump of trees near a southward sweep of the mill stream—Broad Run—then Benton unslung his glass and took deliberate survey of the distant hills, then of the country over which they had come, and, spurring like mad down a slope of the heights, barely three miles back of them, came a dozen gray horsemen. "They've seen us," said he, as quietly as he could, and Hector's trembling hands helped him again to mount. Then away dashed the pair for the first ford of the stream, only to see as they rode out dripping on the opposite bank that the distant fringe of the Manassas woods looked far away as ever. Oh, for a sight of union flankers now!

A long half hour they rode, as fast as jaded steed could bear them, but Hector's horse was nearly done. The spare oak openings, the scattered copses, now were only half a mile ahead, but southward, cutting them off from Bristoe, galloped a jaunty half dozen, following the lead of a dashing rider. Behind them, still beyond carbine range but slowly gaining, full 20 troopers were spreading out over the open fields, "turning" them, as it were, from the left. The soil was growing loose and soft and spongy now that they had left the lanes, and every now and then they plunged through holes, deep and treacherous, but still they lashed ahead, Hector's poor brute groaning—staggering with every stride. Presently the ground began slowly rising and the woods grew thick. If only they could reach them! Surely the union pickets must be close at hand, and now, as they drove in among the clumps of stunted trees, they lost sight of the troopers to the south. Now the yells of those in rear became exultant, and still came no shot. Then, as they struggled through a boggy slough, with sickening groan Hector's exhausted horse went down and floundered helpless in the mud, his wretched rider dragging himself from underneath, and, limping to the foot of a tree, fell gasping and terrified. "Oh, Gawd, don't leave me, Marse Benton!" he pleaded in agony. "Doan' leave me or dey'll kill me, suah." With one glance at the cheering chase, one longing look at the eastward slopes, Benton sprang from the saddle, and with firm-set lips and flashing eyes, he planted himself between the yelling troopers and the prostrate, helpless, humble friend.

Bursting through the trees, the foremost riders drove straight at him. "Down with that pistol!" shouted a voice in stern command. "Don't [illegible] he's wounded! Drop your [illegible] were ten to one!" And [illegible] the hopelessness of fight, [illegible] Benton tossed his puny weapon [illegible].

But what meant that sudden shot to the southward?—what that sputtering volley, that burst of cheers? "The major!" "The Yanks!" "Come on, come on!" were the shouts. Away darted half the mud-spattered group, and then, sudden as the shot, in spurred a breathless young officer. "Mount, sur, instantly! Help him, corporal. Up with you, suh! We haven't a moment." Rough, powerful hands fairly lifted him into saddle. Another hand seized the reins of his horse. "Come on now, lively!" was the order. "Get him back out o' range. We've run slap into a brigade, general and all. Off with you—to Buckland, you two! The rest of you come with me to the major. What'll we do with the nigguh? Damn the nigguh—we've no time to bother with him!"

Daring and devoted, away went the young gallants to the support of their chief, only to meet the riderless horses tearing through the glade, only to see platoon after platoon of a blue-jacketted squadron issuing from the southward woods. "Charge as foragers," rang the distant trumpets, as the leader's eyes swept over the scene and saw the pitiful few in his front, and, with a wild burst of cheers, and sabers flashing on high, the long line sprang forward, fan-like; then, every man for himself, came tearing northward across the field.

An hour later, defiant and superbly disdainful of his surroundings, Maj. Lounsberry was being interrogated by Capt. Carver of the division staff, while three or four other officers in blue hovered about the little frame farmhouse to which the prisoner had been conducted.

"You may spare yourself the trouble of questioning me, suh," said he with appropriate hauteur. "I decline to answer. Wait till you see Dr. Chilton," he added, with sneering triumph, "if he isn't already hanged for a traitor. You've seen the last of your friend Benton, I reckon. Perhaps he could have told you."

"I reckon he could," said Carver, imperturbably, as he glanced toward the door at Lounsberry's back. "How is it, Benton, is Ewell at Gordonsville?"

CHAPTER XV.

LINCOLN'S DILEMMA.

"The president desires to see Lieut. Benton of your staff," wrote the adjutant general, three weeks later, to the division commander and, just at a time when he hated to go, for there seemed a prospect of a forward dash on Gordonsville, the aide-de-camp found himself enroute. A confederate gallant, painfully wounded in charge of Benton, was being escorted to Washington. He had refused parole. He would rather share the fate of Lounsberry, said he, if his wounds speedily healed, or of poor Floyd Pelham, still languishing in hospital, if the wounds proved baffling. How much those fellows seemed to know of everything transpiring within the union divisions! Just what had been done with Lounsberry and Pelham—just where they were confined and everything connected with their capture was all told at Charlottesville almost as soon as at Washington. How little, until long weeks after, as a rule, did our generals know of the daily doings beyond the picket posts along the front! With sorrow and anxiety inexpressible Benton heard that in spite of Dr. Chilton's long years of kindness and generosity among his townsfolk—in spite of Rosalie's acknowledged queendom, an almost bitter feeling now existed, and there was talk of arrest and incarceration at Richmond. Not until he had studied Benton for several days did young Winston admit all this—and more. He had heard it through officers at Robertson's headquarters. He had known the Chiltons well when he was a junior at the 'varsity. He had often seen Lounsberry and had heard much of his standing and influence—had heard, moreover, that he had been a devotee of Miss Rosalie's. "However," with a quick glance at Benton's face, which colored instantly, even under its coat of tan and sunburn, "Lounsberry didn't seem to find favor." There was some trouble, he didn't know what, and Maud Pelham had "had a flare up" with Rosalie, and that was something people didn't understand, for Jack Chilton was as much smitten with her as Lounsberry had been with Miss Chilton. "Don't s'pose you heard much about it," said he in the confidence bred of the unlooked-for kindness with which he had been treated, but adding, with an anchoretic laugh, "they do say at Charlottesville that Miss Rosalie just [illegible] everybody about her like she [illegible] queen."

[illegible] was most unwilling to leave the front, for there were indications of brisk work and a forward movement that might relieve the situation. Letters from home had showered him with blessings and congratulations on his escape. The squire was now full of a scheme to come on to Washington, bringing Elinor with him, but, much as she longed to see her brother, the girl was now loth to leave home—Mrs. Ladue was swiftly failing and seemed to need her gentle nurse more and more with every day.

McKinnon, wrote certain townsfolk to Fred's general, had so lost caste in the community that he had determined on a war record to rehabilitate himself, and was now seeking the lieutenant-colonelcy of a new regiment being raised in their midst. What with bad news from Schenck and Milroy, falling back on Fremont after a thrashing at the Bull Pasture, a deep disappointment over McClellan's being held an entire month in front of Yorktown and a feeling that we were getting rather the worst of the grapple on the peninsula, the atmosphere about the war department was gloomy enough the day the young officer arrived.

In the ante-room, with officers, orderlies and messengers grouped about or coming and going, sat the long, lanky and phenomenally solemn Virginian he had first seen that night at the stone house on the Warrenton pike. Jennings knew the newcomer at a glance and, springing up, shook him effusively by the hand. A moment later an officer appeared at another door and beckoned Benton to enter. "What do you know about that man?" was the very first question propounded the instant the door closed behind him.

"Nothing," said Benton, "except that he was at the stone house, in trouble with some of our brigade the first time I saw him—seemed to be well known to Dr. Chilton and other Virginians, and later was with the Sixth Wisconsin the afternoon they captured Maj. Lounsberry."

"But—how about papers—information—concerning our forces that he received that night? You were captured while grappling with the cavalry officer who brought them."

THE HEAVY TASK OF COMPILING LAWS

THE NEW JERSEY COMMISSION HOPES SOON TO COMPLETE THE BIG WORK.

The commission to edit and compile the "Revised Statutes of New Jersey," approved by Governor Murphy March 30, 1904, is progressing well with its enormous work. The commission is composed of Garrett D. W. Vroom, president, and James E. Howell, of Newark, and Charles F. Thompson, of Jersey City. Francis B. Lee, of Trenton, is the efficient clerk of the commission.

The work of the commission is not revisionary. Its powers are limited purely to the compilation and editing of the public statutes of the State, which, under the terms of the law which called the commission into being, must be confined to the gathering together of every act found in the "General Statutes of New Jersey," together with the pamphlet laws passed since 1895.

When the work is completed it will not only include all of the corpus of the law, but likewise the abstracts from the public decisions of the State courts expounding and construing such statutes, with citations of such decisions, and likewise a general index, a table of cases cited in the abstract of public decisions, and also a list of all admitted acts which are of a general character, and special public character, as well as local public acts.

A history of all previous compilations, a score in number, from Bradford's first compilation of 1717 to the present time, will appear in this work, the historical data therefor having been gathered from original sources by Mr. Lee.

Some idea of the magnitude of this work may be gathered from the fact that from the first act in the "General Statutes of 1895" until the last act in the pamphlet laws of 1905, there are to be found 7,001 acts of all characters, proclamations, joint resolutions and decrees of dissolution.

As an indication of what the New Jersey Legislature does it may be said that each year's pamphlet laws contains 250 statutes, of which, of course, many are of amendatory or repealing character.

Taking New Jersey as a basis, there are passed about ten thousand statues in the different States of the United States, which fact well confirms the observations of Governor Stokes that the volume of the statutory law is excessive.

Simply to illustrate the work of the commission, it was found necessary to use 10,563 manilla sheets of paper a half yard long for the pasting of the acts, making 15,804 feet of paper, or over three miles of closely printed matter. This does not include the index of the pamphlet laws.

There is still an enormous work to be done on the compilation of the revised statutes. The editing is intricate and the commission has to read all of the printer's proofs as well as the revised proofs. Going through the hands of at least four men and in some cases through the hands of several more experienced proof-readers, the work will come out as free from flaws as human beings can make it. It will be of enormous value to lawyers, to doctors and to any man who reads law, not only for profit, but for serious study in the line of business or in the profession he is practicing.

Boy Safe-breakers.

Three youthful safe-breakers were arrested yesterday by the police of Patterson. They are Earnest Yaggie, Charles McManus and Leo Melville. All are under fourteen years of age. The boys entered Sunday night George O'Brien's shoe store on Main street. O'Brien had neglected to lock his safe and the boys opened it and took $145. The boys confessed when arrested. Their parents agreed to make up the loss, but Recorder Noonberg decided to accept complaints for burglary. McManus and Melville were turned over to the custody of their parents, and Yaggie was committed to the county jail.

Making Silver Service.

The silver service to be given by New Jersey to the United States battleship named in honor of this State was designed by Tiffany & Company, and is now being made at their Forest Hill works, Newark. It will cost about $10,000, and promises to be the richest and most substantial service ever furnished to a vessel in the navy. It is not only a fitting expression of the generosity and good will of the people of the State, but also exemplifies the high degree of artistic merit attained by its manufacturers.

Want Pure Food Legislation.

Charles Fritchman, supervisor of the culinary department of the State Hospital for the Insane, at Trenton, has prepared a petition for presentation to President Roosevelt and Congress asking for the enactment of Federal legislation to prohibit the adulteration of foodstuffs. Mr. Fritchman is the New Jersey representative of the International Steward's Association. He has obtained as signers many of the State officials and hundreds of citizens.

Dr. C. B. Lufburrow, of West Front street, has been entertaining his sister from Atlantic Highlands.

JEROME a 2½-to-1 FAVORITE.

Also McClellan—Even Money That Hearst Will Get 170,000 Votes.

Jerome was a 2½-to-1 favorite in the election betting on the curb yesterday. The largest bet of the day was made by F. Schwed, who placed $10,000 against A. J. Cohen's $4,000 that Jerome would be elected. Schwed also took the short end of a $2,000 to $900 bet on Jerome.

At one time yesterday the McClellan odds narrowed to 2 to 1, though most of the bets were at 2½ to 1. Alexander Lane bet $500 to $1,000 against McClellan and $100 to $300 the same way. He took the short end of a bet of $750 to $450.

The firm of Herzog & Glazier is supplying plenty of Hearst money. This is the firm that stuck to Higgins last year when the betting was 2 to 1 on Herrick. It is said that they placed more than $3000,000 at 1 to 2 on the Republican nominee. Now they are placing large sums on the field aginst McClellan at 1 to 2½. It was said that Herzog & Glazier and their followers had put up $8,000 on Hearst.

Bunnell & Co. bet $5,000 to $2,000 on McClellan with Kerr & Co., and $1,250 to $500 with Herzog & Glazier. J. J. Judge bet $1,000 even that Hearst would get 170,000.

POLITICAL NOTICE.

A GOOD RECORD

The Newark Evening News Endorses the Candidacy of Ernest R. Ackerman For State Senator.

Mr. Ackerman's Good Record.

In view of the peaceful condition of politics in Union county, which is Republican by about 2,000 majority when the factions in that party bury the hatchet, the man most likely to succeed Judge Cross as Senator is Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield. There is therefore much interest in him, even outside of Union, not only because he follows in the footsteps of a statesman of high order, and of eminent success, but because the issues coming before the next Legislature will require the most careful and intelligent treatment at the hands of capable and conscientious legislators.

Happily there is no room for questions as to Mr. Ackerman's integrity, ability or political experience. In these respects he stands unchallenged, even by his political opponents, one of his open supporters in his own home city being George S. Clay, formerly president of the Parker Independent Club, who declares that Mr. Ackerman's acceptance of the office is "a distinct gain for the side of good morals and honesty in politics," and that if every legislator selected this fall were of the same high character "a new era would begin and 'graft' and self-seeking be unknown."

But the inquiry that is uppermost in the popular mind is, How does Mr. Ackerman stand on the question of limited franchises? Will he be as independent as was Judge Cross? Does he appreicate this issue as one of great importance? Fortunately, Mr. Ackerman has made a record on this question. When he was a member of the Plainfield City Council in 1891 the company which is now a constituent element of the Public Service Corporation applied to the Council for a franchise to operate an electric street railway in that city. What the company demanded was, of course, a perpetual franchise. This was fourteen years ago, before the corporations had gotten all cities by the throat as they now have, and before the people understood and appreciated, as they now do, the value of the privileges they were giving away for nothing and for all time.

Fourteen years ago, when everybody seemed to think that perpetual franchises were to be granted as a matter of course, Ernest R. Ackerman stood up in the Plainfield Council and opposed, with all the argument he could command, the giving away of franchises for nothing and in perpetuity. "We are considering the advisability," he said, "of doing something that is to last, not for a day, a month or a year, but, by granting a franchise, we set in motion forces the consequence of which we may be compelled to submit to for many years to come." Even at that time he favored the granting of franchises only after they had been submitted to the people by referendum.

The ordinance was passed notwithstanding his opposition, but in the fourteen years that have intervened Mr. Ackerman has seen a marvelous awakening of the people on this question of perpetual franchises, and nothing he has seen has weakened the convictions he ably maintained in the Plainfield Council fourteen years ago. If his own city had taken his advice it would now be in condition to dictate to the trolley corporation instead of being dictated to. His record is his platform.—Newark Evening News.

No Pledges in Private.

The Plainfield Courier-News very properly reminds the voters in Union county that Ernest R. Ackerman, the Republican candidate, if elected State senator, he will assume that position untrammeled by private pledge of any kind.

In the performance of his duties as State senator Mr. Ackerman will be guided entirely by his own conscientious judgment of what is right and just for the people of Union county. He did not seek the honor of a nomination. On the contrary, he was urged to allow his name to be used in that connection. As the first promise to becoming a candidate he made it plain, very plain, that if elected he would hold himself responsible to no political leader or leaders, no corporation or set of corporations; not a promise, implied or otherwise, has he made, or will make, that will serve to embarrass him as a legislator bent on doing his plain duty to the people, fairly and squarely, open and above board in every detail of the work which will devolve upon him in the Upper House at Trenton.

The trend of events in New Jersey indicates that legislation of the greatest importance is to be enacted during the term of the senator to be elected this fall. With this prospect in view a man of Mr. Ackerman's calibre is needed to represent Union county in the Senate.

Mr. Ackerman says—and everyone who knows him believes it—that if his election depended upon one vote, and the casting of that vote in his favor depended upon a private pledge of any sort, he would elect himself to remain a private citizen. That is the kind of a man Union county wants to represent her as a successor to Joseph Cross. The voters of Union county may rest assured that if elected Mr. Ackerman will have no promises to redeem other than the plain, honest pledge of trying to serve them loyally and intelligently along such lines of action as public opinion and a clear conscience warrants.

FIRST WOMAN MINISTER

Rev. Mrs. Antoinette Blackwell, Well-Known Here, Ordained in 1848.

FOR WOMEN'S RIGHTS

Has Advocated Cause of Weaker Sex for Suffrage for Half Century —Career of a Remarkable Woman.

The Rev. Mrs. Antoinette L. Brown Blackwell, of Elizabeth, the first woman minister to be ordained in the United States, was one of the guests of honor at the meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs last week, and made an informal address on the progress of the movement for woman's rights in the last score of years.

Mrs. Blackwell has been identified with that movement herself for more than a half century. She is now past 80 years of age, having been born on May 20, 1825, at Henrietta, N. Y. Before she was sixteen she began to teach school, and afterward became woman principal of the Henrietta Academy. She was graduated from Oberlin College in 1847. While there she and Lucy Stone, being forbidden by the faculty to take part in the debating exercises of the young men, organized the first debating society ever formed among college girls.

Antoinette had made up her mind to become a minister, and, after taking her first degree, she applied for admission to the theological school of Oberlin. The professors were dismayed, but the charter of the college said that no one should ever be excluded from any department on account of color or sex, and they had to admit her. Her father and brother disapproved of her studying theology, and would not help her financially. Peter Myers, the head of an academy at Rochester, Mich., where she had held the position of woman principal, agreed to advance her the money, but he suddenly died. Miss Adams, the woman principal at Oberlin, then promised to get her some teaching to do in the preparatory department of the college to help pay the expenses of her theological course. But Miss Adams fell ill, and in her absence the women's board (composed principally of the professors' wives, and strongly opposed to women ministers) made a rule that no graduate of the college should be allowed to teach in the girls' department. This was done to bar her out. Then Miss Atkins, the assistant principal, got up a private drawing class for Antoinette, who had for some time taught drawing in the lower school. Her class included Professor (afterward President) Fairchild, and a number of the theological students, and proved so profitable that it enabled her to meet all her expenses.

She distinguished herself during her course, and met with much kindness from both students and professors. She preached her first public sermon at Henrietta, N. Y., about 1848.

When graduation time approached a Mrs. Barnes, of New York, who had often attended the lectures and recitations at the theological school, offered Antoinette a good salary if she would work for a social society in New York and do missionary work there. She did so for a time, but the women were shocked by her attending and speaking at the first National Woman's Rights Convention at Worcester, Mass., in 1850, and after that she worked as a free lance, lecturing and preaching where she could. Channing, Garrison, Gerrit Smith, Samuel May and others helped her to opportunities. She went all through New York State with Susan B. Anthony, holding meetings in behalf of woman's rights.

She wrote much for the magazines and papers, and grew steadily in popularity as a speaker, often receiving $100 for a lecture. Horace Greeley and Charles A. Dana invited her to preach a sermon in Metropolitan Hall in New York, and afterward urged her to settle in New York city and preach there regularly, offering to provide her with a hall and pay her $1,000 a year and her board—an almost unheard-of salary for a woman in those days. But Antoinette, in her modesty, felt that she was too young to support the responsibilities of a great metropolitan pastorate. Instead she accepted an offer from the Congregational church at South Butler, N. Y., of $300 a year. Here she was regularly ordained as an orthodox Congregational minister in the summer of 1853. Gerrit Smith gave the charge to the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Fox the charge to the people, and Rev. Luther Lee, a Methodist Protestant minister, of Syracuse, preached the sermon.

The event brought down tremendous denunciation from the orthodox papers. The New York Independent, then edited by Dr. Cheever, declared that any woman who would allow herself to be ordained was an infidel, and any church that would ordain her was an infidel church. Dr. Cheever refused to publish the letter which Antoinette sent to the Independent in reply, but told his readers that Miss Brown disclaimed being an infidel.

She was appointed by her church a delegate to the World's Temperance Convention in New York, a convention composed largely of ministers. Her credentials were accepted, but when she rose to speak the convention went into a prodigious uproar which drowned her voice. This lasted two days. In spite of the efforts made in her behalf by Channing, Phillips, Garrison, Powell and others, including the president of the convention, Neal Dow, she was not allowed to be heard. Horace Greeley, in the New York Tribune, severely scored these clergymen. About five months after her ordination she passed through a period of religious doubt, which led her to resign her pastorate. She emerged a Unitarian.

Not long after resigning her pulpit at South Butler, she married the late Samuel C. Blackwell, a brother of Drs. Elizabeth and Emily Blackwell, and of Henry B. Blackwell, who had married Antoinette's college friend, Lucy Stone, a few years before. Mrs. Blackwell's marriage proved ideally happy.

She has continued to lecture and preach from time to time, and was for many years one of the most active workers with Mrs. Julia Ward Howe and Mrs. Ednah D. Cheney in the "Association for the Advancement of Women," better known as the "Women's Congress." She is the author of several philosophical and scientific books and a volume of poems. She still contributes valuable articles to the press.

Mrs. Blackwell was very beautiful in her youth, and is now a strikingly handsome old lady. She has a well-poised, calm and cheerful temperament that keeps her as happy at 81 as at 18.

Two years ago she made a journey to the Holy Land, unaccompanied by any member of her family.

YOUNG FISHERMAN KILLED.

Boy on Newark Bay Draw Struck by Passing Train.

Elizabeth, Nov. 2.—Peter Kotz, 11 years old, whose parents reside on Port avenue, met his death on the Central Railroad bridge over Newark Bay Sunday afternoon. Young Kotz, with a companion, was fishing. They were sitting on one of the stringpieces and when Kotz got a bite he leaned far back to give the rod a good swing. In his excitement he failed to notice an approaching train and swung himself back so far that the locomotive hit him on the head.

Part of his brains were scattered over his companion.

The train was stopped and the boy, unconscious, was placed aboard, but he died a few minutes after Bayonne was reached. The body was brought to this city yesterday morning.

Pledge Support to Nugent.

Elizabeth, Nov. 2.—Most of the men employed in the department at the Singer Sewing Machine plant where Democratic Senatorial Candidate Edward Nugent formerly worked, called on him in a body Monday night, at his law office on Broad street, here, and pledged him their support in his campaign. Owen McLaughlin acted as spokesman for his fellow workers, with whom Mr. Nugent had labored for fourteen years. Their visit was a complete surprise to the candidate, who expressed himself as very grateful for this expression of their confidence.

Governor to Go to Georgia.

Trenton, Nov. 2.—Governor Stokes will leave here today for Georgia to be gone two or three days. The trip is purely one of pleasure.

COLBY SMIRSHES COURT OFFICIALS

HAS HEARD, HE SAYS, BRIBES WERE PAID IN SUPREME TRIBUNAL.

Everett Colby spoke at noon yesterday at the gate of the big Clark's Thread Works at Newark. He continued his assault on the corruptionists who, he said, have dominated the Legislature for years.

Mr. Colby made what persons acquainted with the Morris Canal abandonment bill scandal at the last session of the Legislature know to be the first direct intimation of a certain alleged flagrant misuse of the offices of the Supreme Court, at Trenton, at the moment the canal abandonment bill was up for final passage in the House of Assembly. Mr. Colby said:

"If I am elected I will do my utmost to keep away from the State House, the disreputable crooks who buy up legislators. The corruption at Trenton is beyond belief. It is not uncommon that legislators win from $500 to $800 a night at poker from lobbyists, and the next day vote for corporation measures.

"I have heard of one instance, though I may not be able to prove it, that the money to buy votes for a certain bill was turned over to the corrupt legislators in the Supreme Court room in Trenton.

"I have gone into the legislative chamber and have seen some of my colleagues tremble and turn ashy gray when it was proposed to investigate certain matters. Some of them have never looked me 'straight in the eye since they took money.'

"While the legislative investigation of alleged canal bribery was in progress and Leader Edward D. Duffield was calling newspaper correspondents, who refused to disclose the sources of their information, the story was current in the State House that a certain State official bargained and paid for votes for the canal bill, and that the purchased Assemblymen were paid off in the rooms of the Supreme Court."

REED CAN EXPLAIN.

Rahway's Tax Receiver Claims That He Can Account.

Rahway, Nov. 2.—Former Tax Receiver Charles E. Reed, charged with being short in his accounts in the sum of 5,115.40, insists that he can explain matters. He does not deny that the books as examined by the experts fail to show what became of the shortage reported, but says that had he been given an opportunity, he could have satisfactorily explained everything, and the experts' report would have been unnecessary. Some members of Council, however, insist that long before the city books had been placed in the hands of the experts, Mr. Reed was called upon to explain but refused.

Notwithstanding the damaging report of the experts Mr. Reed has many friends who refuse to believe that he appropriated any of the money entrusted to his care. They say that the apparent discrepancies must be due to the manner in which he kept his books.

Mr. Reed keenly feels his position, and his friends are confident that the shortage reported will speedily be made good, and possibly, too, without calling upon his bondsmen, who seem to be much annoyed over the matter.

NEW YORK POPULATION.

In State, 8,066,672; in Greater New York, 4,014,304.

Albany, N. J., Nov. 2.—There are now 8,066,672 residents in New York State. These figures were announced Monday by the State Enumeration Bureau. In 1900 the population was 7,268,894 and in 1890 6,003.174. The population of the State has increased, therefore, during the past five years 797,778, or 11 per cent., as against an increase during the preceding decade of 1,265,720, or 21.1 per cent.

The population of Greater New York, as counted by the State Enumeration Bureau on June 1, and announced Monday, is 4,014,304, as compared with 3,437,202 in 1900 and 2,507,414 in 1890.

These figures show an increase in the population from 1900 to 1905 of 577,102, or 16.8 per cent., and for the same area during the preceding ten years of 929,786, or 37.1 per cent. The population of Manhattan Borough is given as 2,122,697 and Brooklyn as 1,358,891.

Board of Elections Meets.

The County Board of Election met Saturday for the purpose of filling such vacancies as might exist in any of the local boards. No vacancies were reported. It was reported that all of the lists of registry in Elizabeth had been turned in to the secretary of the board with the exception of the Second district of the Ninth ward. On motion the secretary was instructed to notify the election officers of that district that the list must be in the hands of the board by next Thursday morning. It was also reported that the election officers of the Third district of the Eighth ward, Elizabeth, had turned in the book for challenges instead of the regular book of registry. It was ordered that the proper book be produced by Thursday next, to which time the board adjourned.

SOMERSET DEMOCRATIC NOMINEES IN SADDLE

WITH SENATOR CHILDS ASSEMBLY CANDIDATE DURLING STARTED CANVAS.

Walter Durling, the Somerset County Democratic candidate for Assemblyman, started yesterday on his canvass of the county. He is accompanied by Senator Samuel S. Childs, who also seeks re-election, and a number of prominent county leaders. The candidates are going to make one of the most complete canvasses ever made by men seeking public office.

Mr. Durling was born in Somerville October 10, 1865, and has always lived there, taking a prominent part in every movement tending to better conditions in this community. He has been a railroad man for the last twenty-five years, and is at present one of the best known conductors on the Central Railroad of New Jersey. He was elected a member of the Board of Town Commissioners four years ago by an overwhelming majority. He is at present a member of the board, and is chairman of the police committee. Mr. Durling is regarded as one of the most popular men in the county, and his friends feel that Assemblyman Hoagland, his Republican rival, has the fight of his life on his hands.

Mr. Durling aspired to the Assembly nomination about twelve years ago, but was defeated in the convention by Jacob Klotz, who was elected, and who served two terms in the House.

The hardest work of the campaign will be done by both parties in Bridgewater township, which comprises the towns of Raritan, Somerville and Bound Brook.

Alex W. Mack, son of Adolph Mack, owner of the Raritan Woolen Mills, and a nephew of Isaac Einstein, who owns the Bound Brook Woolen Mills, has announced himself as opposed to Colonel Frelinghuysen for Senator. Mr. Mack is also the personal friend of Walter Durling, and, it is said, will throw his influence to the Democratic ticket in this campaign.

DRUGGISTS PLAN WAR.

Union County Pharmacists After "Cut-Rate" Sellers.

Elizabeth, Nov. 2.—At the Alcyone Boat Club room downtown Monday the Union County Pharmaceutical Society met to consider the matter of putting up the prices of all proprietary medicines, those generally termed "patent medicines," to the prices stated upon the bottles. The idea is to make war on all cut-rate druggists throughout the county.

President A. C. Smith, of Rahway, presided at the meeting. The movement is the same as that which has been going on at Newark. The plan is to have the entire pharmaceutical society agree upon a schedule for the sale of these proprietary drugs. Tis schedule is higher in Elizabeth and in Union county than that of Newark, and the cut-rate druggists are opposing it.

None of the druggists of this city would discuss the matter when a reporter called upon them last evening beyond stating that the meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the advisability of all county druggists agreeing upon a fixed rate for the sale of "patent medicines."

Would Raise Liquor License Fee.

Paterson, Nov. 2.—At the meeting for organization of the Paterson Conference of Charities and Correction, held Monday night in the assembly hall of the Danforth Memorial Library, a member of the executive committee made a strong plea for the raising of liquor license fees in this city.

FAMILIAR LINES.

(Arranged so that the little ones can always remember them.)

The boy stood on the burning deck,
His fleece was white as snow;
He stuck a feather in his hat,
John Anderson, my Jo!

"Come back, come back!" he cried in grief,
From India's coral strands,
The frost is on the pumpkin and
The village smithy stands.

Am I a soldier of the cross
From many a boundless plain?
Should auld acquaintance be forgot
Where saints immortal reign?

Ye banks and braces o' bonny Doon
Across the sands o' Dee,
Can you forget that night in June—
My country, 'tis of thee!

Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
We're saddest when we sing,
To beard the lion in his den—
To set before the king.

Hark! from the tombs a doleful sound,
And Phoebus 'gins arise;
All mimsy were the borogroves
To mansions in the skies.
—Cleveland Leader.

Do You Want a Job?

How did you get your first job? That was the question the New York Sunday World put to some of New York's most successful men. What Andrew Carnegie, John D. Crimmins, Oscar Hammerstein and others equally prominent said as to "How I got my first job" is told in next Sunday's New York World.

Robert Conness in "Lieut. Dick, U. S. A.," at New Plainfield Theatre, Thursday, November 9.

AMUSEMENTS.

Lovers of sensationalism will be gratified to know that an early booking at the New Plainfield theatre tonight is the new scenic sensation, "The Way of the Transgressor." This tersely told story of American life is full of intensely dramatic situations and thrilling climaxes, relieved by a lot of genuine comedy that will convulse any audience. In addition to this there are a number of high grade specialties rendered by a coterie of high priced artists. The crowning feature of the performance, however, is the superb acting of the wonderful Landseer dogs, which have been educated and developed by William T. Stephens. These canine thespians go through the parts assigned to them in a masterful manner and the dash and brilliancy of all their work will convince any one that they do the things assigned to them through love of the work and not because they are driven to it.

"Shadows of a Great City," a melodrama of intense realism, strong heart interest, powerful situations and an abundance of good comedy, presented with elaborate scenic effects, and by a splendid case, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow matinee and night. This splendid play has for years been considered one of the most successful of melodramas and the best evidence of its popularity is the fact that it has handsomely enriched its owner, C. B. Jefferson, on former occasions. It scored a great hit throughout the country last season, and when the people of Plainfield look upon it this time they will meet with a great surprise, owing to the magnificence of the production.

Miss Sophie Brandt, of whom her manager, Claxton Wilstach, is willing to make affidavit is the youngest, most attractive and best voiced of all prima donni, is meeting with great success in the romantic light opera, "A Madcap Princess," scheduled to be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Tuesday night. The piece is one of the few genuine comic operas being performed today and the favor with which it has been received is significant that the pendulum is swinging back once more from musical comedy and rough and tumble extravaganza to the old principle of sane and logical fund in operatic entertainment. The author, Harry B. Smith, and the composer, Ludwig Englander, are at the head of the list of American operamakers, and "A Madcap Princess" is said to rank with their best efforts. Its melodies swing in waltz and march tempos, and it is said that the singing ensemble supporting Miss Brandt is one of the best to be heard in light opera today. The production was made for the run of the piece at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York, and is designated as a most beautiful assortment of stage pictures with brilliant costuming.

As a welcome relief to the overflow and over abundance of cheap, trashy, musical comedies and decidedly impossible melodramas, comes the announcement that the management of the New Plainfield theatre have been most fortunate in securing as their season's attraction, Nat Goodwin's greatest success, "When We Were Twenty-One." To those who really appreciate the best in comedy drama, the mere announcement of so sterling an attraction will be sufficient to insure their patronage. The local management take great pride to offer their patrons so excellent an attraction and in as much as it has been secured at no little expense to them, they feel that there should be some appreciation of this fact in the nature of liberal patronage, which to say the least, the play deserves. New Plainfield theatre next Saturday, matinee and night.

It is seldom that the fortunes of the present day playwright are continually on the ascent. They often have a "backward slide," but of the wonderful success of her "Way Down East," Lottie Blair Parker, followed it up with "Under Southern Skies." The "ever-increasing" receipts of this "sunny southern play," demonstrates the fact, that "Lightning does sometimes strike twice in the same place." From the first performance of her latest effort, viz: The dramatization of Rev. Charles Frederic Goss' remarkable novel, "The Redemption of David Corson," to the present time, the fact is self evident that "Lottie Blair Parker has struck another winner." "The Redemption of David Corson" will be the attraction offered at the New Plainfield theatre Monday night.

Thursday evening, November 9, Frank E. Henderson will present Robert Conness in his new play, "Lieut. Dick, U. S. A.," a military comedy-drama, by Harry McRae Webster, at the New Plainfield theatre. The scene of the play is laid in the West, and its characters are typical of the locality, but unlike other plays with a western setting, the actors in "Lieut. Dick" are not required to go about with guns at their hip, nor do they kill a man every morning before breakfast. The chief charm about "Lieut. Dick" is its entire naturalness. There is a pretty story of love, intrigue and adventure that is told with novel and dramatic effect, and all the characters are interpreted by people of unusual ability. The production is elaborate and of picturesque beauty.

The clever Russell Bros. have a new play this season which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Wednesday night next week. It is called "The Great Jewel Mystery" and is bigger and better than the drama they offered last season. This is saying much as "The Female Detectives" was certainly a very excellent and successful production. The new play is written by Mark E. Swan and tells a vigorous story of a robbery in high life and which may have been suggested by the late Philadelphia case. The great interest in the piece is centered in the work of the stars who as detectives assume various disguises among others, of course the Irish servant girls which will forever remain their greatest impersonations. The period of the play is the present and locality, New York city, one of the scenes suggests a famous Metropolitan hotel and many other landmarks are easily recognized. Mrs. John Russell is in the cast and has a stunning role, twenty other good players are named in the roster.

LITERARY.

The November issue of Suggestion (Chicago), a magazine of the New Psychology for thinkers, discusses the following subjects: Auto-suggestion, drugless healing, suggestive therapeutics, nature cure, law of suggestion in health and business, business psychology, psychic research, will power, dual personality, personal magnetism, thought force, hygiene, the realization of mental ideals, telepathy, psychic powers of the mind to overcome disease, bad habits, etc.

The feature of the American Illustrated Magazine for November is the first installment of a really absorbing novel by Mary Cholmondeley, called "Prisoners." The story is dramatic and emotional, the plot begins to unfold from the first page, and if one may judge from a first installment, it bids fair to surpass in interest the famous "Red Pottage," by the same author. The entire magazine is attractively illustrated, and there are a number of very interesting articles. Under the caption, "The Man Behind the Stars," E. Eldenkie Fyles tells of Clyde Fitch's power in the theatrical world, as maker of popular actresses. Charles H. Caffin continues his story of American painting, with a treatment of the beginnings of foreign influence; Frederic Tabor Cooper has a very readable article on "The Hopeful Tendency in 'Fiction,'" and Miss Laut writes the history of Baranof, the "Little Czar of the North," with characteristic charm. There is also a paper by Miss Call, on "Money Strain." The short stories are by Mrs. L. H. Harris, Arthur Train, Dorothy Canfield, Henry C. Rowland, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Henry A. Shute and Norman H. Crowell; Henry Wallace Phillips' serial concludes in this number.

'Americans will find a cure for the evils that now beset and hamper them," is the keynote to the remarkable new series of articles, "Soldiers of the Common Good," by Charles Edward Russell—articles descriptive of the wisest experiments that are being tried, the world over, with the ideal democracy in view. Read Mr. Russell's stirring "Foreword," in the November Everybody's, with its prophecy that the issue of all great sociological experiments will be "the rise of the common people," and you will conclude that his sincere, sympathetic, unhackneyed story of the struggles of present-day humanity promises to be something vital to every American. The new series seems particularly to the point in connection with such a blunt, out-and-out story of corruption as Mr. Lawson tells in this month's instalment of "Frenzied Finance." Some unknown facts about William A. Clark, of Montana; the story of H. H. Rogers' "delivery" of the United States Senate; and the true story of the collapse of the Globe Bank of Boston, are among the fragments of American financial history that Mr. Lawson now relates for the first time.

The November McClure's begins a new volume with the opening chapters of two great new series and a big Kipling story, which promise the magazine's continuance as torch-bearer in public affairs and the leader of excellence in present day literature. In this number Carl Schurz begins his "Reminiscences," the life story of a patriot-soldier-statesman-author, a fighting idealist who never compromised with his conscience. Ray Stennard Baker, with "The Railroad Rate," opens his series of articles on the greatest national perplexity, the outcome of more than a year's digging into the most difficult subject American voters have ever had to master. Last of the "articles" in November is the second half of Charles F. Lummis' breezy story "Pioneer Transportation in America," the epic of the heroic age of travel which waited till now for a writer. Kipling's most remarkable story is "With the Night Mail," in which he projects his wonderful imagination into the twenty-first century and takes a thrilling air-ship flight from London to Quebec. He has invented a new world of mechanics and found strange highways in the sky, which are pictured in color by Reuterdahl. In passing he glimpses a transformed earth so vividly real that it is hard to wake up to the fact that Utopia does not exist.

Montgomery Schuyler, who is one of the foremost writers on architectural topics in the United States, contributes to the Architectural Record Magazine for October a finished criticism on "The Bridges of New York," with some comparison of the same with foreign structures. As a rule bridges, especially railroad bridges, are ugly constructions, mere tools of traffic, and in effect the paper is a plea for a consideration of he claims of beauty in this department. The residence of Samuel Cabot, of Canton, Mass., is the subject of an article with many illustrations. A Tuxedo house, that of T. Harleston Deacon, is also illustrated and described. The pictures in both of these chapters are numerous. The City Hall at Copenhagen, by Olof Z. Ceroni, with a dozen illustrations, is an entertaining delineation of a contemporaneous European construction which the reader will have pleasure in comparing with American types. A private chapel in the vicinity of New York is the subject of an article by Carl Coleman. Notes and Comments complete the number.

In addition to the scientific work undertaken by the Philippine government, the President of the United States has recommended that a scientific survey of the islands be undertaken at the expense of the Federal Government. At his request the National Academy of Sciences appointed a committee to report on the desirability of instituting scientific explorations of the islands, and this report was transmitted to the last Congress by the President, with the recommendation that provision be made for the appointment of a board of surveys to superintend national surveys and explorations in the islands. This board would consist of representatives of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Geological Survey, the Biological Survey, the Division of Botany, the Forest Service, the Bureau of Fisheries and the Bureau of American Ethnology. The President urges that while these surveys would be beneficial to the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands, they should be undertaken as a national work valuable for the people of this country and of the world. It is to be hoped that Congress will find time to take up this measure at the approaching session.—The Popular Science Monthly for November.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Nov. 5: "The Triumphs of the Kingdom"—Ps. xcvi—Mission Study Rally Day.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

The riddle of the earth has ever been before the eyes of men since the first man opened his eyes upon it. How shall we think it? What can we do in it? are questions every one asks and in some manner must give answer to himself. Very slowly, but very surely, men have come to rationalize their experiences and to see that they are in a universe of material things. But a universe of matter requires a unifying spirit for existence. We cannot otherwise think it.

The riddle of human society has ever been before the eyes of men since the first man looked on the first woman and she answered look by look, ever since the first babe lay in the arms of the first mother, ever since the first two children of the race grasped hands. How shall we think of ourselves and our relations to others? What can we do in the company of men? These are problems slower of solution than the earth question, deeper and more important and far more insistent of solution.

Numberless have been the attempted answers and the schemes built on them. Flaws in the argument and failure in the application have been the monotonous history of all efforts at a reasonable answer, yet with a margin of hope ever widening until one called Jesus has spoken truth from his inner consciousness and said that the spirit of the universe is the father of man and that all men should be brothers. The task he recognizes as ours in life is to make actual in our characters the possible divine sonship and make of human society the kingdom of God in love and righteousness.

This is the gospel that the church of Jesus Christ has committed to it to proclaim to all men. Whoever comes to open his eyes upon this truth lying at the center of all things and to see it as the vital fact of existence and comes to feel it strangely warming all the faculties of his nature in a glow of earnest desire to make this invisible life tangible and clear to sight passes into new life that is essentially the Christ given power of eternal, God centered existence.

He hears the God voice calling in the nighttime, calling in the daytime, in his soul to proclaim to all the summons of the Father to enter His kingdom. All ease, all profit, all honor, everything that under different light looks good in this light looks worthless. He hopes all things, endures all things with exulting confidence in the truth revealed to him in Jesus Christ. Every Christian knows this life in some degree. Whoever is stranger to it is not yet open eyed in the Master's mystery.

Now we are in a new era of mission effort. The church is deliberately, as never before, facing her task of evangelizing the world. If you are Christian you must take part in it. How can you best do it?

It is necessary to have a proper appreciation of your individual responsibility in the matter. You should know and feel the needs of the case. The great world, which knows not God in saving power, is to be told the story of the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord. This is the supreme duty of life. All else must yield to it. It is your duty above all other things to bend every energy to bring in the kingdom of God among men. Nothing which hinders this is to be indulged. You should know how the work goes on. That means study. You must keep track in as large degree as possible of the condition and needs of the field and workers and by money, prayer and every other means assist all and every one to reach the desired consummation in the kingdom.

That means co-operation with every effort and every worker with whom we may come into alliance to advance the cause. Give yourself in every way to this work at home and abroad. Become absorbed in it.

Glowing Tribute to Christ's Gospel.

I challenge any man to show me anything better, anything more suited to man and his wants, than the gospel of Christ. It is better than philosophy. Philosophy can only disclose, only describe and classify. It cannot heal; it cannot cure. It is like a physician who knows the disease, but has no remedy, while the gospel of Christ not only lays bare the malady, but prescribes an infallible and universal cure. Education can only call out and develop what is in fallen man, but the gospel recreates man's heart and nature and then lifts him up to the fullness of the stature of Christ. Education stops at the surface; the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation, penetrates to the center of man's necessities. It is better than morality. Morality is conformity to law. When perfect, it is a star rolling on in its God appointed orbit. But man has broken law; the star has swerved from its orbit. Morality cannot bring it back and keep it in its course. The gospel can. It brings man back to God, makes him at one with God, gives man a new start and keeps him safe in his heavenward course. The gospel is better than philanthropy. Philanthropy is the love of man as man and for man. Christianity is the love of man for God and the love of God in man. The one would better man's condition here; the other would not only save man now, but would lift him to where he belongs—to heaven and to God.—Rev. F. A. Noble.

Folly of Trifling With Sin.

Never trifle with one sin. It is like a little cloud which, as a poet has said, may hold a hurricane in its grasp. The next sin you commit may have a mighty effect in the blighting of your life. You do not know the streams that may flow from that fountain, for sin is a fountain—not a mere act, but a fountain of evil.—Andrew A. Bonar.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 5.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Am I keeping my Christian Endeavor covenant?—Mal. ii, 5, 6; Ps. ii, 6; II Cor. viii, 21. (Consecration meeting.)

There is no reason why any Christian Endeavorer should not keep his Endeavor covenant, known as the Christian Endeavor pledge. It is possible of being kept, nor is there anything about it of an ironclad character that needs to be abandoned. Pledges of even more binding character are taken almost every day in life. The obligations of church membership are more binding and exacting when conscientiously understood when they are taken. The marriage vow is much more binding, and yet very few young people are unwilling to assume it, and to their praise it may be noted that the vast, vast majority are true and faithful to it. All precedents go to show that the Endeavor pledge is not impossible of being kept.

We base our fidelity to keep the pledge (1) upon the faithfulness of Christ to us and (2) to conditions. The first clause is, "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength." We make no pledge upon personal strength. It is based upon the strength of Christ. Therefore whoever doubts his willingness to keep the pledge doubts Christ's willingness and power and not his own. And who will do this? We "can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth us." Moreover, the pledge is conditional. Every promise taken is guarded by the principle, "Unless I can give a conscientious reason to my Master." If we have a good reason for not taking part in a meeting or attending the midweek service, we are absolved from the promise to do these things, and, if we have not, why should we not do them? What Christian without excuse should refuse to testify for Christ, and what Christian, if he has no excuse, should neglect the services of his church? These are our plain duties if we had never taken the Christian Endeavor pledge, and so are all the other promises in it. It can be perfectly kept, and the keeping thereof will be a blessing to all who have taken it. Christian life and Christian peace are produced by keeping the pledge.

In addition to the fact that there is no reason why any Endeavorer should fail to keep the pledge there is every reason why he should. First, duty to God demands that we keep the pledge, "Thou desireth truth in the inward parts." When we make a vow unto God He expects us to keep it. Second, duty to men demands that we keep the pledge. Paul urges us to stand "for honest things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men." We take the pledge before men. If we are indifferent to it and break it we lose caste among men. The man who does not keep his pledged word cannot long keep the confidence of his fellow men. These are not arguments against taking the pledge. We should take it, but having taken it we should keep it. The Lord can and will help us to do so if we will really trust Him.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. xxviii, 20-22; Num. xxi, 1-3; xxx, 1, 2; Deut. xxiii, 21; Eccl. v, 4, 5; Ps. l, 14; lxxvi, 11; Col. iii, 17; Jas. i, 22-27; Rev. ii, 10.

An English Opinion.

The marvel of Christian Endeavor consists in its adaptability to all countries, while at the same time proving its suitability to all evangelical denominations. * * * And what of the results? The results are seen in every church where a Christian Endeavor society has been formed. The young people are bound closer together in service; they are more efficient in service, are more loyal to the church and more inspired to lead true Christian lives. Christian Endeavor has meant advance in many a church and in many a life. Thank God for Endeavor!—Editorial in Christian Commonwealth, London.

Optimism.

At three national conventions held during July at Denver, Baltimore and Asbury Park—those of the Epworth league, Christian Endeavor society and Educational association, respectively—nearly 60,000 delegates and visitors assembled. Many of them in each case had traveled long distances at their own expense to seek inspiration and instruction for greater usefulness. Granted that there are dangerous tendencies in American life, a single fact like this outweighs many that seem to make for pessimism.—Youth's Companion.

Baltimore Convention Notes.

Dr. Tomkins gave this message for the young people to carry to their ministers: "Tell them that an obscure minister down in Philadelphia says that every minister should go into his Christian Endeavor society and stay all through and go there every time."

The message from Japan, brought by Mr. Knipp: "In the midst of war we are at peace. In the midst of war we work for peace. The motto of our societies for the coming year is, 'Improve and increase.' Our counsel to the Endeavorers of the lands of the west is, 'Be strong in the Lord and in the strength of His might.'"

The following cablegram was received from the European convention at Berlin: "Europe's united Endeavorers' hopeful greetings to America." The following reply was sent: "America and Europe united by the cable of Christian Endeavor."

This cablegram came from the antipodes: "New South Wales to beautiful Baltimore:

"We are not divided,
All one body we,
One in hope and doctrine,
One in charity."

All returns are not in, but a goodly number of societies report 10 per cent gain.

The Perspective

When looking at the relative values of home comforts, the Gas Radiator looms up in the foreground, casting other conveniences into the shadow. For taking the chill from rooms which the furnace does not reach or can not sufficiently heat, it is invaluable. Small, inconspicuous, portable, and of handsome design, it is an addition to any home.

A SPURRED PROPOSAL

After dinner at the barracks, the officers of the White Hussars, a group of fine young fellows, stood idly lounging on the beautiful terrace overlooking the city. Lieutenant Kirby directly turned to one of his comrades, and, taking him by the arm, said mischievously:

"It's out, old boy; we all know it, and you might as well confess."

The young officer thus addressed was a singularly handsome fellow, with a fine bearing and large, honest blue eyes.

"What are you driving at?" he responded, curiously.

"Don't look so surprised," replied the other. "Every one here knows that you are engaged to Miss Kitty Darass."

"They know more than I do then," was the calm rejoinder. "I happened to lead the cotillon with her the other night at Lady Ashe's, and because I have been seen riding with her and her brother, it follows, forsooth, that I am engaged to the lady! It is just what you might expect in a little garrison town."

"That's all very well, Ben, but if I had been in your place I should have looked nearer home. Colonel Gregory loves you like a son, and Miss Madeline is a most bewitching young lady! But Bobby Erskine seems the favored mortal at present."

That produced a distinct effect.

"Erskine and Madeline—little Mad! Why, she is only a child!"

"That shows all you know about it," said Kirby, teasingly. "Children have a way of growing up and suddenly becoming fascinating young ladies!"

Bernard Worthington did not reply. He had received a shock, and it was not long before he made some excuse and hastily quitted the company of his fellow officers. He walked rapidly in the direction of the colonel's house. The curtains were not yet drawn and showed the large parlor brilliantly lighted, but the balcony, Madeline's favorite place, was empty.

The lieutenant was just about to ring the bell when the young girl's laugh rang out clearly above his head. Without doubt Bobby Erskine was there.

Bernard turned away, furious with himself and everyone else. The impudent young puppy! What business had he to be coming around Madeline? And why hadn't he, Bernard, seen that the colonel's daughter was no longer a child, but a beautiful young lady? Did it need a comrade to make him recognize the transformation? The lieutenant kicked himself mentally.

Returning to his rooms he sat for a long time watching the silvery moonlight that flooded the window. He could think of nothing but Madeline, and now she must detest him for his domineering ways, entirely forgetting the many little courtesies that no one but he had shown the colonel's tomboy daughter. Bernard's mind was full only of the sharp speech he had made her a few days before, when her levity had seemed particularly ill-timed, and the memory of a tear she had dashed away became intolerable. In fact, that single tear prevented him from sleeping. He tossed and turned in vain.

At last with the dawn and an early ride through the cool country the lieutenant succeeded in getting some order in the confused chaos of his ideas. Promptly at 10 o'clock he made his way once more to the colonel's door, and this time he did not hesitate as he rang the bell.

The maid led him to the back of the house, where a wide piazza overlooked the beautiful garden.

Troubled, his heart beating wildly, a thousand confused ideas rushing madly through his head, Bernard looked about him. The piazza was deserted. But down under one of the big trees the young fellow caught a glimpse of a white dress.

He hastened down the steps and surprised Madeline reading, or rather, pretending to read, though her attitude was listless, and it seemed to the lieutenant that she looked sad. He stammered an excuse for his early visit.

"Are you not always welcome?" she said in answer to his excuse.

"I wanted to make sure of a little visit with you," he said. "I shall probably be very busy for the next two or three days."

"Was that the reason you did not come to see us last night?" asked Mad., a trifle bitterly.

"Last night? No! I—I had a headache."

"Doubtless your new duties as fiance prevented you also. How is the attractive Miss Kitty?"

"Confound Miss Kitty! Do you believe that cock-and-bull story, too, Mad?" I thought you had more sense than to credit every story that the gossips in this infernal place set going," growled Bernard. A sudden smile crossed Madeline's piquant face, but she repressed it instantly.

"Why, but I thought she was an intelligent lady—so well balanced and methodical. Quite the vision of your dreams," she added, a spice of malice in her tone.

"She is a thousand miles from being the lady of my dreams," declared the lieutenant warmly, looking earnestly at his pretty companion. "She? Never! She has none of the charm, the freshness, the wit, that would attract me. I want at least a show of tenderness in the woman to whose mercies I intrust my heart. Some one who will love me, if only a little. Besides, Mad," he added, suddenly restraining his impetuous outbreak, "you might have trusted me enough to know that I would have told you before any one else if it was anything serious. Do you trust me at all, Mad?" he asked, after a pause.

The young girl looked surprised.

"Because if you do," Bernard continued without waiting for an answer, "I want to ask you a question. May I?"

Madeline nodded her head in assent.

"Tell me, then, is it true that you have encouraged young Erskine?"

The colonel's daughter moved impatiently, but Bernard braved her displeasure.

"I cannot tell you how much I hope it is not so," he went on. "Bobby is a good chap, but not at all the kind of a fellow for you. You would never be happy with him for an instant. I realize that what I am saying and doing may seem unworthy of an officer and a gentleman, but, oh! Mad, I desire your happiness more than anything else in the world and I cannot bear to see you throw yourself away upon a man who I know is not worthy."

"Thank you," said Mad, after a slight pause. "I did not know that Mr. Erskine was desirous of making me his wife. Certainly I have never, never given him the smallest encouragement in such an idea. If ever I marry it will be a man to whom I can give my whole confidence, some one whose companion I will be both glad and proud to become, and who will be gentle and kind with me."

Bernard looked at her. He had never seen her in this mood before. She had always flouted him whenever he had tried to be serious.

"What a brute you must think me, Mad," he murmured contritely. "How could I ever have been such an ass as to scold you?"

Madeline moved her hands in a pretty gesture of denial and her eyes spoke eloquently. Bernard looked at her, scarcely daring to hope. Behind the blue eyes lay a love too strong to be denied, and the young man seized both the white hands in his. Just then Colonel Gregory strolled into the garden.

"Oh, colonel, colonel!" cried Bernard, turning toward the piazza, "will you—would you——"

"Will I, would I what?" he asked.

"Now you are jesting with me. Give me Madeline for my wife. I beg you, I love her."

The colonel called to Mrs. Gregory, who was inside.

"My dear, what is your advice?" he asked, smiling. "Here is Bernard, who declares he wants Madeline for his wife because he loves her. Do you think it can be true?"

Mrs. Gregory looked happily at her daughter.

What do you say, dear? Are you not afraid of such a severe husband?"

Madeline glanced blushingly up to where her mother and father were standing. Then she turned frankly to the eager young fellow beside her and gave him her hand.

Lieutenant Kirby was mistaken, but his jest brought on the proposal. —Hollynde Ropeare, in The 400.

FROM THE FAR WEST.

About thirty pioneers of Utah, survivors of a party which in 1851 made the journey over the trail from Salt Lake to Los Angeles, departed on October 9 from Salt Lake to Los Angeles over the Salt Lake Railroad, as guests of Senator William A. Clark. The party, in special Pullmans, were to go over practically the same route that they traveled by wagon and on foot in 1851.

A 22,000-pound blast of dynamite was exploded at the Cherokee mine, near Chico, Cal., on October 8, and blew down a rocky precipice 400 feet high. This was done to expose paydirt behind the rock.

Dr. Thodore Zincke, professor of chemistry in the University of Marburg, Germany, who passed through Chicago the other day on his way home from the Orient, said he never before received such discourteous treatment as was given him when he entered the United States. On his way to Seattle he was "treated like a Chinaman" and forced to pay a fee of $2—poll tax—before he was allowed to cross the boundary line.

The cornerstone of a new German hospital was laid in San Francisco on October 8. The hospital will cost $400,000 and will be one of the best arranged and equipped in the world. It will be the work of the German General Benevolent Society.

It is expected that the 100,000-acre tracts belonging to the Stanford estate, which form part of the university endowment, will be cut up into small farms and sold. The property is assessed at nearly $1,000,000.

Secretary Taft has made himself very popular in San Francisco and central California by deciding that the proposed railway bridge over Conguiner Straits, through which all the traffic of the San Joaquin and tributary waters passes, must be erected on piers and at a height of sixty feet above water. The railway company wanted a causeway, with a draw.

THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION ORCHESTRA IS MAKING A REPUTATION

Y. M. C. A. Orchestra. —(Photo by Stone.)

The Y. M. C. A. orchestra has started its fourth season with the promise of a greater degree of success and popularity than it has enjoyed yet. It has thirty-eight members, more than ever before, and the majority of the players are finished and enthusiastic musicians, trained to a great extent in orchestra playing. No town of it size has an orchestra better than Plainfield's, and many towns of much larger size would be quite willing to exchange their orchestras for the one in this city.

The players are as follows:

Violins—A. Paronbek, W. F. Malin, George Speir, James Nolton, C. E. Herring, E. C. Martin, J. W. Binninger, C. T. Fisher, F. Borrup, G. A. Comes, D. Dreier, R. Barnes, Robert Hand, A. B. Duke, I. L. Williamson, Herbert Smith, W. Gaston, Clarence Lawrence, C. R. Heaume, Harry Brick. 'Cellos—Dr. J. F. Berg, Otto Muller. Basses—Dr. J. H. Buchanan, Jacob Bye. Flutes—A. Hallard, Louis Clauss, W. Sampson, A. P. Wheeler. Clarinets—James Hewitt, U. S. Wardner. Cornets—W. Frazee, G. H. Bennett, E. Towney, E. H. Guest. Trombones—Kenneth Sutart, Mr. McKeon. Drum, Frank Manchester.

M. A. Korff is the director and has been since its organization.

The orchestra was organized in January, 1902. The first concert was given April 7 of that year, and scored a great success. The succeeding concerts have been a repetition of that success in increasing measure.

In the Y. M. C. A. Hall the orchestra has given twenty separate concerts, not counting repeats. tI has played for or assisted fifteen churches. Between seventy-five and eighty men have been connected with the orchestra at one time or another since its organization. Changes have mostly come through removals from the city.

All the players are volunteers, and all the money cleared over expenses, through the silver offerings at concerts, is given to the Y. M. C. A. No fees or dues are charged the members.

The orchestra has all the elements of permanent and abiding strength. Prominent business and professional men are in its ranks, and a spirit of enthusiasm marks the entire organization.

HER BANK ACCOUNT

Elizabeth woke up that morning with a determination to save her money. She reviewed the excesses of the past with a contrite heart.

"Still," she apologized to herself, "I had to do things right while Nan was here."

Nan had left the day before. She had almost left on six previous occasions. That is, she and Elizabeth had got to the point of two farewell luncheons, three farewell drives and farewell matinees with an automobile ride. Life had begun to look like a continuous series of expensive last occasions.

But the unexpected is always happening. Nan left.

"Elizabeth," she said at the station, "we have been extravagant. From now on we must save."

"I shall save every penny," replied Elizabeth with energy. "I am positively going to board."

Then they paid the cabman, bought several magazines, a bunch of roses, enough fruit to suggest the necessity of Nan's going by freight and bade each other a tearful farewell.

* * * * * * * * *

"The only way to do it," Elizabeth told herself the following morning, " is to keep a bank account. Then my money will be where I can get it."

She immediately rose and began to work out the time and amount of her first deposit. She found she had $1.20 in cash on hand, which was a great and pleasant surprise. She also discovered that she owed $17 to various members of her family.

"Now," she said, "if I am careful I can get by debts paid up and can put $5 in the bank two weeks from today. That is quite a start."

She felt as thrifty as if the deposit were already made. She even hoped that she was not becoming parsimonious.

At breakfast the thought suddenly occurred to her that day after tomorrow was her mother's birthday, and she had planned to give her mother a vase that was rather expensive. "But I can have it charged," she decided, "and the bill won't come in for a month." As a financier she considered that she was coming on.

While Nan was at her house Elizabeth had been so busy entertaining her that other friends had been neglected. Reparation could not begin too soon. "I'll go up to Josie's first," she said, and began to lay out a campaign of excuses for her long absence. She felt that the excuses would be needed. In general Josie had theories of friendship for her friends to practice, and in particular she did not look with favor upon Nan. To be neglected for that chit!

Now een a man knows the balm of chocolates to a woman's outraged feelings. On her way to Josie's Elizabeth paused before Josie's favorite candy shop. She was walking to save carfare. "It would be nice to take a box of chocolates," she murmured hesitatingly, "but I simply can't afford it. Still Ted gave that box to Nan to eat on the train, and I didn't have to buy one, as I had expected; so there is that money I really ought not to count on. Fifty cents won't help me much, anyhow."

Five minutes later she continued on her way, with a telling auxiliary to the campaign and seventy cents in cash on hand.

Josie proved obdurate. She received the excuses stonily. Even the chocolates failed to hit the right spot. "I should have thought," said she—between bites—"that you could have spared one afternoon in three weeks."

"But, Josie——"

"Oh, there is no excuse that fits the case, Elizabeth. You were too much occupied with your friend, that's all. Of course, now that she has left and there isn't anyone else——"

Elizabeth watched the consumption of a nut cream dejectedly. Then she had an inspiration. "Josie," she said humbly, "won't you come down tomorrow and lunch with me?"

Josie haughtily consented.

"I can't stay another minute now," said Elizabeth, delighted, "and there are a lot more things I want to say, but we can talk them all over tomorrow. And tomorrow is matinee day, too, if there is anything you would like to see."

It was worthy of a seasoned diplomat. And in her excitement Elizabeth had forgotten her precious bank account.

When she got home a caller had been waiting for some time.

"Why, Flo," exclaimed Elizabeth, "I'm awfully glad to see you. It is months and months since the last time. Do tell me all about yourself."

"I'll do it," laughed Flo, "and I won't lose any time. I am going to be married next Monday."

"Oh!" cried Elizabeth. "A big wedding, Flo?"

"No, I'm going to have the tiniest kind of wedding, but I am asking a few of my oldest friends, and of course I want you, Elizabeth."

"I wonder," thought Elizabeth, after her visitor had gone, "whether she wouldn't like one of those Japanese lamps for a wedding gift."

That evening Elizabeth met her morning resolutions face to face.

"Perhaps the bank I was going to put my money in might break, anyhow," she said, trying to find consolation.

Then, because things looked so hopeless, she treated her family to soda on her remaining seventy cents. —Chicago News.

No Pay for State Official.

Today marks the beginning of the fiscal year in this State. The cash balance to the credit of the State is $2,285,389.13. Deputy State Controller Isaac Doughten, of Camden, retires from office today because no provision has been made to pay his salary. The item was vetoed last winter by Governor Stokes because the Legislature sought to increase it from $2,500 to $3,600. It is expected that the next Legislature will make a special appropriation for the resumption of the deputy controllership.

Rev. George Mooney will address the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mrs. R. E. Humpstone, of the First Baptist church choir, will be the soloist and Otto Muller will render 'cello solos.

OLD HATS.

The problem of the fall girl is one of hats. There is nothing which becomes shabby so soon, nor is so hopeless looking when it is shabby, as a straw hat. It is just at this time in the year that Arabella, looking over her headwear, decides she has nothing fit to be seen.

Her blue hat has been painted until it is all sorts of shades and as polka dotted as a circus horse; her white hat is yellow, and has been treated with oxalic acid and peroxide of hydrogen to its undoing; the flowers which were pink on her best chapeau are now a dingy white; her sailor hat is out of shape; the ribbon on all is creased and soiled.

It's much too early to buy a new bonnet, and the question which causes Arabella to knit her pretty brows and look thoughtful is what she shall wear on her head until it is time for fall things.

Sometimes she takes her four summer hats and out of them makes one quasi-respectable one which will do at a pinch until the season ends; sometimes she just goes on wearing the old ones, covering them up with veils and bending them before the mirror into shapes their makers little wotted they would ever take.

"Stay there," says Arabella, bending one up in front and pursing her lips in the violence of her efforts; "stay there and try to look respectable, if you can, while I take you downtown."

There was a young woman the other day with millinerial ideas, so to speak, who fas constructing a love of a hat out of two straw ones, a last winter's one and a pair of wings.

She had procured a toque shape from a shop, and this she covered with the straw braid from the summer hats. She turned the braid, and it looked quite nice and fresh; then she put it on in alternate rows of red and white—the straw hats had been one red and one white.

She took some red velvet from a last winter's hat for trimming, put on the wings stiffy, and had a very fetching little autumn bonnet for next to nothing.

For the home milliner there is no better friend than the veil. It covers a multitude of sins in the way of trimming and lack of trimming.

The chiffon veil is an American institution, the use of which is to be deplored in a way, but if it ever had an excuse for being it is in the fall, when hats are old and hats are scarce and it's too early for velvet and felt ones and the conventionalities require that one wear something on her head.

However, if any of the readers has no knack as a milliner, and will not wear veils, she need feel no hesitancy about wearing a hat that has been cleaned and painted and dyed and reshaped, and is, nevertheless, a wreck, for she will find that she has plenty of company.—Baltimore News.

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., cor. Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J." GRIGGS ON TOLSTOY.

Lecture Series Ends With Study of Philosopher.

Prof. Griggs ended his lectures on the great moral leaders of history at Vincent chapel Wednesday night, with a study of the life and ideals of Leo Tolstoy.

Tolstoy is the only contemperaneous philosopher and reformer Prof. Griggs has studied in the series, and his views had a certain interest absent from the others for that reason. He was reserved and contained in his estimates of the great Russian publicist, and as far as his listeners were qualified to judge, as coldly and impartially fair to the character under discussion as history herself, settled by the illuminating years, might be.

Prof. Griggs admires Tolstoy for his absolutely unreserved surrender to his ideal of Christianity. As he understands the Gospels, so he lives them. Christ preached a communistic life, as Tolstoy understands his teachings, and that is the life that Tolstoy lives.

Truly as he is a great moral leader, and entitled to rank with Socrates and Carlisle and historical figures of that calibre, Tolstoy, Prof. Griggs holds, has set ideals and held ideas which the world cannot follow nor understand. His condemnation of every existing institution is too sweeping. In this connection Prof. Griggs declared his disbelief in the fairness of off-hand Utopias.

"In the long run," he said, "they are not as fair to the majority of the people who take part in them as the scheme of ordinary business. This conclusion I have come to after careful thought over the problem."

BIG IMPROVEMENTS AT COMMUNIPAW YARDS

JERSEY CENTRAL WILL EXPEND $1,500,000 IN RECLAIMING GROUND.

At an estimated cost of $1,500,000, the Central Railroad of New Jersey is going to make the greatest improvements in the Communipaw section of Jersey City that has been attempted since the company first began using that end of the city for a terminus. The job undertaken will completely change the appearance of the locality and the shore front on New York Bay.

The maps and drawings for the work were made by J. O. Osgood, of the borough, chief engineer of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and his assistants at the Jersey City station. The improvement itself entails filling in work which will reclaim a mile square of meadow and swampy land extending from a point south of the present yard tracks to a point in New York Bay, and from the river front to nearly Philip street.

The award for the filling in was given to W. A. Taylor, of Jersey City. Work will not be stopped until the whole scheme has been entirely carried out, although for the present but part of the job will be completed.

The rapid increase in the Central's business has compelled the acquirement of more yard room and the only way to get it was to reclaim the swamps and the shallow part of the shore front, and all this is involved in the present plans. The work is exactly the same as that which the Pennsylvania Railroad is now carrying on at Greenville south of the yard now being used, and which in about three years will be part of it.

The work has been begun by dredging on the shore. The mud removed is carried back and dumped, thereby accomplishing two things at the same time. A bulkhead will be built around the limit on the water front, extending toward Black Tom. When the filling in has been completed tracks will be laid and the Central will have the largest and finest yard in Jersey City.

A bulkhead will not all be built for the present. A small stretch of it will be built south of the ferry slips on the river front and later the balance will be built. One new open pier will be built, 1,100 feet long, to start with, and in due time others will follow; in fact, the entire new water line in time will contain a series of piers, docks and coal trestles, which will make it the most spacious water front railroad yard and delivery point in Hudson county. It will be at least a year and a half before the filling in work has been completed and the other improvements will follow. Among other things planned for the future in connection with the plans of Chief Engineer Osgood is a naw and spacious roundhouse in the lower part of the yard.

WIFE SUES FOR MAINTENANCE.

Her Eighteen-Year-Old Husband Lost Divorce Case.

Vice Chancellor Stevenson, in Jersey City, has postponed until next Monday non-support proceedings instituted by Mrs. Marie Lola Williams, of Morristown, against her husband, Percy Ellsworth Williams, of Roseland. The complainant is seventeen years old and the defendant eighteen. They eloped while attending the High School at Roseland.

Williams' father, who is wealthy, sent his son t oa distant college and induced the young man to enter suit for a divorce, alleging that it was not a legal marriage, because both were under age. The suit was decided in favor of the girl-wife. The young couple returned immediately to their respective homes after their marriage in 1904.

Laid at Democrat's Door.

It is difficult to trace to its source the rumor from Elizabeth that the Union County Grand Jury has indicted a Plainfield speak-easy proprietor who purchased his beer from the Rising Sun brewery. Such a report would ordinarily be regarded as a canard started by some wicked Democrat unless the saloon-keeper in question was really arraigned and forced to plead. It must be remembered, though, that this is an off year, and queer things are happening that have not been down on the cards in the past.—Newark News.

Young Woman Gets $50 Damages.

Elizabeth, Nov. 2.—In the suit for $1,000 damages brought by Miss Mary Hewitt, of Rahway, against Mrs. Mary Blore, of that city, whom the plaintiff charges with beating her with a switch at Boynton Beach last June because Miss Hewitt kept company with Mrs. Blore's son, which was tried Monday in the Union County Circuit Court, the jury brought in a verdict of $50 for the plaintiff.

Rev. E. B. Joyce announced to the congregation at Christ church, New Brunswick, Sunday, that the vestry had decided that the work of the parish was too onerous to be satisfactorily performed by the rector without assistance, and that a curate was to be secured. He went on to say that it was desired to have $1,000 on hand and ready for the purpose of paying the salary of the curate, as soon as he shall be appointed.

GOFF PLEADING NOT GUILTY TO BE TRIED NOV. 17

Alleged Speakeasy Proprietor Released on Bail For His Appearance.

OTHERS ARE INDICTED

Annie Daley Pleads Not Guilty to Larceny — Merker Answers Non Vult — Baldwin Says "Guilty."

John J. Goff, the local hotel man, on whose place the sensational raid was made by Councilmen Tyler and Bullock two months ago, was arraigned in the Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth this morning, on a charge of selling liquor without a license, an indictment having been found against him by the last Grand Jury. He entered a plea of not guilty and trial was set down for Friday, November 17. Bail was fixed at $200, and it was furnished by William H. Reynolds, of Elizabeth.

Although it was reliably reported that Goff had been indicted some days ago, it was not official known until yesterday, when the summons was served upon him by Constable Peter Weaver. In anticipation of his hearing the court room was well filled with spectators, but the proceedings were very brief.

There were several other arraignments, among them Annie Daley, of this city, charged with the larceny of silverware valued at $25. She pleaded not guilty and trial will take place on Thursday, November 16.

Tony Ross, Nicholas Becitti, John Laretti and Dominick Panpanelle, all of Westfield, who committed an atrocious assault on John Clearwater at Westfield, several weeks ago, pleaded not guilty to the charge, and were held in $500 bail each. The amount was furnished by Matthew Wade, of Elizabeth, for all except Ross, and he was committed to jail.

Fred Merker, the Newark young man who stole machine fixtures from the Singer Company factory, entered a plea of non vult to an indictment for larceny. He will be sentenced on Wednesday, November 22, bail being fixed at $500. It was furnished by Lawyer Nugent.

John Baldwin, who stole $1,000 worth of jewelry from the home of Wallace M. Scudder, at Summit, pleaded guilty and will be sentenced November 22. Shortly after his arrest and confinement in the county jail Baldwin attempted to commit suicide by piercing his ears and bleeding to death.

Pleas of not guilty were entered by Benjamin W. Brown, of Cranford, indicted for larceny, and Henry Maul, of Cranford, indicted for assault and battery on his mother. Both will be tried on November 16, bail in each instance being fixed at $200.

DIOCESAN MEETING ENDS.

Girls' Friendly Society Delegates Transact Little Business.

The diocesan meeting of the Girls' Friendly Society at Grace P. E. church yesterday afternoon was a brief affair. Very little business was transacted, and what there was was of largely of a routine nature. Mrs. W. D. Hewitt, of Burlington, presided.

The feature of the session was an address by Miss Hopkins, of Worcester, Mass. She spoke of the field, the opportunities, and the methods of the working associates—the women who direct the branches. Miss Hopkins attended a big G. F. S. gathering in New York last week, and she told her hearers something of the leading addresses on the work made there.

No social hour followed the adjournment, shortly after 4 o'clock. The score of delegates dispersed for their homes immediately after the session ended.

Literary Club's First Meeting.

The literary club of Bethel chapel will hold its first meeting for the season at the chapel tonight at 8 o'clock. There will be a musical and literary programme, including a paper by Joseph Jones, vocal selections by Edward Blair and Miss Lou Lewis, piano solos by Miss Alice Maynard and recitations by Miss Chase Holmes.

Got the Resolution.

Letters acknowledging the receipt of copies of the resolution calling for the charges against Chief Kiely were received by Secretary Harry Marshall, of the Police Commission, from Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh and President of the Council Daniel this morning. The letters made no comment on the charges, making merely business-like reference to the resolution.

MATINEE RACES TOMORROW.

Some Good Heats Promised on the Driving Park Track.

An attractive programme of matinee rases has been arranged for Saturday afternoon at the Plainfield Driving Park, commencing at 1 o'clock. There will be three good races, and Robert A. Fairbairn, J. Wesley Johnson and W. A. Coddington have been secured as judges. Edward Allen will be the starter. The races will include Class A for 2:24 pacers; Class B for 2:30, trot or pace, and Class C for 2:40 trotters. Admission to the races will be free and all lovers of good racing are invited to attend. These entries have been received:

Class A—Bessie D., Mr. Suydam; Jack Spratt, Edward Kinsey; Harry Dawson, A. C. Blair.

Class B—Bobs, N. B. Smalley; Hartwood Belle, J. Wesley Johnson; Lady Trivol, J. H. Greene; John Wilson, B. W. Waldron; Ben B., A. C. Blair.

Class C—Red Lynn, Charles Smith; Ruby Stranger, Harry Evans; Alletta, Myers Hodge; Kid Shay, Charles Brower. The first two named are from Westfield, the third from Somerville and the last named from Plainfield.

TIMBO SOCIAL CLUB'S BALL.

Good Time at First Annual Entertainment.

Branching out from the "stag" affairs that it has been in the custom of giving, the Timbo Social Club once more came to the fore as a "live" organization, last night, by conducting its first annual ball in Saengerbund Hall. Several hundred people were in attendance and like all the other Timbo Club functions, success was evident from the time Suhr's Imperial orchestra first struck up. The guests included many visitors from Elizabeth, New Brunswick and other places and well known residents of the city and borough.

The dancing floor was well occupied all night and for those who did not care to trip the light fantastic, entertainment was provided in the supper room by the Minnion Brothers, of Newark. They are three in number and with a repertoirs of new songs and mandolin and guitar accompaniment they proved a great attraction. "Big Chief" Timbo was on hand early and late and did everything possible to help out the committee in seeing that everyone was made right at home.

The affair was directly in charge of James J. Kane, chairman; Theodore Larue, Alden Wagner, John Conway, John Powers and Thomas Fay. Charles Flynn, Lorenzo Townley and John Conway were on the door, and Douglas Hall had charge of the coat room.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING.

Big Rally Will Be Held in Reform Hall Tonight.

The Democrats of the city expect to have a big time at their rally in Reform Hall tonight. Practically all the county and city candidates will be present.

Edward Nugent, the Senatorial candidate, and Noah Woodruff, the shrievalty candidate, will speak. James E. Martine will preside. This will be the first time Nugent has appeared before the voters here, and on account of the fuss made over the Mayor's refusal to let him speak on the street last week his speech is awaited with much more than usual interest. It is very likely that he will make some reference to the incident.

* PUPILS' MASQUE DANCE.

Merry Affair at the Casino Last Night.

Under the auspices of the Plainfield High School dancing class, of which Mrs. Westcott is the instructor, a masque dance was given at the Casino, last night. There were thirty-five couples present and the music was furnished by Miss Mary Collier and Miss Florence Smalley.

After an hour's dancing the young folks removed their masks. Prior to that time they had a jolly time, the masks being so clever that it was almost impossible to tell one another. The dancing was then continued until 11 o'clock. It is likely that another similar affair will be held in the near future.

No Matinee Today.

It was impossible to give a matinee of "The Shadows of a Great City" at the New Plainfield theatre, this afternoon, owing to the non-arrival of scenery and tank on time. It requires four hours to get sufficient water in the big receptacle for the river scene and it was noon before the company's car reached the city from Chester, Pa. The play will be given in its entirety tonight and the advance sale indicates a big house.

The Daily Press of today consists of twelve pages.

"SOMETHING DOING" AT CITS' MASS MEETING

LAST GUNS IN CAMPAIGN TO BE FIRED TOMORROW NIGHT,

During the meeting of the Citizens in Spencer Hall, last night, it was hinted several times that there would be "something doing" at the big mass meeting in Saengerbund Hall tomorrow night. The party members evidently have several last shots to fire but what they are is all guesswork at present.

Several prominent speakers will address this gathering and music will be furnished by the Crescent Band, of Raritan. A list of fifty or more residents has been prepared to act as vice presidents and it is asserted that everyone has been seen and will be present. These vice presidents are as follows:

Ex-Mayor John H. Van Winkle, ex-Mayor Henry E. Needham, ex-Mayor Justus H. Cooley, William H. Shotwell, Edwin A. Overton, B. J. Shreve, Lewis E. Barkalew, William W. Howland, Edwin L. Bonney, John H. Van Winkle, Jr., Frank W. Jones, T. S. Armstrong, A. V. D. Honeyman, David Bodine, Julius J. Stahl, E. D. Hutchinson, Jacob Voehl, Walter C. Limbarger, Dr. J. H. Buchanan, Thomas E. LAURELS FOR MRS. ROGERS.

For the Second Time She is Woman Golf Champion.

For the second time since the honors have been played for, Mrs. H. Pendleton Rogers, of this city, won the women's championship of the Baltusrol Golf Club, yesterday, by defeating Mrs. Fellowes Morgan in the final play, by a score of 4 up and 3 to play.

The first year, 1902, when the women competed for club honors, Mrs. Manice was the successful contestant. The following year Mrs. Rogers won the championship and last year she lost it on a technicality, Mrs. M. D. Patterson being successful. By winning the championship this year, Mrs. Rogers has but to win the honors once more to permanently possess the handsome trophy offered by the club.

On Wednesday Mrs. Rogers defeated Miss Julia Mix, by 3 up and 1 to play and this brought her in the finals with Mrs. Morgan, yesterday. The playing throughout was very close and the honors won by Mrs. Rogers were well deserved. All the playing was from scratch. At the termination of the match yesterday Mrs. Rogers received many congratulations upon her fine work.

A HEARTS' PARTY.

In Honor of Miss Florence Serrell.

In honor of her sister, Miss Florence Serrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Serrell, whose marriage to John Peake Reynolds, Jr., will occur on Thursday, November 9, her sister, Miss Marguerite Serrell, gave a heart party at her home yesterday afternoon. The decorations were chiefly chrysanthemums, which were used with good effect throughout the parlor and reception room.

There were five tables and the game of hearts was played most of the afternoon. Three prizes were offtrtd. Mrs. Joseph Davis Phillips, of Netherwood, won first prize; Miss Katherine Berry, of Elizabeth, second, and Miss Helen Armstrong, of the borough, won the consolation prize.

After the play there was an informal programme of music, during which refreshments were served.

Whist Club Meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Cutter, of Sandford avenue, entertained the Thursday Night Whist Club at their home, last night, it being the first meeting of the club for the winter. There were four tables. Mrs. Henry Dunbar won first prize for the women and Mrs. Sherman, a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Cutter, who substituted, won second prize. For the men, Fred S. Cutter received first prize and Henry Dunbar second prize. After the play refreshments were served. Dr. and Mrs. W. K. Browning, of Park avenue, will entertain the club in two weeks.

CHARGES MADE BY REED

He Fathers Accusation of Padding Against Cits in a Speech

JAB AT DR. COOLEY

Charged With Being Untrue To His Duty as a Republican County Committeeman — More Music Than Speeches.

Addressing a jammed meeting of Smalley supporters at the weekly smoker of the Good Government Club last night, Former Senator Charles A. Reed assumed responsibility for the charges of registration padding against the election officers of the Second district of North Plainfield, by making the accusation in plain and unequivocal language.

"Gentlemen," he said, "there is a systematic attempt being made to put voters on the list who are not in the borough, and to chisel others voters out of their rights."

Most of them at the meeting must have been familiar with the charge through the evening papers, but the statement created a stir. The indignant ring in Mr. Reed's voice, a wordless protest against the allegd state of affairs, evoked a burst of applause.

The meeting was the largest of its kind the administration men have held. Full as the club room has been at the other smokers, last night's meeting surpassed them. The voters were jammed so tightly together that late comers found it impossible to find a bearable amount of room.

There was less speechmaking and more music than at the other meetings. Oratorical thunder was reserved for the big Saengerbund Hall rally tonight.

Senator Reed was the principal speaker. Mayor Smalley spoke very briefly; considering his other spellbinding stunts, he may be said to have spoken scarcely at all.

In connection with his charge of padding and chiselling, Senator Reed accused Dr. J. H. Cooley of being untrue to his duty as Republican county committeeman from the Second.

"The county committeeman of any district," said Mr. Reed, "has the interests of his party in trust; he represents his party in his district, and is there to see that every member of that party is protected in his right to vote.

"In the Second district certain voters have been served with notices to the effect that their registration has been assailed as illegal, and that an effort is to be made to have their names stricken from the lists before the county election board, the supreme body in election matters in this county. The man behind that move is Dr. Cooley. Now, what is his object? I'll tell you: It is because those men propose to vote the Republican ticket.

"And he is the Republican committeeman. He is the man whose duty it is to see that every Republican who wishes to vote that ticket, and has a right to vote shall be protected in that right."

Mr. Reed told the story of the alleged skipping of administration voters by the Cit-controlled election board of the second, and quoted the registration figures, substantially as the newspapers reported yesterday, and climaxed the statement with the charge quoted above.

Later in the evening Mr. Reed announced that every man who had been served with a notice to appear before the county board tomorrow would be taken there without expense to himself, if he had a right to vote, and be aided in keeping his name on the list.

"Let every man who has received one of these notices and who has the right to the vote that is challenged be at the 1 o'clock train Saturday," said Mr. Reed. "We'll see that he gets to Somerville and back all right. And if his time is worth anything—if he loses any money by reason of that trip—we will make the loss good—I'll see to that myself."

Mr. Reed explained afterward that he did not make that offer primarily to draw the men to Somerville, but simply to make it possible for workingmen who might feel they could not afford to lose a half a day's wages to preserve their right to vote.

Mayor Smalley referred briefly to the charges of padding that the Cits have made against the administration forces. "There is not a word of truth in them," he said. "We couldn't win a fight that way, and we wouldn't want to win that way.

"That we will win I am sure, although I'll admit that the majority possibly will be small. I can't say what the normal Republican majority will be. A man came to me today and wanted to know what the normal Republican majority over here was. I told him the normal majority was 250, but that when I was running it was between twelve and fifteen."

The Mayor said all the charges and

DIVORCE ADVISED BY SPECIAL MASTER

SERVED TERM IN PRISON AND WIFE DID NOT ANSWER HIS LETTERS.

A divorce has been recommended in the case of Nelson M. Doty, of this city, against his wife, Esther C. Doty. J. Edward Smith, before whom testimony was taken as a special master, has reported favorably to the petitioner. According to the affidavits, Doty and his wife, who was a Miss Navatier, of Newark, were married November 6, 1891. They lived together until April 14, 1902, when, the husband charges, his wife deserted him.

Doty was convicted of passing worthless checks, for which he served fifteen months in the penitentiary at Caldwell. He says he wrote to his wife several times while in prison, but that none of his letters was answered. When he was released he went to her parents, but they refused to tell him anything about her whereabouts. He has not seen her since and knows nothing of her whereabouts. Mrs. Doty's brother, in his affidavit, states that his sister is living in Saratoga, and that she told him she never wanted to see Doty again.

NO BOSSES FOR HIM.

Ackerman Repeats His Declaration of Political Independence.

Ernest R. Ackerman, Republican candidate for Senator, reiterated, in unqualified phrase, last night his declaration of independence of all control. It was in the course of a speech at a smoker in Elizabethport:

"How can a candidate in all fairness state what he will do until there has been a full presentation of the subject, until it has been debated for and against, and the subject well discussed, until he has heard from all classes of people upon the subject, so as to properly reflect their wishes? You will agree with me I am sure. If by your votes next Tuesday I am elected to represent you in the upper branch of the Legislature I will use my best endeavors to represent the people of this county in all fairness, and having no pledges to redeem, with no mental reservation I shall, without wearing the "collar of any boss," without being any one's automaton or puppet, endeavor to be a man in all that the name implies, and thus unfettered, be in a position to render the best service of which I am capable in the interests of the people. If, gentlemen, you do not want me under those conditions to serve you, then vote for someone else."

The ringing statement was received with applause.

City Judge William N. Runyon was one of the other speakers at the smoker.

A FOOL DOG.

Its Mistaken Notion of Duty Nearly Led to a Carriage Wreck.

A big black dog nearly brought about a carriage smash-up on West Front street in front of the Gayle hardware store this forenoon. The dog was with a man who was in a buggy drawn up to the curb. It started barking at the horse, leaping up and down in front of it, evidently under the impression that the carriage was about to start. The rig was pocketed by a trolley car and several wagons and there was no opening for it. the horse reared from the dog and backed, forcing the wagon on the sidewalk.

The driver was scared and so was everybody on the walk. The carriage was just on the point of toppling over when a young man shoved the dog away and gave the driver the chance to steady the horse. The dog refused to believe it hadn't done something smart, and ran off with its tail flirting.

INDIGNANT OVER ALLEGED FRAUDULENT REGISTRATION

Fusion Speakers Laid Bare Their Case Against Republicans.

CITES MANY INSTANCES

William McLaughlin Is Said to Be the One Who Put Names on the List—Hearing Tomorrow at Somerville.

With Spencer's Hall filled to its capacity, the Citizens' party of the borough, conducted its last social meeting before the campaign, last night. There was an abundance of music and several ringing speeches in which the registry list charges were thoroughly explained. The name of William McLaughlin, one of Smalley's lieutenants and the man who swore in the list of seventy names in the Second district, was frequently mentionedand members of the audience shouted "He can be arrested, can't he?"

Henry DeMott, who has been active in the Cit circles, was the first speaker, and he dealt out several raps to the opposition. Referring to Mr. Hooley's open letter in which he stated there would be a Republican parade Tuesday night and "No masks would be worn so you can see just who is in it," Mr. DeMott said:

"The reason why no masks will be worn is because some people in this borough have got such swelled heads they couldn't get a mask on."

The remark caused several rounds of applause and greatly encouraged the speaker swung in the registration matter and after beseeching everybody within hearing to vote the full Citizens' ticket, he exclaimed:

"Vote the ticket yourself and get your friends to do the same but don't go to Fox Hill, Pluckemin and Liberty Corner for them. The half in this affair has not yet been told and you might hear something interesting at the mass meeting Saturday night. There is altogether too much Smalleyism in the borough but if we want him after two years, I guess we can get him easy enough."

Chairman T. S. Armstrong, of the executive committee, who presided over the meeting, followed Mr. DeMott and declared that he and his associates were fully satisfied as to the result of the election and it is now only a matter of majority. The alleged padding of the voting list with the 100 or more McLaughlin names he asserted was an outrage "As great in comparison as anything ever perpetrated in New York." Continuing he said, any attempt at illegitimate voting would not be tolerated and he asked E. D. Hutchinson to read a statement prepared, dealing with the names placed on the list by McLaughlin and other registration facts, as follows:

"There being many rumors concerning the 'padding' of the registration list on Tuesday last, especially in the Second Election District, the following statement of facts as we believe them to be are given for your information. The total increase in registration this year over last year is about 150. Of these 150, there were 92 names added in the Second district, 71 in one list by one of the leading Smalley workers, and 58 in the First district. While we have no evidence at present that more than fifteen of those added in the First district are not entitled to vote, we have the names of 32 in the Second district who we believe are illegal voters, and the cases of 30 others are under investigation, including a few who were registered previous to last Tuesday. We have cited 27 of these so-called voters to appear before the County Board of Registration and show cause why their names should not be stricken from the list. If they are not so stricken from the list, they will be challenged next Tuesday, as will all others whom we believe to be illegally registered. At the mass meeting on Saturday evening we may be prepared to make a thorough report. Notwithstanding all reports to the contrary, no voter will be challenged simply because he is expected to vote for one candidate or another. What we aim to secure is an honest ballot, and this we are going to have. If anybody votes who is not entitled by law to vote, we shall prosecute him to the full extent."

Afterward Mr. Armstrong read from the laws of New Jersey, the clause covering Boards of Registry and voting, bringing out with emphasis the section which prescribes a heavy penalty for swearing in non-residents or attempting to intimidate voters.

"That's just been all the trouble

DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

Enthusiastic Meeting in North Plainfield Township.

A rally of the Democrats of North Plainfield township was held last night at the Washingtonville Hotel. Representatives of the party from all parts of the township turned out in goodly numbers to listen to their condidates expound the issues of the campaign. S. S. Swackhamer was unavoidably prevented from being present owing to a previous engagement, but the oratory proved none the less entertaining.

George Mobus, who acted as chairman, after a few remarks called upon Benjamin Clark, of Scotch Plains, who spoke of the importance of having a committeeman whose interest in good roads was founded on past performances. The Democratic candidate for justice of the peace, Francis E. Bodin, spoke at length on the duties of that office, and among other things said "that no man was too good for the office I hold. A man who cannot serve the people in a subordinate office should never be eligible for a higher one. It is the duty of every township officer to consider the welfare of the people regardless of party." Mr. Bodin paid a tribute to Senator Childs, and advocated the reelection of a tried champion of the people.

Mr. Canning spoke on the necessity of a united effort on the part of every Democrat to rally around the standard, and to support the present candidates "whose names needed no introduction to the citizens of the township." Speeches were made by Mr. Johnson and others after which refreshments were served, and the meeting adjourned in perfect harmony, each man pledging his earnest efforts until the counting of the ballots on Tuesday next.

S. P. CASE WEDS.

Plainfielder Marries Miss Dunham, of Far Hills.

Miss Martha T. Dunham, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Dunham, of Larger Crossroads, Far Hills, and Samuel P. Case, eldest son of Mrs. Susan P. Case, of Plainfield avenue, were married yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, including several from this city.

The wedding was a quiet home affair. Neither the bride or groom was attended and the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. T. Walker Jones, pastor of the Reformed church, Bedminster, was one of beautiful simplicity. A reception followed the ceremony, and last night Mr. and Mrs. Case left for a three weeks' wedding trip to Washington and Virginia. Upon their return they will live at the groom's home, 120 Plainfield avenue.

The bride is well known here, where he has visited many times. She received a large collection of handsome and useful gifts. The groom is a member of the firm of J. D. Stout & Co., of New York, wholesale commission merchants, with which concern he has been connected for twenty years. He is an active member of the First Baptist church, where at times he has held positions in the church as well as Sunday school.

Those attending the wedding from this city were Mrs. Susan P. Case, Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Case, Joseph T. Case, Howard M. Case, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Case and George Griffen. Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Dunham, of Trenton, were also among the guests.

MASS MEETING TONIGHT.

Borough Republicans Invite Everybody to Attend Their Meeting.

Every voter in North Plainfield is invited to attend the big Republican mass meeting to be held in Saengerbund hall tonight. It will be the last gathering of the campaign conducted by the Good Government Club and much preparation has been made for it. There are to be several speakers well served in borough affairs and plenty of good music. The gallery will be reserved for women.

In the call for the meeting, the Good Government Club asks that members of the Citizens' party attend as they will be made welcome and perhaps hear something to their advantage. Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman will preside as chairman and a large number of well known citizens have consented to act as vice presidents.

Red Men's Fair.

Solly Brown, the robust tenor who makes songs popular, was the attraction at the Red Men's fair last night. He sang "Dear Old Georgia," "Sympathy" and "Brighteyes." The robust tenor was very robust, indeed, and the crowd was loath to have him subside. They dragged all six choruses of "Sympathy" from him. Solly is a boomer for Jerome Kemmick, the publisher.

It is to be regretted that Ernest R. Ackerman is not going to address his fellow citizens respecting the issues of the campaign. Edward Nugent, his Democratic opponent for the State Senatorship, will make an address here tonight, and he is a convincing speaker. For that reason there are many who should hear what the Plainfield candidate has to say. There is no doubt that some votes will be drawn away from him because of the actions of those for whom he should be in nowise held responsible. Mr. Ackerman declares that he believes in freedom of speech and freedom of the press, and furthermore he is emphatic in his statement, quoted in this issue, that he will not be dictated to by party bosses. These wholesome utterances have been made elsewhere, and the Republican city committee would help his candidacy by arranging for him to repeat them before his townspeople.

POLITICAL NOTICE.

A GOOD RECORD

The Newark Evening News Endorses the Candidacy of Ernest R. Ackerman For State Senator.

Mr. Ackerman's Good Record.

In view of the peaceful condition of politics in Union county, which is Republican by about 2,000 majority when the factions in that party bury the hatchet, the man most likely to succeed Judge Cross as Senator is Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield. There is therefore much interest in him, even outside of Union, not only because he follows in the footsteps of a statesman of high order, and of eminent success, but because the issues coming before the next Legislature will require the most careful and intelligent treatment at the hands of capable and conscientious legislators.

Happily there is no room for questions as to Mr. Ackerman's integrity, ability or political experience. In these respects he stands unchallenged, even by his political opponents, one of his open supporters in his own home city being George S. Clay, formerly president of the Parker Independent Club, who declares that Mr. Ackerman's acceptance of the office is "a distinct gain for the side of good morals and honesty in politics," and that if every legislator selected this fall were of the same high character "a new era would begin and 'graft' and self-seeking be unknown."

But the inquiry that is uppermost in the popular mind is, How does Mr. Ackerman stand on the question of limited franchises? Will he be as independent as was Judge Cross? Does he appreicate this issue as one of great importance? Fortunately, Mr. Ackerman has made a record on this question. When he was a member of the Plainfield City Council in 1891 the company which is now a constituent element of the Public Service Corporation applied to the Council for a franchise to operate an electric street railway in that city. What the company demanded was, of course, a perpetual franchise. This was fourteen years ago, before the corporations had gotten all cities by the throat as they now have, and before the people understood and appreciated, as they now do, the value of the privileges they were giving away for nothing and for all time.

Fourteen years ago, when everybody seemed to think that perpetual franchises were to be granted as a matter of course, Ernest R. Ackerman stood up in the Plainfield Council and opposed, with all the argument he could command, the giving away of franchises for nothing and in perpetuity. "We are considering the advisability," he said, "of doing something that is to last, not for a day, a month or a year, but, by granting a franchise, we set in motion forces the consequence of which we may be compelled to submit to for many years to come." Even at that time he favored the granting of franchises only after they had been submitted to the people by referendum.

The ordinance was passed notwithstanding his opposition, but in the fourteen years that have intervened Mr. Ackerman has seen a marvelous awakening of the people on this question of perpetual franchises, and nothing he has seen has weakened the convictions he ably maintained in the Plainfield Council fourteen years ago. If his own city had taken his advice it would now be in condition to dictate to the trolley corporation instead of being dictated to. His record is his platform.—Newark Evening News.

No Pledges in Private.

The Plainfield Courier-News very properly reminds the voters in Union county that Ernest R. Ackerman, the Republican candidate, if elected State senator, he will assume that position untrammeled by private pledge of any kind.

In the performance of his duties as State senator Mr. Ackerman will be guided entirely by his own conscientious judgment of what is right and just for the people of Union county. He did not seek the honor of a nomination. On the contrary, he was urged to allow his name to be used in that connection. As the first promise to becoming a candidate he made it plain, very plain, that if elected he would hold himself responsible to no political leader or leaders, no corporation or set of corporations; not a promise, implied or otherwise, has he made, or will make, that will serve to embarrass him as a legislator bent on doing his plain duty to the people, fairly and squarely, open and above board in every detail of the work which will devolve upon him in the Upper House at Trenton.

The trend of events in New Jersey indicates that legislation of the greatest importance is to be enacted during the term of the senator to be elected this fall. With this prospect in view a man of Mr. Ackerman's calibre is needed to represent Union county in the Senate.

Mr. Ackerman says—and everyone who knows him believes it—that if his election depended upon one vote, and the casting of that vote in his favor depended upon a private pledge of any sort, he would elect himself to remain a private citizen. That is the kind of a man Union county wants to represent her as a successor to Joseph Cross. The voters of Union county may rest assured that if elected Mr. Ackerman will have no promises to redeem other than the plain, honest pledge of trying to serve them loyally and intelligently along such lines of action as public opinion and a clear conscience warrants.

A GRAPE CREAM OF TARTAR BAKING POWDER

It makes the most delicious and healthful hot breads, biscuit and cake

FREE FROM ALUM, LIME OR PHOSPHATIC ACID

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Alum baking powders are unhealthful. Do not use them for raising food under any circumstances. So detrimental are alum baking powders considered, that in most foreign countries their sale is prohibited. In many States in this country the law compels alum powders to be branded to show that they contain this dangerous acid, while in the District of Columbia, Congress has prohibited the sale of all food that contains alum.

Alum baking powders are sold to consumers at from 10 cents a pound to 25 ounces for 25 cents, or 25 cents a pound, and when not branded may generally be distinguished by their price.

CITIZENS' ALLEGE FRAUD

in this borough," said Levi Klein, a member of the Board of Registry in the Second district, springing to his feet, "the judges of election have been bull-dozed for several years. If a man's vote was challenged he would be immediately sworn in by Smalley and no one would dare say a word."

The last speaker was Dr. J. H. Cooley, who read from a paper facts about the registration and the names of some of the men put on the list by William McLaughlin after the canvassers had completed their work.

"One name," said Mr. Cooley, "is that of J. P. Northrop, with 87 Willow avenue, as the address. There is no such house or no such number and Northrop moved from the borough several years ago. Another is Harry Williams, a son of W. F. Williams, a pronounced Smalley man. Harry Williams moved to Plainfield several years ago, yet his address is given as Mountain avenue, but without any number. Still another is J. G. Schorb, also a Plainfield resident for about two years, but who is registered in the borough from his father's address; another case we investigated is that of a young man named Sutterlein. McLaughlin swore him in as residing on Chatham street. We went to the house and the people said Sutterlein had moved away several years ago and they thought he was in Somerville, but they were not sure. McLaughlin also swore in Joseph Scheurlein, who has been a resident of the borough but three months, and John Wendell, who has lived all his life in Warren township and whose name is on the Warren township list at the present time. There are many other names, including Frank Fletcher, a son-in-law of I. Smalley, the Mayor's brother, who has lived in South Carolina for two or more years, yet he has been registered as a North Plainfield voter."

Dr. Cooley concluded by saying that twenty-seven men, all McLaughlin "finds," had ben cited to appear before the county Board of Canvassers at Somerville Saturday, and that probably more would be served with legal notices in time to go with them.

The musical features of the evening were piano and violin selections by Dr. J. H. Buchanan and Martin A. Korff, and vocal solos by Jack Todd, Thomas M. Muir and B. C. Firstbrook.

Miss Edith Magill, of West Farms, N. Y., is spending a fe wdays with friends here.

SALESMEN WANTED

For several really high-grade specialty salesmen—the kind no salary offer would ordinarily interest—we have very attractive openings. We know of men who are earning from $1,000 to $5,000 annually, simply selling to dealers for a large and well known manufacturer a well advertised staple. To any successful salesman who is now selling a general line and who can handle a profitable and attractive side line, an excellent proposition will also be made.

PERFECT CARPET LAYING.

The importance of right carpet laying cannot be prudently overlooked by anyone who desires a really well furnished house.

Maybe you have radiators or bath tubs or steam pipes running through the floor that are difficult to work around. You may have despaired of ever having your floor completely covered because of some such obstruction. Other carpet people may have told you of the difficulty and impossibility of getting a carpet under some of these obstacles.

It is here where full knowledge of one's trade comes into play. It is here where the superior workman evidences his skill and stands himself apart from the ordinary workman. We employ the very best layers and through intelligent direction of their labor we accomplish results many others will not attempt. We perform perfect work.

Isn't it worth while—you who have splendid homes—to have your carpets laid by men who make an art of carpet laying? Isn't it worth while to make sure of the best work when it is so easily secured?

Royal Wiltons—$3 a yard—We show positively the largest and best selection of patterns in this highest grade carpetings to be found in New Jersey—all exclusive with us; to be found in no other Newark store. Folks who go to New York with the idea that they can do better than here, will not find any better selection of patterns and will pay $3.50 a yard for the identical grade that we sell at $3.

Hartford Axminsters—$1.35 a yard—These are the finest of high-pile carpetings, and are immensely popular with almost all homekeepers. The patterns are many and beautiful.

W. & J. Sloane Axminsters—$1.10 a yard—These are splendid carpetings, especially fine for parlor use, and are shown in a pleasing variety of beautiful patterns, which are all entirely new.

Wool Velvets—$1.05 a yard—Notable for their velvety softness, and for the nature of the pile, which causes it to withstand the weight of the foot without injury. Colorings and patterns are rich indeed, and there are many to choose from, including a number of halls and stairs.

Hartford Body Brussels—$1.35 a yard—In many respects the best carpets in the world; surely the most sanitary, because they are so easy to keep clean; nothing like them for bed chambers; good for any room in the house; large number of new and exclusive patterns to choose from.

Tapestry Brussels—95c a yard—Best 10-wire grade, particularly serviceable, though inexpensive; in appearance much like their sister, Body Brussels; patterns and colorings are rare and pretty.

All Wool Ingrains—70c a yard—A carpeting much used for bed chambers, and often for dining room rugs, economical in many ways; a number of choice patterns to choose from.

Peerless $2.50 Shoes Saturday at $2.20.

Despite the advance in cost of leather and labor, and the alleged impossibility of supplying as good a shoe at a price today as could have been supplied a year ago, we claim that this year's Peerless Shoe at $2.50 is equal to any shoe at its price ever produced, and even better in finish.

Notwithstanding this superiority, we will offer the Peerless Friday and Saturday in a wide range of styles in Vici Kid, Coltskin and Box Calf in many combinations with matt calf and patent leather tips; heels of various sorts; every wanted shape and size; button and lace; all with oak tanned soles; all made by the Goodyear welt process; at the special friend-making price of $2.20

Dollar Silks---89c.

25 pieces—1000 yards—of excellent silks to be offered tomorrow at close to half price.

The lot includes:

Crepe de Chine, 24 inches wide, in white, ivory, cream, black, nile, lavender, tan, old rose, pink, light blue and navy; regularly 75c.

French Poplin, silk and wool; 20 inches wide; in cardinal, plum, mais, nile, pink and lavender; regularly $1.

Fancy Taffetas; 19 inches wide; in small dot effects; in cardinal, gray, garnet, brown, green and navy; regularly $1.

DAY NURSERY PLANNED BY KING'S DAUGHTERS

EFFORT TO OPEN INSTITUTION HERE THIS WINTER.

An important step along charitable lines was taken yesterday at an executive committee meeting of the City Union, King's Daughters, when it was decided to establish a day nursery in Plainfield for the winter. The action was taken through the adoption of a resolution, it being the unanimous opinion of the members that there is a decided need for such an institution here.

While the executive committee has had the matter under consideration for some time, it being an outgrowth of the summer work carried on at the mountain camp, definite plans have not yet matured and it will necessitate considerable effort as well as means to open the nursery and carry on the work. It will mean that suitable quarters must be secured and properly equipped, and it will also mean that others besides the members of the City Union will be asked to contribute and help support the worthy charity. This enlarged work, it is expected, will appeal to all classes.

It is proposed to pattern the nursery on the style of one at Orange, which has been in successful operation for some time, and the executive committee will now take active steps toward locating such a nursery here. The matter will be presented at a meeting of the City Union to be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on Thursday afternoon, November 9, when it is expected that the resolution of yesterday will have the full endorsement of the union and ways and means provided for starting the work.

It was reported at the meeting yesterday that Miss Olive DeLany, the city nurse, made 103 visits during October and this represented a great amount of work. In one week she made thirty visits and some of the cases were in a critical condition. In one case the nurse was called in to care for a woman whose illness was beyond help. Her condition was pitiable and had the nurse known of the case at the proper time the woman's life might have been saved. This is only one of many such cases that come before the King's Daughters during the year. When the day nursery is started the same care will be exercised in caring for persons as at the camp on the mountain during the summer.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' SALE.

About $100 Netted at Affair in Park Club.

Under the auspices of the Daughters of the Cross, a circle of the City Union, King's Daughters, a successful luncheon and sale of fancy articles and aprons was held at the Park Club yesterday afternoon. The clubhouse, brilliant in its decorations used at the formal opening of the Park Club, a week ago, presented an attractive appearance.

The circle sold 140 tickets for the luncheon and nearly that number was present. The net proceeds from the affair will be over $100 and this will be used in support of the King's Daughters' work in Plainfield.

Those in charge of the affair were Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mrs. Walter McGee, Mrs. John L. Watson and Mrs. Charles A. Reed.

Mrs. DeWitt C. Brokaw was in charge of the fancy table and assisting here were Mrs. J. C. Peck, Mrs. Charles L. Lyman, Mrs. Gilbert Rhoades and Mrs. Nelson A. Miller. Besides the general decorations the lunch tables were garnished with flowers.

HURT IN TROLLEY ACCIDENT.

Car Leaves Track and One Passenger is Slightly Injured.

Several passengers riding in one of the main line trolley cars, eastbound, had a severe shaking up yesterday afternoon at 3:50 o'clock, when the car jumped the tracks on West Front street, opposite the home of Floyd T. Woodhull. No one was seriously hurt, but Constable Peter V. Weaver, who was tossed across the car into the lap of a woman, who held a baby, complained of injuries to his right leg, such as bruises and cuts. His hand was also injured.

Mr. Weaver went to the home of George E. Vanderhoff, and later he was treated by his physician, Dr. Zeglio. Although feeling pretty sore, he is still able to be about. The company's representatives did not take the names of the other passengers, as they did not appear to be injured.

The car, in charge of Motorman George Waldron, was making ten miles only an hour, it is said, when the accident happened. It is said that a large stone had been dropped on the track close to the flange of the rail, and when the wheels struck that point they were thrown off. The car plunged into the gutter and struck the curb, remaining right side up. The rear trucks staid on the tracks. Aside from a broken window, the car was not damaged, and within ten minutes it was replaced on the rails and proceeded on its way.

Death of Former Resident.

Mrs. Jennie A. Holeman, who formerly resided on West Third street, near Liberty, died yesterday at her home in Colonia, near Metuchen. She was in her thirtieth year and leaves a husband and three children. The funeral will be held from her late home tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 and interment will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

MR. TAXPAYER,
North Plainfield.

Dear Sir:

Do you know that a vote for Mayor Smalley will insure a continuance of a wise, aggressive, economical and progressive administration?

Do you know that since he was first elected in 1899, the improvements in the borough have been greater than any ten years in its history?

Do you know that through his efforts, and with the co-operation of the Council, that Somerset Street was widened from Green Brook to Jackson Avenue?

Do you know that storm sewers were laid in Somerset Street and elsewhere in the borough?

Do you know that street sprinkling was introduced throughout the borough?

Do you know that a handsome new engine house was built and a paid fire department organized?

Do you know that a new court room and police station were provided?

Do you know that Duer street was opened through from Craig place to Front street and that street signs were placed throughout the borough?

Do you know that although these improvements have been made the borough tax rate has been reduced?

Do you know that he advocated and saw to it that all these improvements were made and that he devotes more time to the borough affairs than any of his predecessors?

Lastly, do you know any good reason why it is not for your best interests as a taxpayer to vote for Mr. Smalley? Think it over.—Yours for the good of the borough.

A SANE DEMOCRAT.

NEWTON B. SMALLEY,
Republican Candidate for Mayor.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Fays and company will be seen at the Casino commencing on Monday evening. For the past few years the Fays have been presenting an entirely new programme embracing many features never before witnessed, the principle of which is Mrs. Fay's latest and greatest oriental sensation, "Thaumaturgy," an act so mysterious and wonderful in itself that it cannot be properly described, but must be seen. These dainty and weird people and their clever company, have met with such great success that in many places long engagements have been imperative; for instance, seven weeks in San Francisco, five weeks in Denver, St. Paul, St. Louis and New Orleans, and engagements of from one to three weeks in all the larger cities of the United States; certainly the very strongest endorsement that the amusement-loving public can bestow on any similar entertainment. Especially one strong feature introduced by the Fays is their matinee for ladies only. In all cities where they have appeared this year, the theatres have been crowded to their utmost capacity with ladies anxious to take advantage of these mysterious people's strange powers without having to do so before a regular audience. Consequently, Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons special matinees will be given for the ladies only. Seats on sale at Rowley's Pharmacy.

Miss Sophie Brandt in the romantic light opera, "A Madcap Princess," by Harry B. Smith and Ludwig Englander, is coming to the New Plainfield theatre Tuesday night.

Tonight at the New Plainfield theatre will be seen that thrilling melodrama, "Shadows of a Great City," with its immense water scene and it is sure to make a hit, as well as a splash, as it has done on previous occasions at other theatres. The cast is full of good people ,including Sadie Connolly, a three-time winner as "Biddy Ronan," who, it is alleged, is Irish. She rubs off the lines with a brogue so rich that it must be natural. Every time she speaks the audience howls with laughter. The cast also includes Frederick Ormond, Harry De Vere, Harry Mantell, Augusta Gill, E. L. Walton, Albert Lang, Alice Brophy, B. B. Smith, John Campbell and the clever little child, Baby Maud, together with several others, less familiar to the public.

Real comic opera, as distinguished from the modern musical comedy with its horse play and senseless plot, is coming to the New Plainfield theatre Tuesday night, when "A Madcap Princess" will be heard with Miss Sophie Brandt in the star role.

One of the swords used in the thrilling combat in the third act of "Lieut. Dick, U. S. A.," has quite a history attached to it. The sword is the one used by Sancho, the villianous Mexican, who has abducted his own daughter; it was captured during the Spanish-American War by one of Uncle Sam's troopers, and previous to this was worn by Don Carlos de Martinez when the great Spanish Armada sailed against England and met defeat at the hands of Drake. This sword is now the personal property of Robert Conness, who is starring in "Lieut. Dick, U. S. A.," a military comedy-drama by Harry Mc Rae Webster, which is to be presented at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday evening, November 9.

One of the great successes of the season is "The Great Jewel Mystery," a melodrama which will be at the New Plainfield theatre Wednesday night. The play introduces the Russell Bros., who as usual impersonate both male and female Irish characters. These clever players stand alone in their line of female impersonators, not only that they are humorous but true to nature. They belong to the school of actors made famous by the Harrigan and Hart Company, a quality very seldom seen nowadays, but of high order in character comedy. The play will be handsomely mounted and presented by a talented lot of players.

It is seldom indeed that such special care is taken in arranging the detail of a production as is to be given "When We Were Twenty-one" when presented at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow matinee and night. Not only has there been the greatest attention given to selecting a company of well known artists to present Henry V. Esmond's greatest comedy, but no time or expense has been spared to build new scenery and properties which will prove a decided revelation even over the original production. The company goes West to fill several big city engagements after playing a few more one-night stands in the East.

Genuine comic opera is always welcome, and "A Madcap Princess," built on a romantic historical theme, with Miss Sophie Brandt in the star role, is coming to the New Plainfield theatre Tuesday night.

"The Redemption of David Corson," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre Monday night, November 1, is a dramatization of Rev. Charles Frederic Goss' successful novel of the same name, made by Lottie Blair Parker, author of "Under Southern Skies" and "Way Down East." Walter Edwards will interpret the title role. Miss Julia Marie Taylor will be seen as "Pepeeta," the heroine. They will have the support of a strong dramatic organization, which includes J. P. Sullivan, James A. Nunn, Jay Mansfield, Lynn B. Hammond, William Lambert, William Payne, A. Maxfield Moree, Master Schwager, Mrs. Samuel Charles, Georgia Earle, Pearl Ford, May L. Bell, Elsa Hofmann, Juliet Lear and others.

Ex-President Cleveland had a few words to say in New York city a few days ago. He good naturedly waved aside an inquiry as to the business. In complete contrast, he betrayed much interest when his presence at Wallack's theatre on Wednesday evening and the production of "Rip Van Winkle" by Thomas Jefferson were mentioned. He said, with considerable enthusiasm: "Yes, I was there, and I saw one of the best and most remarkable performances I have seen for years. I had supposed that my great love for Joseph Jefferson as a man and friend and my unbounded admiration of him as an actor would somehow interfere with my warm approval of any one else who should undertake the role of poor old Rip. If I had consciously or otherwise allowed such a condition to grow up, it was speedily dispelled last Wednesday evening when I saw the son of the creator of the character of Rip Van Winkle portray that part in loving imitation, in conscientious strife toward his father's perfection and with individual and personal cultivated characteristics. I am sure I cannot be mistaken when I say that on its independent merits, as well as from every collateral standpoint, those who love the theatre cannot fail to be pleased with Thomas Jefferson's representation of a character deeply seated in the affections of the American people." Mr. Jefferson will appear in "Rip Van Winkle" at the New Plainfield theatre on Saturday night, Nov. 11.

OUSTS ARCANUM LODGE.

Supreme Regent Suspends a Council For Issuing a Protest.

Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 3.—Official notice was received here yesterday of the suspension of Cornelius Harnett Council, No. 213, Royal Arcanum, by the Supreme Regent of the order, because of a recent circular promulgated by the local council protesting against the advance in insurance rates.

The letter is construed as an act of "wilful insubordination and contempt of superior authority."

The local council has 150 members, some of whom have been policy holders for twenty-five years. The insurance in force amounts to $500,000.

G. P. Rowell Retires from Business.

New York, Nov. 3.—A complimentary dinner was given Tuesday night to George P. Rowell, the veteran advertising man, who has announced his retirement from active business. Addresses were made by many of Mr. Rowell's friends, including Frank B. Noyes, who spoke of Mr. Rowell as "a publisher;" by Artemas Ward, who spoke of him as "the Sage of Spruce street," and by H. B. Harding as "a medicine man." Mr. Rowell also made an address as "the dean emeritus of his advertising brethren." There were more than 200 guests at the dinner, among them Isaac N. Seligman and General Stewart L. Woodford.

Washington, N. J., Light Plant.

Washington, N. J., Nov. 3.—The option on the plant of the Washington Electric Light Company, obtained by Philadelphia and New York capitalists, was to have expired today. The local company is anxious to sell, and the capitalists have been in town for several days with the view of purchasing the plant. It is expected the transfer of the property will be made. It is the intention of the new owners to further improve the plant, which has undergone many changes for the better under the management of Harry Reed, president of the Washington Electric Light Company.

Want Sewell Statue.

Trenton, Nov. 3.—An effort is to be made by Trenton people to have erected in this city the memorial statue which the State is to construct from old cannon from the War Department in honor of the last United States Senator William J. Sewell. General Sewell was a resident here before locating in Camden. He went from this city to the Civil War, where he won distinction on the field of battle and where he received his military title.

Mother's Strange Farewell.

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin. I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C. W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

Methodist Testimonial to Roosevelt.

Washington, Nov. 3.—President Roosevelt has been presented with a neatly framed testimonial inscribed on parchment which had been adopted by the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which has just closed its semi-annual conference here. Bishop Foss read the testimonial to the President, which congratulated him on his firm stand for civil righteousness and a "square deal" for every one, which it termed a modern application of the Golden Rule in the executive affairs of a great nation. The President was also highly recommended for his exaltation of the home and for the humane spirit which prompted him to be the first of all the world's rulers to endeavor to bring about peace between Russia and Japan. Mr. Roosevelt expressed his cordial appreciation of the tribute paid him.

Would Run Schools in Secret.

The East Orange Board of Education has at last gone flatly on record as being in favor of the exclusion of the public from its meetings. A set of questions was recently sent to members of the Board who are running for office again and to candidates for membership by the Civics Club of Orange. President William G. Thomas, of the Board, is the only man who paid any attention to the questions. In answering he expresses himself as being in favor of the exclusion of the public. Reporters are always excluded from the sessions, and the newspapers have to take for publication what the Board sees fit to give out through the secretary.

Judge's Devise Void.

Philadelphia, Nov 3.—Because of the omission of the names of subscribing witnesses in the will of Chief Judge Edward M. Paxson, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, who devised a large portion of his landed property to the establishment of an agricultural school for poor boys, that provision has been made void. Under the law all wills containing charitable bequests must contain the signatures of subscribing witnesses. The omission, however, will not affect the other provisions of the will.

Paterson's Bill Dismissed.

Vice Chancellor Stevens, of New Jersey, has dismissed a cross bill filed by the city of Paterson in a suit brought by Mayor Henry W. Doremus, of Newark, and others to recover damages resulting to property from the discharge of the sewage of Paterson into the Passaic River. This is a serious setback for Paterson, which is bitterly fighting the suit, as it eliminates from the case all the extraneous questions sought to be introduced by that city.

Youth Dies of Rabies.

Death from rabies of Walter Burdock, nineteen years old, of 18 West Fiftieth street, Bayonne, came last evening. When the young man was taken ill A. S. Forman, city physician, diagnosed the case at once as that of hydrophobia. The patient suffered frightfully and frothed at the mouth. He died three days after the disease first developed. The young man and his parents declared that he had not been bitten by a dog, so far as they know.

Cold Wave for Somerset.

The Bound Brook Chronicle announces that the letter to Candidate Frelinghuysen from the ministers asking him to define his position on local option was a trick of a Democratic worker, and that it ought to be eliminated from the campaign. But the trick has been turned and refuses to be eliminated. That explains why the Republican Somerville Unionist-Gazette prints as its most conspicuous item a letter from the candidate for Senator on the Prohibition ticket attacking Senator Childs because the latter has not told how he stands on "the temperance question." A whole lot of cold water is going to be thrown in the Somerset county campaign in the next eight days and some of the nominees for office are going to have a severe chill as a result.—Newark News.

Mayor Threatens to Resign.

Hightstown, November 3.—Mayor Richard D. Norton announces that he will resign his office if the voters fail to elect the Democratic candidates for Common Council, C. Wilfred Wright and William Robbins. He gives as his reason that he is tired of the scenes of conflict that, as he puts it, have made the municipal body ridiculous in the eyes of the outside communities for several years, incidental to his attempts to inaugurate progressive policies, and the determination of his political opponents to foil him at every move.

Newark's Carnival Victims.

The only persons in jured in the Newark carnival Tuesday night, according to the police, were Mary McGrath, sixteen years old, of 74 Chambers street, kicked by a horse and her right leg badly injured; Lillian Lewis, sixteen years old, of 95 McWhorter street, knocked down and trampled on in the crowd; Francis Mulvey, of 119 Railroad avenue, badly injured by falling from a tree while watching the parade.

Francis Answers Ministers.

C. Asa Francis, Republican candidate for sheriff of Monmouth county, replied yesterday in an open letter to the charges made by the Rev. John Handley and other ministers at a recent meeting. "Mr. Handley made a most infamous and cowardly attack upon my character," says Francis. "I defy him to prove his assertions. I warn him to adhere to the truth or take the consequences. If he is an honorable man he must prove his charge or apologize."

No More Loans of State Tents.

Trenton, Nov. 3.—Quartermaster-General Murray has just issued an order prohibiting the loaning of tents, camp equipage or other military property to any private individual, institution or organization not a part of the National Guard. Such privileges have been abused so often that the rule is necessary.

Clevelands Home from West.

TRAGEDY DEATH PUZZLE.

Asks Officials to Determine Whether Father of Mother Died First.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 3.—What part of the estates of the late Edgar T. Washburn and his wife, whose death was caused by her husband, shall go to the son, Dr. T. Pomeroy Washburn, or to the creditors of the dead man, has caused a mix-up in the Surrogate's Court. Washburn was the grain merchant who killed his wife and daughter and then committed suicide about two years ago.

The son, who lives in Elizabeth, N. J., has petitioned Surrogate Marcus for an accounting of his mother's estate, which now amounts to about $14,000.

If Mrs. Washburn died first, part of her estate would go to her husband's estate, and could be used in the payment of Washburn's bankruptcy debts. However, if Mr. Washburn died before his wife, none of Mrs. Washburn's personal estate would go to the husband's estate.

JERSEY JOTTINGS.

With a gold trowel Mayor Fagan, of Jersey City, Wednesday laid the corner stone of the new $200,000 City Hospital, at Montgomery street and Baldwin avenue.

For the first time since he put to rout Major Carl Lentz and the latter's crowd of adherents and decisively won the nomination for State Senator, Everett Colby met and shook hands with Governor Stokes Tuesday night in Newark at the Hallowe'en carnival. Both were guests of the University Club and were the center of attraction.

Governor Stokes has appointed as commissioners to represent New Jersey at a conference on immigration in New York on December 6 and 7, Ruford Franklin, of Summit; Grinell Willis, of Morristown; Wood McKee, of Paterson; Rev. Adolph Roeder, of Orange; Bleecker Van Wagner, of South Orange, and Mrs. Caroline Alexander, of Hoboken.

Accept Scott's Resignation.

At the meeting of the trustees of Rutgers College, New Brunswick, held Monday at the Ralph Voorhees library, the committee appointed to make a report upon the resignation of President Austin Scott presented a report in favor of its acceptance. The report was adopted by the board of trustees. The trustees then made Dr. Scott a professor at the college.

Want Apsessment Raised.

Trenton, Nov. 3.—The Mayor and Council of Hoboken filed yesterday with the State Board of Equalization of Taxes a petition asking that the assessment of the property of the Hoboken Ferry Company, in Hoboken, be raised from $450,000 to $2,500,000, which, the petition declares to be the true value of the property.

Griggs to Address Passaic Voters.

Passaic, Nov. 3.—The general parade and mass meeting to be held here on Friday night will be one of the largest ever held in this city. Former Governor John W. Griggs will speak on the issues of the campaign.

The sixtieth anniversary of the founding of Grace Episcopal church, Elizabeth, is being celebrated this week in the parish house, East Jersey and Second streets in that city.

Where Originality Exists.

You'll find originality in Watson-made suits right; but, you'll find, too, that we have held them right close to the best standards of fashion. They can be both, you know. So, Watson-made suits have that distinctive air which appeals to every man who cares at all for his appearance. The coats have the close, clinging collar and the hand tailored shoulders, together with that care in every detail which makes coats becoming and satisfactory in wear.

Then, as to the other garments, Watson's tailors have been taught to be equally careful. Somehow or other they never fail to distinguish themselves in making distinguished looking clothes.

Suits $10 to $25.

The same features of excellence exist in Watson's Toppers for the season, in more conservative Overcoats, and the Paletots. Which of these Overcoats you should have we don't know yet, but when you come in you'll find us glad to help you with our best advice, and then here are Watson's mirrors to tell to your own eyes which is most becoming.

The materials this season are not only attractive in pattern and color, but serviceable in weave and fabric. Worsteds, Vicunas, Meltons, Kerseys, Cheviots, Tribets, are all represented in one style cut or another. When you become acquainted with Watson's prices you'll see what it is to get most for least.

$10 to $30.

AUTO OWNER NOMINEE'S LEAP.

Frelinghuysen Forced from Carriage by Speeding Motor Car.

North Branch, Nov. 3.—Friends of Colonel Joseph S. Frelinghuysen are quietly smiling about a little adventure he had Tuesday evening. The colonel is the candidate for State Senator on the Republican ticket in Somerset county this fall. Somerset is the seat of the movement against reckless automobile drivers, and only a week ago Colonel Frelinghuysen told his sentiments on the subject at a meeting of the Anti-Automobile Association here. The colonel owns and operates an automobile, and on Tuesday, in the company of his running mate, Assemblyman Hoagland, was on an electioneering tour in the vicinity of Neshanic. In the evening they were to speak in South Branch, and Charles Horner undertook to drive them there with his fine team.

The turnout encountered an automobile speeding along at a brisk clip, and Mr. Horner's horses were "feeling their oats" to such an extent they began to do all kinds of stunts on the highway. The colonel thought the solid ground was preferable to the rocking carriage and leaped out, but Mr. Horner's fine horsemanship soon piloted the fiery animals past the machine, and had resumed the journey to South Branch before Assemblyman Hoagland realized that Colonel Frelinghuysen had been left somewhere by the wayside. Mr. Horner turned and went back after the colonel, who, if elected, will take a dep interest next winter in forming automobile laws.

Camden Mayor to the Rescue.

Camden, Nov. 3.—Mayor Charles H. Ellis, of this city, prevented a woman from rushing into her burning home. Mayor Ellis was passing along Sixth street, when he heard an explosion. The next minute the rear part of the house, occupied by Andrew Barnes, a tailor, broke into flames. Almost at the some moment Mrs. Barnes rushed out, calling for help. Mayor Ellis bounded on the step and grasped the woman, who became hysterical. She insisted on going into the room, where the flames were rapidly burning up her household effects. The Mayor struggled with her until he succeeded in preventing the woman from carrying out her purpose.

NUGENT PRAISES EFFORTS OF G. O. P. REFORMERS

Democratic Senatorial Nominee Lauds Roosevelt, And Colby And Denounces the Lobbyists at Trenton and Political Bosses.

CALLS BUCKLE "POOR JIM" AND PITIES HIM

Attacks Public Service Corporation And Comes Out With a Clean Cut Pledge for Equal Taxation and Limited Franchises—James E. Martine Also Makes a Hit.

Being denied the right to address the citizens of Plainfield in an open-air meeting at the Pond Machine Tool Works on October 26, Edward Nugent, the Democratic Senatorial candidate, and other party candidates, took Mayor James F. Buckle's advice and "hired a hall" last night, when the principles of the party were expounded in earnest fashion. The mass meeting was held at Reform Hall and about 200 citizens gathered to hear the gospel of Democracy. Among the speakers of the evening, besides Mr. Nugent, were James E. Martine, Noah Woodruff, candidate for sheriff; J. V. F. Dilts, candidate for tax collector; Dr. C. M. Luckey and George H. Alcorn, candidates for councilmen at large, and Walter L. Hetfield, Sr.

Patrick J. Reville, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, called the meeting to order and at once introduced James E. Martine as the chairman of the evening.

Mr. Martine said that this was the first time in many years that he appeared on a platform at a political meeting when he was not a candidate for office, but declared that he was present in the interest of righteousness and justice and to plead for the true principles of Democracy. He said that the party's candidate for State Senator, Edward Nugent, was known to him for many years. He said that he knew him as a boy working in an establishment in Elizabeth, and had watched him from early dawn to setting sun, when he took his place among the leading lawyers of the State.

Referring to a recent incident when Mr. Nugent was denied the right to speak on the public streets here, Mr. Martine said that he deplored the affair and wondered whether the powers that be had attained that authority when the freedom of the press and speech is to be denied the American citizen. Concluding with the statement that with his aid no graft shall enter the city or State, he introduced Mr. Nugent as typical representative of the people.

After thanking Mr. Martine for flattering words spoken, he began to outline the issues of the campaign from his party's standpoint, issues which he said must be settled on election day.

The candidate said that the issues of bossism as presented by Jerome in New York, Weaver in Philadelphia, Fagan in Hudson county, and Colby in Essex county, are the same, and should be as potent in Plainfield as it is in the places named. He referred to Roosevelt as the President of no one man or party, but of the people, and he was proud of the Chief Executive and rejoiced in the success of the country through his efforts. He asked all to examine carefully the Democratic platform and the principles it stands for. He declared that he accepted the empty honor of leading his party's fight in Union county with the knowledge that there was a partisan majority against him of from three to seven thousand.

Mr. Nugent then at great length discussed the question of equal taxation, stating that it is his purpose to make a clean, honest and vigorous effort to bring success to the ticket. But he wanted it understood that not a word has been uttered by him or anyone authorized to represent him that could be construed to be a personality against his opponent. On the other hand, he praised Mr. Ackerman and spoke in the highest terms of him and his declaration in favor of principles he is representing along the line of equal taxation and limited franchises.

The Democratic nominee declared the party to be in favor of equal taxation, the limiting of franchises to public utilities, laws to punish lobbyists, that steam railroads, trolley, gas, water and electric light interests should be the servants and not the masters of municipalities, county and State, that a municipality should be permitted to own, control or operate its own street lighting and water systems and that the State, county and municipalities should be controlled by the people and not by the bosses.

Mr. Nugent reviewed past legislation on equal taxation, especially in the case of steam railroads, and endavored to show how these corporations have held the controlling power in securing legislation favorable to their interests. He cited many cases in Elizabeth of unequal taxation, submitting facts and figures to prove his statements. He referred to the recent attempt of the Public Service Corporation to secure a valuable trolley right in Elizabeth in perpetuity, and how he defeated its purpose by having inserted in the ordinance a limited franchise clause, which the company emphatically declared it would not accept.

Mr. Nugent attacked the Legislature at Trenton and reviewed acts of that body, as well as of the lobbyists, to show how the ends of justice are defeated and the corporations benefit thereby. Applying his subject to this city, he said that all must agree with him that if the owners of the Babcock building own land worth $100,000 and any individual owns land worth $100,000, and the Central Railroad of New Jersey has land here worth $100,000, that all three landowners should pay on the same value at the same tax rate and be taxed by the same assessor.

The speaker said that he was opposed to the rapid growth of the influence exerted in this State through the lobby and the big and little bosses by the Public Service Corporation, claiming that its Legislative agents dominate every municipality in the State. He thought a good way to remove the big and little bosses and the domination of the gang would be to elect Noah Woodruff for sheriff, believing that the Republican candidate, Dr. Lawrence, if elected, would have too many favors to bestow.

In conclusion, Mr. Nugent called attention to Mayor Buckle's action in denying him a permit to speak on the street here. He said that it was more in pity than in anger he felt that personal reference should be made to it, but in doing so he wanted it understood that his opponent took no part, neither did he have anything to do with the Mayor's action. Neither did he believe that the citizens of Plainfield upheld His Honor in his treatment of the Democratic candidate. He took exception to City Judge Runyon's statement that he is a martyr, but on the contrary, thought the Judge is filling that role at present. He thought "Billy" was a good fellow, but was unable to understand him politically.

Mr. Nugent said that after an exchange of courtesies between friends, including Mr. Ackerman, he decided to come here first, and through a friend, Clarence E. Teel, Mayor Buckle was requested to issue a permit for the meeting planned to be held at the Pond Machine Tool Works. What was said by the Mayor and Mr. Nugent's representative he thought could best be told in an affidavit made by Mr. Teel, although he believed he could see something that is now the issue in New York and Philadelphia, "the bosses," and he felt convinced that if he had seen the bosses here the permit would have been granted, but the bosses were not seen, and without their permission or consent "we hired a hall," and the only further comment he proposed to make on the abdication of Mayor Buckle in his case he would sum up in the words applied by Jerome to Osborne—"Poor Jim."

Mr. Martine, after further praise of Mr. Nugent, in which he said that if he should be elected he would vote against the re-election of United States Senator John F. Dryden, said that he thought he lived in the city of McCardell and MacMurray, instead of Plainfield. Again he declared that his party would stand for purity and no dictation. Noah Woodruff, candidate for sheriff, was then introduced and spoke briefly, thanking the party for the honor bestowed. George H. Alcorn, one of the candidates for councilman at large, had a few words to say, after which he called upon Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., to respond for him. Mr. Hetfield arraigned the "machine" and reviewed past history when he was a member of the Common Council. He referred to the time when Ernest R. Ackerman was a member of that body and how he voted against the ordinance authorizing the purchase of a water plant which was contracted for by James M.

TEEL HITS AT THE MAYOR

Under Oath He Reiterates His Version of the Buckle Incident.

IT IS UNEQUIVOCAL

Declares He Was Told to See MacMurray First and Then That the Mayor Said To Go Hire a Hall.

There being some question as to what actually occurred when Clarence E. Teel, representing Edward Nugent, Democratic candidate for State Senator, asked Mayor James F. Buckle for a permit for Mr. Nugent to address the workingmen at the Pond Tool Works, a sworn affidavit made by Mr. Teel was presented at the Democratic meeting last night by Mr. Nugent.

This is the affidavit as sworn to by Mr. Teel before Justice Hezekiah Hand:

State of New Jersey,
County of Union, ss.:

Clarence E. Teel, of full age, being duly sworn according to law, on his oath says that he now lives and has resided in the city of Plainfield, county of Union, for twenty-one years last past and he is personally acquainted with His Honor James F. Buckle, Mayor of the city of Plainfield.

Deponent also states that he is acquainted with Patrick Kiely, Esq., Chief of Police of said city. That on the twenty-fifth day of October, 1905, deponent called on said official at police headquarters and informed him that he had been requested by Mr. Nugent, of Elizabeth, to ascertain if it was necessary to procure a permit to conduct a noonday street meeting in the vicinity of the Pond Machine Tool Company's works on the following day to address the men as they returned from lunch; and if such permit was necessary to attend to procuring the same. Being informed by the said Chief of Police that such a permit was necessary, deponent asked him whether or not it was within his power to grant such a permit, and he replied: "You had better see the Mayor and ask him for the permit, and there will be no trouble about it; he will tell you to go on and hold the meeting."

Deponent further says that on the twenty-sixth inst. he called upon Mayor Buckle at his place of business, and after a pleasant salutation deponent said: "I have been requested by Mr. Nugent to apply for a permit to hold a meeting during the noon hour today near the Pond Tool Works." Whereupon Mr. Buckle said: "Where is the meeting to be held?" Deponent said: "I do not know the exact location, but it is on South Second street, near the Pond Tool Works, to address the workmen as they return from lunch." Mr. Buckle then asked deponent if he had permission from the Pond Tool people to hold such a meeting. Deponent said: "I have not; I hadn't considered that they had any jurisdiction in the matter, as we were not going on their property nor would interfere with their workmen during business hours." Mr. Buckle said: "You go and see the Pond Tool people and get their permission, and if they consent I do not see that there will be any objection to holding the meeting." Deponent asked him: "Who is the proper person to see?" Mr. Buckle replied: "Jim MacMurray." Deponent said: "I will try to see MacMurray, but if he is gone to the shop I will call him on the telephone;" and deponent further said: "I understand, then, if I get his (MacMurray's) permission, then we have your permission to go on with the meeting?" Mr. Buckle then replied: "No, I don't think it is necessary to bother 'Jim' MacMurray about the matter, as Mr. Nugent can't conduct a street meeting and block up the streets and highways in violation of the ordinance. If he (Nugent) wants to hold a meeting, tell him to go get a vacant lot somewhere or hire a hall." Whereupon the interview closed without further conversation.

Deponent says further that he has read Mr. Buckle's interview or communications in the Plainfield papers, in which he claims to have referred deponent to Mr. MacMurray, who would be glad to let him have a lot for the purpose; also that he told the deponent that he had refused the Socialists a similar permit to hold a meeting the week previous; also that Mr. Buckle claims he offered the deponent to donate his back lot on Second street if Mr. Nugent wanted to use it. Deponent says that no such references or remarks were made during the interview.

LOOT HOUSE IN DAYLIGHT

Thieves Ransack Home of W. G. Anderson in Franklin Place at Noon Hour and Get Considerable Booty.

VALUE PLACED AT $500

Police Quickly Summoned But Have Only Slight Clue—Entrance Effected While Family Was Away.

In broad daylight yesterday noon thieves entered the home of William G. Anderson, on Franklin place, and stole watches, jewelry and silverware worth fully $500. All the members of the family and the servants were away at the time, the theft being discovered by Mrs. Anderson on returning from a dinner.

She had hardly entered the hall before she say that something was wrong, and hurrying from one room to another she found everything in a state of turmoil. Every closet, bureau, dresser and sideboard in the house had been ransacked and the contents were strewn about. Mrs. Anderson made certain that nearly all her jewelry and that of other members of the household had been taken and then summoned the police. She afterward continued her investigation with Detective McCarthy and made a complete list of what had been taken. It included many trinkets valuable as keepsakes in addition to their intrinsic worth, although one watch stolen was valued at $125.

Who the thieves were is at present a mystery and barely any clue has bene furnished. A servant in a neighboring residence gave the information that two suspicious looking men were hanging about the Marsh residence on the same street and but a few doors from the Anderson home shortly before noon yesterday. It is thought they are the guilty parties and that it was their intention to rob this place before trying the one where they succeeded.

The police made a careful investigation, but as yet are not certain as to how entrance was effected. They believe the men had skeleton keys and opened the front door, working in the obscurity of the vestibule.

This is the second big robbery in the city within ten days.

Publicity Association Election.

The Technical Publicity Association held its annual dinner and election last night at the Aldine Club. The association includes the advertising managers of several great manufacturing concerns of the East. C. B. Morse, of this city, was chosen president, H. M. Cleaver and F. H. Dale, vice presidents; Rodman Gilder, secretary; H. M. Davis, treasurer, and Graham Smith and Charles M. Manfred, with the above officers, members of the board of trustees.

Fine Hot Soda Fountain.

L. W. Randolph, the druggist, has installed an exceptionally fine hot soda fountain at his pharmacy. There are only two others of this type now in use in the country. One is in Philadelphia, the other in Boston, and the third one is at Mr. Randolph's store. It is made of bronze and the important feature about it is that a continuous supply of hot water is always on tap and an even temperature is maintained. The fountain itself is a work of art.

"Tank" Drama Pleases.

The production of "The Shadows of a Great City" delighted a big audience at the New Plainfield theatre last night and so pleased Manager Counihan that he booked a return date for later in the season. It was intended to have a matinee yesterday, but owing to the fault of the management in not shipping scenery and paraphernalia from Chester, Pa., on time, it could not be given. The play is one of the best "tank" dramas on the road.

A Chimney Blaze.

A still alarm called Chief Doane and the chemical engine to the home of W. C. Cahoone at 1126 Watchung avenue, this morning, for a chimney blaze. It was extinguished before any damage resulted.

HILL & SHUPP SELL OUT

New York Syndicate Contracts to Take Over the Business About January 1.

NO BRANCH STORES

Firm Will Devote Its Entire Attention to the Local Field—Stock Value to Be Reduced $20,000.

Announcement was made by Hill & Shupp today that the entire department store business now being conducted by them on West Front street had been sold to a syndicate composed of New York men. A contract has been signed whereby the new concern will take charge about January 1.

A member of the Hill & Shupp firm said this morning that the new syndicate was organized for the sole purpose of taking over the Plainfield store and that it was composed of men well known in metropolitan business circles. It will have no branch houses and all the attention of the members will be devoted to this locality. The same floor space controlled by Hill & Shupp will be maintained and many new features in department store trade will be introduced. Who the men are composing the syndicate is not to be made known at present.

According to the contract, Hill & Shupp have agreed to reduce the value of the stock $20,000, and to that end will continue the prices concessions that have been in evidence since they first made known their intention to retire from business.

CITS FIRE LAST GUNS AT MEETING TONIGHT

FORMER MAYOR PLACE TO PRESIDE AT FINAL BOROUGH RALLY.

The Citizens' party will have its last chance to tell the borough voters "all about it" tonight. A mass meeting, the last of the present campaign, will be held in Saengerbund Hall and every attempt will be made to have it the most successful of the lot. Former Mayor Place will preside and the speakers will include former Mayor Needham, Mayoralty Candidate W. J. Conroy and Hon. S. S. Swackhamer.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock and for a half hour previous to that time the Crescent Band, of Raritan, will discourse music in front of the hall. It will also give selections inside between speeches. The list of fifty men who are to act as vice presidents was published in yesterday's edition of The Daily Press.

It is possible that the speakers will devote some time to the alleged registry padding, as at Thursday night's Cits' social meeting it was hinted that something new and startling would be told.

The committee will meet here on November 13 to receive bids for the construction of the new bridge.

REGISTRY CHARGES BEFORE COUNTY BOARD

MAYOR SMALLEY ACCOMPANIES TWENTY BOROUGHITES TO SOMERVILLE.

Accompanied by Mayor Smalley, Charles A. Reed and several other well known boroughites, twenty of the North Plainfielders cited by the Citizens' party to appear before the County Board of Canvassers to show cause why their names should not be stricken from the registry lists, left for Somerville at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Before boarding the train, Mayor Smalley reiterated his statement made Thursday, that he would have no difficulty in proving the right to vote of every man presented by William McLaughlin. One of the party was J. P. Northrop, declared by Dr. J. H. Cooley at the Citizens' meeting, Thursday night, to be registered from an address on Willow avenue that could not be found. Mr. Northrop was still indignant over the allegation that he had no right to vote and said he would very quickly convince the county board that was entirely uncalled for.

BACHELOR APARTMENTS.

C. W. McCutchen Proposes to Make Them Feature of New Building.

More than ordinary interest will be evidenced in the handsome new business block to be built on Park avenue, adjoining the Plainfield Trust Company building, by Charles W. McCutchen, for the reason that it will have a feature not found in any other building in the city.

The building will be three stories, constructed of brick with limestone trimmings. The first floor will be for stores, the second for offices and the third will be reserved for high-class modern bachelor apartments. Special care and attention will be devoted to the arrangement of the third floor and Mr. McCutchen plans to make it the best possible with all the latest improvements.

Reserved Seats for "Cromwell."

Reserved seats for the Oliver Cromwell entertainment at Hope chapel may be obtained at Armstrong's drug store. The large and enthusiastic rehearsals for the entertainment give promise that the production of Oliver Cromwell will surpass even the very successful presentation of John Knox last year.

Pays Great Tribute to the Character and Ability of Candidate.

A STRONG IMPRESSION

Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman Also Makes a Forceful Appeal for the Mayor's Re-election at Last Big Meeting.

Thunders of the last gun in the Smalley campaign boomed through Saengerbund Hall last night, when the final big mass meeting of the contest, so far as the administration forces are concerned, was held.

The hall was filled with voters and a spirit of enthusiasm and confidence marked the gathering. The gallery was fringed all about with women, among whom the wife of former Senator Reed, who was one of the chief speakers, was prominent.

Two speakers new to the platform in the present campaign were heard—former Mayor B. A. Hegeman and Charles W. McCutchen. They made stirring appeals for the mayoralty candidate. Mr. McCutchen's speech produced a noticeably strong impression.

Mr. Hegeman presided over the meeting. Grouped about him on the platform were Mayor Smalley, Clifford W. McGee, the councilmanic candidate; Councilmen Lee and Van Arsdale, James R. Joy, president of the borough school board; C. A. Reed, former Councilman Charles L. Nichol, Mr. McCutchen and Capt. W. C. Smith.

In opening the meeting Mr. Hegeman paid a high tribute to Mayor Smalley's administrations.

"We have had eight mayors since the borough was organized," he said, "and each of those eight worked, as far as his ability permitted, for the advancement and improvement of the municipality. Looking down the line, I can say, without reflecting on any one of those men—I certainly would not wish to reflect on myself—that of all the mayors Newton B. Smalley has been the best. He has been the best because he has been here all the time, and has been able to see just what are the needs of the people, and has sought to minister to those needs with unselfish devotion to the best interests of the borough."

The statements were received with an explosion of applause.

"When a self-constituted political leader, paying not an appreciable dollar in taxes toward the maintenance of this borough," continued Mr. Hegeman, "leads a campaign of villification, deals in generalities and suggestion, in a cowardly attack on a man who has done more for us than any other man in the mayoralty, it is an outrage. I believe in party divisions, but let them be clean—not based on mud-slinging, on lies, and on misrepresentation."

Mr. Hegeman closed with words of commendation for the councilmanic candidates.

Mr. McCutchen followed the chairman. He said it was the first political speech of his life, and begged the indulgence of his hearers. There was no occasion for any indulgence. The speech was simple, but it had the force and directness of simplicity and made perhaps the strongest impression of all the addresses.

After an appeal for independent thinking on the part of the voter, with a careful weighing of the facts as presented to him by both sides, Mr. McCutchen awoke a great burst of applause by a personal tribute to the character of Mayor Smalley.

"There are good reasons why Newton B. Smalley should be re-elected," said Mr. McCutchen earnestly. "N. B. Smalley is honest. And I tell you an honest politician is a rare bird. Every man who has had his ear anywhere near the ground of late knows that there is something doing in this country of ours. Will I tell you what it is? It is the reawakening of the conscience of the American people. Everywhere there is a recognition of that old principle of the law: "Thou shalt not steal." Newton B. Smalley is an honest man. I have reason to believe that he has not profited by his connection with politics; yes, I have reason to believe that had he remained at his private affairs, like you and I, instead of attending to our affairs, he would be better off today.

"But honesty is not the only reason why Newton B. Smalley should be elected. He is competent and experienced. Experience and competence are needed as much as honesty. Personally, I have nothing against Mr. Conroy. I know him to be a good man, but his honesty is not enough to make him a good mayor, and he lacks the competency and experience of Mr. Smalley.

Eight-year-old George Berwitz, of Stelton, was trying to climb an apple tree on his father's place yesterday morning when he lost his balance and fell. The fall didn't hurt him, but he landed alongside a short-tempered cow, which turned in a panic and kicked him in the forehead before bolting. The blow stunned the child and the sharp hoof cut an ugly gash above the bridge of his nose. The boy's mother, who is a nurse, dressed the wound and caught it up with sticking plaster.

SPEAKS FOR SMALLEY

"'But you once opposed N. B. Smalley,' you say. Yes, I did. But that was on one issue, and I do not believe in opposing a man eternally because I once differed with him. And the question on which we divided is quite dead—it is never going to come up again."

Mr. McCutchen turned and pointed an energetic finger at the Mayor, with a grim smile, whereat the crowd roared and the Mayor smiled a pale smile. Senator Reed seemed tickled beyond measure, and almost laughed himself off his chair. The ghost of annexation seemed to have become a very humorous wrath.

"I don't believe in perpetuating quarrels," said Mr. McCutchen, still smiling, "especially when they have been settled my way.

"One other good reason for Mr. Smalley's election—he is wideawake. Is there a street to be repaired, a bit of public work of any kind to be done? You will find the Mayor on the spot very early, generally before the foreman. Yes, he is wideawake."

Mr. McCutchen followed Mr. Hegeman's example and said some nice things about the councilmanic candidates.

Senator Reed, following Mr. McCutchen, made the longest speech of the evening. For the most part his speech was a re-turning of the familiar campaign arguments and charges of the administration orators. He cited figures to show that E. D. Hutchinson's claim that Smalley had increased the salary list was altogether wrong, and repeated the charge of cowardice against the Cits, because they have refused to accept the open debate challenge. He said they hired Saengerbund Hall for tonight, the last night on which it was available before election, in order to present their own version of things to the voters at the last moment without fear of contradiction of effective character.

Mr. Reed reported an interesting conversation with J. J. Stahl, leader of the exempt firemen and the last chief of the old department.

"Stahl told me," he said, "that he was opposed to the Mayor because of the way in which the old department was put out of business. 'Well,' I said, 'what about these charges of surreptitious money grabbing that are being made? Did you ever know Newt Smalley to do anything of that sort? You used to be a friend of ours; you worked for us at the polls—you were on the inside. Did you ever come across anything of that sort?' 'No,' he said, 'I can't tell you of anything dishonest or mean that he has ever done.'"

Mr. Reed said he protested to Stahl against allowing the circulation of stories of graft and dishonesty. Stahl, he said, disclaimed responsibility for what "Honeyman or the other fellows" did.

Mr. Reed paid his respects to Editor Webb, of the North Plainfield Review, at some length. He laid the editor's dissatisfaction to his failure to get all the public printing of the borough. The charge of grafting was turned back on the Cits.

"For the past thirteen months," said Mr. Reed, "the chairman of the finance committee of the council has been a Citizen, Frank W. Krewson. Not a dollar can be drawn from the borough treasury without his signature. In all the time he has been there not a bill has been protested. If there is any extravagance, any waste of the public money, it is up to Frank Krewson. The man who was chairman before him was Charles L. Nichol—do you think he would stand for any graft? And the man before him was John Valiant—do you think he would have stood for it?"

Mayor Smalley spoke very briefly. He repeated his earlier declaration that he would not be sadly put out if the election went against him, and turned again to the unwillingness of the Cits to meet him in debate.

"Many things have been left unsaid through their failure to meet me," said the Mayor, "because in their absence I do not like to berate them."

The Mayor deplored the level to which he said the Cits' campaign had sunk. Their fight, he said, was one of shame and villification.

"It is the most shameful campaign of this sort waged anywhere in this State," he said earnestly. "Had I known that it would become so, I would never have gone into the race; not all the money in the State could have induced me to become a candidate."

Capt. W. C. Smith also spoke. He paid a strong tribute to the Mayor's ability as an executive. He recounted the improvements brought about by Mayor Smalley.

"We have gotten a good deal very cheaply," he said, and the crowd applauded.

Mayor Smalley was the last speaker. As he finished Senator Reed leaped to his feet and called for three cheers for the candidate. He led the response from the front of the stage.

Good music marked the meeting. The hit in that feature was made by Thomas M. Muir, who sang a song that poked all manner of fun at the Cits and their candidates. Judge Runyon accompanied Mr. Muir, and evoked the crowd to plaudits on his own hook with a thundering rendition of "The Grenadier." Before the Muir-Runyon combination took the stage, the music was furnished by Minion Bros., Italian minstrels, of Newark.

PRAISES G.O.P. EFFORTS

Lowe.

He said that the only reason that Councilmen Bullock, Higham, Collector R. L. Lee and Freeholder J. Fred MacDonald were turned down was because they could not be dictated to by the bosses, the machine. He praised the candidates on the Democratic ticket and said that they would represent the people if elected. Mr. Hetfield touched upon the appointment of police commissioners by Mayor Buckle, the appointment of two borough citizens as directors of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room, and in conclusion he said that he did not believe that Councilmen Tyler and Bullock would ever tell any more concerning recent disclosures in the police department. He said that the Supreme Court will decide the questions involved and that would settle the question as to whether the charges made are true or not.

The last two speakers were Dr. C. M. Luckey, another candidate for councilman at large, and J. V. F. Dilts, candidate for tax collector. Both asked the support of the voters, declaring that they stand for good, clean government in local affairs. Joseph M. Hawkins, the third candidate for councilman at large, was present early in the evening, but had to leave before he had an opportunity to speak.

SUITOR STABS HER.

Slashes Bride-to-Be of Rival as She Goes to Be Married.

As Rocco Tenare and his intended bride, Macslata Auletta, were about to enter the City Hall, New York, by the rear door yesterday to have their wedding knot tied by Alderman Shiel, a young man rushed out of the crowd and, drawing a razor, began to slash savagely at Tenare's affianced. After cutting the bride-to-be twice in the right cheek he fled toward Broadway, where he was captured by Patrolman Maloney, of the City Hall squad.

The woman was not seriously injured. The attack attracted a large crowd, and it was with difficulty that the police prevented an attack on the assailant, who gave his name as Angelo Pastora, a barber, living at 232 East One Hundred and Seventeenth street. His only defence was that he loved the intended of Tenare and had given away to a fit of rage when he realized that Macslata was about to wed his enemy. Pastora was held on a charge of felonious assault.

Macslata and Rocco, despite their unpleasant experience, were determined to be married. After the slashing case had been disposed of they asked Magistrate Wahle to marry them, but he refused, and so did Justice Wyatt, to officiate.

The would-be married pair then went to the City Hall, but even there Alderman Grifenhagen refused to marry them.

Alderman Haggetry took compassion on the pair, however, and united them in approved aldermanic style.

ACCUSED OF KIDNAPPING.

Woman Whom Girl's Father Prosecutes Faints in Court.

Mrs. Helen Elmer, twenty-five years old, of 802 Eagle avenue, New York, was arraigned in Morrisaina Police Court yesterday, charged by William Thompson, of 454 East One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street, with having kidnapped his fifteen-year-old daughter Luretta.

The father told Magistrate Walsh that he found the girl, who disappeared from home last Sunday, in a back room at Mrs. Elmer's home.

Mrs. Elmer denied having held out any inducements for the girl to remain, and she fainted when Magistrate Walsh held her in $1,000 bail for examination.

GIRL IN GAS-FILLED ROOM.

Found Unconscious After Having Important Letter Mailed.

Annie Backman, a corset maker, twenty-four years old, who says she lives at 983 DeKalb avenue, Brooklyn, was discovered today unconscious in a room at the Sagamore Hotel, 71 Cooper Square. The gas was pouring from three jets.

The girl, who registered as "Mrs. Lange," had given a maid a letter to mail, and told her it was very important.

At Bellevue, when the girl had been placed out of danger, she told who she was, but refused to give any reason for attempting suicide.

LOVELY EYES.

Going to bed early will make the eyes deeper in hue. The woman who wants her light brown eyes to appear black will go to bed an hour sooner. She will sleep facing a dark curtain and will waken gradually in the morning.

Eating fruit and vegetables, and especially apples, will make the eyes brighter. Light blue eyes will look like delft and faded gray eyes will seem like a clean blue. Diet has a great deal to do with the color of the eyes.

Emotion, and particularly happiness, makes the eyes heavier and deeper in color. A woman who is deeply excited will have glowing eyes, while she who is restless will have faded eyes. The deeper the emotion the deeper the tone of the eyes. The pigment which colors the eyes comes and goes, and, like tears, it can disappear from the eyes, then come again with a rush.

Healthy women have brighter eyes than sick women, and women when enthusiastic have orbs three shades lighter than when not roused to enthusiasm. The pigments of the eyes rush into the color zone at the first show of enthusiasm.

But it is the women who take care of their eyes who have the really beautiful eyes.

Mr. Mannett, in the Maryland Block, Butte, Mont., was entirely bald. In less than a month Herpicide had removed the enemies of hair growth, and nature did its work by covering his head with thick hair an inch long, and in six weeks he had a normal suit of hair. PRESIDENT DESIGNATES NOV. 30 AS THANKSGIVING DAY

The proclamation of President Roosevelt, designating Thursday, November 30, as Thanksgiving day, was issued Thursday afternoon. It is as follows:

"By the President of the United States of America:

A PROCLAMATION.

"When nearly three centuries ago the first pilgrims came to this country, which has now become this great republic, they fronted not only hardship and privation but terrible risk of their lives. In those grim years the custom grew of setting apart one day in each year for a special service of thanksgiving to the Almighty for preserving the people through the changing seasons.

"The custom has now become national and hallowed by immemorial usage. We live in easier and more plentiful times than our forefathers, the men who, with rugged strength, faced the rugged days; and yet the dangers to national life are just as great now as at any previous time in our history. It is eminently fitting that once a year our people should separate a day for thanksgiving to the Giver of Good and at the same time that they express their thankfulness for the abundant mercies received, should manfully acknowledge their shortcomings and pledge themselves solemnly and in good faith to strive to overcome them.

"During the past year we have been blessed with bountiful crops. Our business prosperity has been great. No other people has ever stood on as high a level of material well-being as ours now stands. We are not hreatened by foes from without. The foes from whom we should pray to be delivered are our own passions, appetites and follies; and against these there is always need that we should war.

"Therefore, I now set apart Thursday, the thirtieth day of this November, as the day of thanksgiving for blessings of the past and of prayer for the future, and on that day I ask that throughout the land the people gather in their homes and places of worship and in rendering thanks unto the Most High for the manifold blessings for the past year, consecrate themselves to a life of cleanliness, honor and wisdom, so that this nation may do its allotted on the earth in a manner worthy of those who founded it, and of those who preserved it.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington, this second day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and five, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and thirtieth. (Signed)

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

"By the President.

"Elihu Root, Secretary of State."

DIAMOND DUST.

From present indications Leals baseball team next season will be one of the strongest in the school's history.

"Red" Waller is still holding his position as cash register at a shooting gallery on the Bowery, New YorY. He claims that the job helps him to keep him in condition for play.

The game between Hoboken and the Elizabethport Stars will decide the question as to which is the best team in the State, the clubs being comprised of players in the same class.

W. T. Glenney has been elected captain and Edwin Browne manager of the baseball team at Leals School for the coming year. The officers of the Athletic Asociation are as follows: President, John Valiant; secretary, Charles Chapman; treasurer, William T. Glenney.

The Hoboken Club will play its last game of the season tomorrow, when it will meet the Elizabethport Stars at Elizabethport. "Larry" Hesterfer, of the Newark, Eastern League Club, will pitch for Hobokens, otherwise the team will present the same lineup. "Red" Waller will pitch for the Stars. A number of local fans will attend the game.

FOOTBALL.

George Dallas is captain and John Valiant, manager of Leal's School football team.

The following is the football schedule of Leals School for the remainder of the season: Tomorrow, Newark Academy at Newark; Tuesday, November 7, P. H. S.; Friday, November 17, P. H. S.

That the N. P. H. S. eleven is improving rapidly in its play, was shown by the strong defense in the game with Leals' School. The line bucking was well directed and had the borough school lads played as strong in the first half as the second, the score might have been different.

The manager of the Plainfield High School football eleven has received a letter from the manager of Ratgers Prep team, that the published accounts of the team giving up for the rest of the season, were untrue and that the team would be prepared for the P. H. S. at New Brunswick on November 11. The reports in circulation were that Dr. Payson, head master of the school, had prohibited the team from further playing this year because several players were injured in a recent game.

BASKET BALL.

It is expected that the first team, basketball, to represent the Y. M. C. A. will be the strongest of any in recent years. Some fine new material has been secured.

Tracy Howard has been elected captain and Charles P. Lyman manager of Leals School basketball team. The team promises to be an exceptionally strong one.

There will be plenty of good basketball here this season for lovers of this popular indoor game. The first team of the Y. M. C. A. has arranged a strong schedule, as has also the teams representing Leals, Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools. A majority of the best games will be played at the Y. M. C. A.

ROD AND GUN.

J. A. Staats and Fred Sandford have returned from a successful hunting trip. They report game as being plentiful.

LEALS' SCHOOL NOTES.

R. T. Wilcox, Leals School, '05, is playing end on his freshman team at Wesleyan.

Edwin M. Daniel, Leals School, '05, has accepted a position in the New York office of the New York Edison Company.

The Class '07, Leals School, has elected these officers: President, George W. Endicott; secretary and treasurer, Tracy H. Howard. Howard has also been chosen to represent the Junior class on the Athletic Board.

The following boys entered Leals School this year: Adams, Alpaugh, Bergen, Bowlby, Brokaw, Day, Heely, H. Howard, R. Lyman, Mack, Morrison, Perkins, Starr, Stevenson, C. Wilcox, Wilson, Wright, Blackmore, Randolph and Southwick.

Large Realty Deal at Lincoln.

Through the agency of Silas D. Drake about 150 acres of unimproved land at Lincoln has been sold to a New York syndicate. The syndicate has also purchased the 100 acres opposite Lincoln railroad station, known as the Morgan Smalley farm, lately owned by the Captain Davey Estate. The syndicate will take an active interest in developing these tracts and in locating factories and building homes.

To Enjoy Outdoors.

Plans for several outdoor trips during the snappy weather of late fall are being made by the boys of the Y. M. C. A. In a couple of weeks a hare-and-hound chase will be held.

Plainfield, N. J., November 4, 1905.

Two days more before the battles, and then comes the "I told you so."

The President has designated November 30 as Thanksgiving Day; but the people of Philadelphia have also set apart November 9.

Tammany is willing to concede Hearst 70,000 and yet there were about as many in the enthusiastic crowds that bore him aloft through the East Side last night.

It is reported that Senator Kean will not assume the active leadership of the State Republican forces until after election. That's the right idea, Senator, for you known it would be a rather expensive honor just now.

There is no doubt as to the truth of the statement made by an exchange that the Russian peasants were treated as badly as life insurance policy holders. The only difference is that the peasants have known all along what they were up against.

The buildings committee has not presented that proposed anti-spite house ordinance to the Common Council as yet. "There is hope," and meanwhile property-wreckers can hold ahead with a free hand. But what is the reason for delay Mr. Bullock?

Ernest R. Ackerman and Edward Nugent, opponents in the State Senatorial campaign, are to be commended for the manner in which they are conducting their fight. Neither one will allow any word of disapprobation for the other and both of them are confining themselves to the issues. In that they are wise for this generation the people are weary of campaigns of mud-slinging.

Now speak up, Mr. Wilson. Don't you know that you could convince the merchants that you have done your full duty by having the Common Council convened as a committee on the whole? In this manner some means could be devised to meet the expense of street sprinkling. Such a course would only require two days' notice, and then the whole responsibility would be lifted from your shoulders. Speak up, Mr. Wilson.

THE FORUM.

Martine Heard From.

Editor The Daily Press:

The average citizen cannot understand how a man can disagree with another on the matter of politics or public policies, and yet be on pleasant social terms.

I have often said that my bitterest political enemies are some of my warmest socieal friends. I am no social enemy of Hon. John Kean, but am most heartily in favor of the city of Plainfield owning a city water plant, and ultimately every public utility.

While John Kean's hand may not be directly seen in the contest, yet every satelite and man on payrolls has his orders, either spoken or otherwise understood. Every influence is being brought to bear to defeat the proposed city ownership. I urge that this all important question be kept in view. Taxpayers, landlords, tenants, voters, do not let the general election obscure this all-important question. Vote "For" on the city ownership issue.

Borough Council's Short Session.

A regular meeting of the borough Council was held last night, but owing to the attractiveness of the Republican mass meeting across the street but little business was transacted. Mayor Smalley excused himself, and James K. Arnold took the chair. Bills were ordered paid and several minor reports received, after which adjournment was taken until a special meeting to be called later in the month.

Messrs. Osgood, Hooley, Heely, Joy, Dupee, Nichols, McGee and C. W. McCutchen Among the Number.

Instead of reading a list of vice presidents at the Republican mass meeting last night, as is customary, Chairman Hegeman presented a large list of borough citizens who have put themselves on record as supporting Mayor Smalley for reelection. The lists includes the names of men of all stations and degrees of prominence. The list, with its preliminary declaration of position in the borough contest, is as follows:

"We, the undersigned, being legal voters of the Borough of North Plainfield, endorse the nomination of Newton B. Smalley for Mayor, and of Clifford W. McGee and Edward P. T. Smith, for members of the Council.

"We intend to support these candidates at the coming election and we earnestly recommend them for the cordial support of our fellow townsmen, both Republican and Democratic.

"We are satisfied that their election at this time will best promote the welfare of our Borough and its citizens.

ANOTHER MODERN BUILDING.

W. R. Codington and F. A. Pope to Erect a Fine Structure.

Additional improvement of business property is to be made in the near future by William R. Codington and F. A. Pope, who recently purchased a portion of the tract on East Front street upon which the MacDonald house stood. The other portion was purchased by Dr. Albert Pittis, who changed the location of the house and erected three stores in front of it.

Mr. Codington and Mr. Pope have had plans drawn for a handsome building to be erected on their land. It is understood that it will be constructed of brick and stone. Large stores will occupy the first floor with either flats or offices on the upper floors. Estimates are now being secured for the construction and it is expected that work will be started soon.

H. W. Marshall, the laundryman, is the owner of the property to the west of this tract, upon which now stands several very old buildings, and it is stated that plans are underway to replace them with a modern building.

Miss Brown Improving.

Miss Mary A. Brown, proprietor of the cleaning and dyeing establishment on West Second street, who was injured recently by an explosion, is at her home on Washington avenue. Her condition is so favorable, that her physician, believes she will be out in a couple of weeks. Most of Miss Brown's suffering now is in the right arm. No skin grafting will be necessary.

AMUSEMENTS.

It should indeed be a pleasure to local theatregoers to learn that so excellent an attraction as "When We Were Twenty-one" is to appear at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and night. This, Nat Goodwin's greatest success, comes to Plainfield after its long and successful run in New York, where it was unanimously pronounced by both press and public to be one of the best plays ever presented. Henry V. Esmond, author of such well known plays as "The Second in Command," "Mrs. Lanes' Defense," and many other of New York's greatest successes, is the author of "When We Were Twenty-one," and it is generally conceded to be his masterpieces.

Walter Edwards, in the character of "David Corson," has ample opportunities to play upon the "tear passage" of his audience. The ladies provide themselves with a "few" extra handkerchiefs before witnessing "The Redemption of David Corson," while the "big strong men" make use of their "dust in the eye" story to cover up their emotions.

The spirit of his father is in Thomas Jefferson's rendering of "Rip Van Winkle." The mantle of his father has fallen on worthy shoulders, those of the senior actor son, so long associated with the great past master. For over forty years Joseph Jefferson identified himself with the jolly vagabond Rip, so that it seems almost a matter of right, now that the elder Jefferson has passed away, that the popularity which he enjoyed should descend upon his son Thomas. To those who have never seen Rip Van Winkle, as Joseph Jefferson played the part, Thomas Jefferson will be a revelation. Mr. Jefferson comes to the New Plainfield theatre after an enormous hit at the Boston theatre and a highly successful engagement at Wallack's theatre, New York City.

Mysticism and vaudeville, a strange combination, but one that should prove strong from the entertainment standpoint, will hold sway all the week at the Casino, beginning on Monday next, November 6. The Fays furnish the principal part of the programme with their strange and perplexing feats. They are known as the white Mahatmas and are said to perform wonders more marvelous than those of the celebrated Indian fakirs, whom they studied upon a trip to the land of mystics. Mrs. Fay performs both in the cabinet and in the bright light, when bound hand, foot and neck. It is not upon the cabinet tricks that they base their fame, however. After performing several minor experiments, such as making a handkerchief stand on end and move at command, lifting tables, and so on, Mrs. Fay proceeds to answer questions written by persons in the audience and to give the names signed to them; and mind you, these questions have not left the hands of the questioners and are seen by no eyes but their own. More than 80 per cent. of the names and questions which she declares she sees by her peculiar power are usually found correct. Associated with the Fays are a number of clever artists, who appear during the time they are not on the stage.

"A Madcap Princess," the romantic light opera by Harry B. Smith and Ludwig Englander, with Miss Sophie Brandt in the title role, is coming to the New Plainfield theatre Tuesday evening.

One of the great successes of the season is "The Great Jewel Robbery," a melodrama which will be at the New Plainfield theatre Wednesday night. The play introduces the Russell Bros., who as usual impersonate both male and female Irish characters. These clever players stand alone in their line of female impersonations, not only that they are humorous, but true to nature, they belong to the school of actors made famous by the Harrigan and Hart Company, a quality very seldom seen nowadays, but of high order in character comedy. The play will be handsomely mounted and presented by a talented lot of players.

To those who love the beautiful and the impressive in drama, "Monna Vanna," at the Manhattan theatre, New York, is the treat of the season thus far in that city. Here is a famous play that has absorbed intelligent attention for long periods in every European city, produced with all the wealth of detail that has made the Manhattan theatre, under the direction of Harrison Grey Fiske, noted not only in New York, but throughout the country; for Manhattan productions have come to exercise a strong influence on the thousands that visit New York, and must be seen by everybody. Aside from the fine appeal of "Monna Vanna" as a play and as an artistic spectacle, this production introduces Madame Kalich to the American stage, an actress who has won fame in various other languages and who has clearly shown the wisdom of her ambition to become a figure in the English-speaking theatre. Her Vanna in this great play of Maeterlinck's is at all times an admirable impersonation, and it its stronger moments she thrills her audience as none but an artist of exceptional powers can thrill an audience. The stage pictures in "Monna Vanna" are among the most beautiful ever seen on the American stage, and the whole dressing of the play is rich and picturesque. No admirer of the best in the theatre can afford to miss "Monna Vanna" at the Manhattan during its stay. There is but one matinee a week—on Saturday.

"How much longer will 'The Prince Chap' remain at Joe Weber's theatre?" was asked the man in the box office. "As long as the public wants it," was his reply. And it would seem that "The Prince Chap" is destined to remain in New York long after the snow flies, because seats are being bought for weeks ahead. Unique is this play in many ways. It has vogue as well among the former patrons of the Weber musical productions as it has among patrons of straight drama. That the play is the thing after all, there is no gainsaying, for "The Prince Chap" is so charming it would draw audiences anywhere, as will any play the public wishes to see. The cast is about as perfect as could be desired, and the success the play has made is due quite as much to the interpretation of the characters shown as to the simplicity and beauty of the story which the actors are called upon to illustrate. Cyril Scott, Thomas A. Wise, Mary Keogh, Maud White, Cecil De Mille, Margaret Pitt, Helen Pullman and Edith Speare deserve continued applause for their acting.

A monster benefit performance in memory of the late Will A. McConnell, is now assured. At an informal meeting of theatrical managers and newspaper men, held a week ago, Daniel Frohman was asked to serve as chairman of the executive committee, an investigation which he promptly accepted. Lew Fields has already tendered to Mr. Frohman the use of his theatre for the testimonial performance. and a big programme is being arranged, to be presented at that house the afternoon of November 16.

Edna May is playing to crowded houses at Daly's theatre, New York, where her fascination and her captivating ,graceful qualities are emphasized at every new performance. Her acting, singing and dancing evoke enthusiastic admiration from the audiences, and two of her songs are among the most conspicuous hits made in musical plays in some seasons. These are "Raining" and Buttercup." They are even more popular than Miss May's songs, "My Little Canoe" and "Lonesome" were last season. Women have every inducement to visit this show. Besides their favorite actress, Miss May, in an exceedingly attractive role, they have offered to them the most extensive and richest display of gowns ever seen on the local stage. These wonderful konws are worn by show girls from London, Paris and New York, and the combination of brilliant millinery and international beauties, is genuinely eye-filling. The daintiness and charm of the production are not more assertive than the abundance of fun, song and dance that is furnished by the comedians and entertainers. "Back to Harraw," which is freely encored, is one of the best songs and dances an audience ever enjoyed and there are other equally spirited and delightful features. Farren Soutar, Fred Kaye and Fred Wright, the trio of comedians, keep the supply of laughter up to the bubbling point all through the perfromance.

Following a successful engagement of six weeks on Broadway, Mr. Raymond Hitchcock will begin a week's engagement at the Grand on Monday night, November 6, as a "distinctly different comedian in the latest Edward E. Kidder comedy, "Easy Dawson," the new American piece that was seleted byc Henry W. Savage for Mr. Hitchcock's stellar debut in straight comedy. "Easy Dawson" is claimed to be a bright American comedy full of fun and replete with humorous incidents, with occasional strong pathetic scenes that have given Mr. Hitchcock an opportunity to develop a serious side of his nature that but few of his friends and admirers suspected he possessed. Though Mr. Hitchcock has put his former stage surroundings of beautiful girls behind him, having demonstrated that they were not essential to the success of a comedian, in order to make the change from musical to straight comedy not too pronounced, he has been fitted with two very good songs that with the old Hitchcock smile and droll voice have already scored as the hit of the season.

Where is the Boy Preacher?

William Wallace Edwards, the eleven-year-old boy preacher, who was scheduled to be at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church all of this week, left Plainfield Tuesday afternoon with his father to see the Hallowe'en celebration in Newark, and has failed to return. Rev. H. C. Ashley, pastor of the church, as well as the officers, are unable to explain why the boy "wonder" did not keep his engagement.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

"!?" cried Benton. "Good heavens!" And then stood dumb, for all on a sudden it flashed over him. Rosalie! Rosalie, who had so inexplicably donned Ladue's uniform, ventured down through the darkness to the pike, seeking some one at the stone house. Rosalie, who had refused to tell what influence prompted that apparently reckless escapade! Papers? Information concerning our movements? Why, what sense was there in her taking all that risk when at that very moment our pickets were falling back before Stuart's triumphant advance—when all but a few of the guard had already disappeared from the Henry place—when by midnight or at the latest at dawn she was almost sure to be again in touch with her own friends and kindred? All this and more flashed through his mind as he stood there in the dark little office, with his interrogator impatiently facing him, and two other officials looking up at him from a paper-littered table, much impressed, evidently, by the significance of his silence and embarrassment.

"Yes," sharply repeated the first speaker, "papers and, doubtless, valuable information. You saw them pass to Jennings, as he calls himself, did you not?"

"I saw nothing of the kind!" answered Benton, inexpressibly relieved that as yet, at least, he had had no occasion to speak of her. "Indeed," he went on, eagerly, "I was too busy trying to get out of the scrape to think of Jennings at all. I made a jump for my horse and was in a hand-to-hand fight in two seconds. I never knew what become of Jennings."

"You remember Sergt. Miller, do you not?"

"I remember a sergeant—an Indiana sergeant, and a very keen one who was there, but I feared he and his party were killed or captured."

"Some of them were," said the examining officer, grimly, "but Miller dived into the bushes, made his way through the darkness and escaped. He declares he saw the young rebel officer toss the packet to Jennings and heard him cry, 'For Gen. Armisted—to-night—sure!' And now here is Jennings begging to be allowed to see two prisoners—Maj. Lounsberry and the young Virginian, Pelham, who was wounded protecting him the day you were rescued. He brings a note from the president. Look here!" and taking a scrap of paper from his desk the staff officer held it forth for Benton's inspection. It was brief and to the point:

"The bearer, Mr. Jennings, has been of service and asks to see two friends—prisoners—Maj. Lounsberry and Trooper Pelham. I shall be glad if opportunity can be given him.

"(Signed) A. LINCOLN."

Benton read and looked up inquiringly. "I, too, should like to see them—Lounsberry, at least," said he, with eyes that kindled and lips that set, "but not as a prisoner. I have a score to settle with that gentleman. When does Mr. Jennings go?"

"Can't say. The secretary said no emphatically—not until matters were explained. It was thought you might settle it one way or another before we questioned him." And the officer was manifestly disappointed, and still he persisted. "You heard nothing about him?—Dr. Chilton never spoke of him while you were at Charlottesville?"

"I cannot recall his ever doing so—except casually. But Judge Armistead, not the general, was there at Gainesville. My belief is that Gen. Armistead was not near Manassas when I was taken. Miller must have misunderstood."

"Well," said the officer, finally, "I'm sorry we had to trouble you, but the secretary thought you would know more of this suspected stranger. Gen. McDowell trusted him, we fear, too much, and as you are to see the president we thought you might open his eyes if the fellow were playing a double game. I dare say you know people sometimes impose on the president," and here the captain smiled, whimsically, "and that's why when he could issue these things as an order, he won't. He thinks it wiser to let the secretary handle matters of the kind. Now, your general, Mr. Benton, is being accused of having southern leanings because he has been protecting southern property there about Fredericksburg."

"Some defenseless women, left all alone, asked for guards and got them," answered Benton, stoutly. "I shouldn't wonder if their lords and masters are secesh; but we're not warring on women, I take it."

"As yet—no," was the thoughtful reply, "and may God forbid our having to come to it. But, my young friend, if you knew half what we know—and we don't begin to know half that those brainy, daring, scheming, smiling southern women are doing all around us—you might think the time close at hand when they, too, would have to be made amenable to the laws of war. It isn't a week since one of them ran off with one of our prisoners here, and you know what a trick was played by—Dr. Chilton's daughter."

"NOT SO BAD."

And now indeed did Benton's face begin to burn, a thing the captain and the silent listeners were quick to note.

"You have your receipt for your prisoner, I presume. Then I'll not detain you further, only—come this way. We've got to question your friend Jennings next," and so saying the captain led his visitor through a second room where at crowded desks a score of clerks were writing. "When do you go to the white house?" he suddenly asked.

"I don't know. I expected to learn here. But I hoped to have time to get refreshened up a bit, and I need new——"

"Nonsense! You look as though you'd just stepped out of a bandbox in that uniform. Ask Mr. Stone to come here," he added, to a statuesque soldier at the door.

"The uniform may be all right, but what I need is sash and side arms," said Benton, still weighted with the traditions of his "regular" regiment.

"Never mind them! The president never notices what a man wears or knows what he himself has on. I suppose he wants to hear what you saw and heard—and something about the Chiltons, for they seem to be in hot water. Ah, Mr. Stone, what time was Mr. Benton to report to the white house?"

"I was to bring him over as soon as he arrived, sir. Is this the gentleman?" And a young man in civilian garb bowed courteously. Then, with a promise to return, as there were matters on which Gen. Thomas wished to question him, Benton hurried away.

It was not yet nine o'clock, but already half a dozen carriages were halted along the semi-circular drive in front of the mansion, and a number of pallid, anxious women and grave-visaged men were gathered about the beautiful, colonnaded portico. Through the waiting group the messenger swiftly led his charge. Mr. Stone led Benton to a long window facing the river and the heights of Arlington beyond, left him there and disappeared. A moment or two later that door opened, and the two secretaries did not even rise or discontinue their work. A tall, bony, man, with brown, sunken cheeks came striding in. Switching his tangling coat tails out of the way, the president unhinged somewhere about the middle and dropped on the edge of the table.

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C. W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

GAME LAWS IN BRIEF FOR THE SPORTSMAN

WHAT IS LAWFUL FOR THE HUNTER TO SHOOT JUST NOW.

As the hunting season is now well underway it is well to call the attention of sportsmen to the game laws so that by the observance of them they will not get into trouble and at the same time help to preserve the sport for other hunters.

It is now lawful to shoot woodcock, gray, English or Wilson snipe, rail bird, marsh hen or mud hen and reed bird, geese, duck, brant and water wild fowl, shore birds, surf snipe or bay snipe. The law is open for the shooting of this game until December 31, and commencing Friday, November 10, it will be lawful to shoot rabbits, hare, quail, patridge, grouse, English or ring-necked pheasant and gray, black and fox squirrels. The shooting of this game is permitted from November 10 to December 31.

It is unlawful to take or attempt to take any game except by the use of guns held at arms' length, to hunt or kill deer at any time, to have trapped game in possession, to hunt on Sunday or carry firearms in the fields or woods or on the waters on Sunday or to hunt for quail, patridge, pheasant, woodcock or rabbits when there is tracking snow on the ground, to permit the erection or maintenance of unlawful contrivance ofr taking game, which applies to owners and tenants of lands.

It is also not lawful to hunt geese, ducks or any water wild fowl, except between one hour before sunrise and one hour after sunset, to permit dogs to run rabbits at night at any time, or to run at large in woods or fields inhabited by rabbits or game birds except between October 1 and February 1, to remove quail, grouse, woodcock, squirrel, hare, English or ring-necked pheasants from the State, to kill more than thirty marsh or mud hens in one day.

Farmers and fruit growers have the right to trap rabbits under certain restrictions and dealers have fifteen days after the close of the season in which to dispose of their game. Among other prohibitions, while not of legal enactment, yet recognized by all true sports are the following:

Never violate the letter or spirit of the law. Never take more game than you have convenieat use for. Never be insolent or impolite to a landowner who orders you off his premises; for although he may not own the game you are after he has the right to exclusive possession of his property. Never fail to destroy a trap when you find one set. Never shoot at a game bird except on the wing. Never kill the last quail in a covey; leave some to breed next year. Never forget that game laws are intended to improve and increase sport and not to prevent or restrict it.

A BELATED HALLOWE'EN.

Baptist Endeavorers Have a Good Time.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church a Hallowe'en social was held in the parlors of the church Thursday. The young people spent the evening playing all sorts of Hallowe'en games, including hiding the ring, blowing out the candle and finding out when one is to be married.

The parlors were appropriately decorated for the occasion with pumpkins, jack-o'-lanterns and bunting, while a feature were the ghosts, which furnished lots of fun. Another feature was the fortune telling of Miss Georgia Chamberlain, who represented a gypsy. After the playing of games an informal musicale was enjoyed, Miss Estelle Sofield rendering several piano solos. Refreshments were also served.

The committee in charge comprised Miss Miner, chairman; Miss Mary Giles, Miss Georgia Chamberlain, Miss Lizzie Van Winkle, Irving Van Winkle, who were assisted by Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry, Joseph M. Hawkins, Mrs. Ada Cuming, Miss Jennie Giles and Miss Bessie Giles.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Joseph E. Haynes and Miss Etta Raybert, of North avenue, have returned from a visit with friends at Annandale.

Arthur L. Denton, who is ill at his home in Washington avenue with typhoid fever, is holding his own and resting comfortably.

Mrs. William H. Abbott, to whom a son was born recently, is quite ill at her home on Grant avenue with scarlet fever. A consultation of physicians was held yesterday.

Mrs. P. Newton Drake, of Somerset street, and her mother, Mrs. P. M. Demarest, of Syracuse, have returned from Patchogue, L. I., having visited Mrs. Demarest's grandson, Dr. H. M. Demarest, of that place.

Engagement Announced.

At a dinner given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, last night, announcement was made of the engagement of their eldest daughter, Miss Leila Cruikshank, to H. Reeve Stockton. The wedding will probably take place this winter. Both Miss Cruikshank and Mr. Stockton are prominent in local society, and they are very fond of outdoor sports, including golf and horseback riding. Mr. Stockton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Stockton, of Central avenue.

Alarm But No Blaze.

The borough fire department was called out yesterday afternoon for a supposed blaze at the home of John Calder, on Stone street. In building a fire in the stove the pipe became dislodged and smoke filled the house. Mrs. Calder thought the chimney was in flames and had an alarm turned in.

Miss Mabel Trimmer, of Middle Valley, has been visiting relatives here for several days.

EVANGELISTIC SERIES AT MONROE AVE. CHURCH

MANY PROMINENT CLERGYMAN TO TAKE PART.

Acting on a suggestion made by Rev. George Mooney, the members of the Monroe Avenue church will begin a special evangelistic campaign on Sunday night, November 12. No definite time has been fixed upon as to how long it will be continued, this to be governed by the degree of interest manifested and the good accomplished. The following clergymen have consented to help in opening the series:

Monday, November 13, Rev. J. Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church; Tuesday, November 14, Rev. J. H. Chambliss, D. D., of the First Baptist church; Wednesday, November 15, Rev. T. C. Roberts-Horsfield, of the Brooklyn City Mission; Thursday, November 16, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church; Friday, November 17, Rev. William H. Morgan, D. D., pastor of Central M. E. church, Newark.

It is hoped that the public generally will feel an interest in the meetings and attend. An effort will be made to make the services bright and helpful, that they may be an inspiration to Christian for greater service and an incentive to the unsaved to begin the Christian life.

MAGNIFICENT SPECTACLE.

Thompson & Dundy Introduce a Novel Attraction.

An idea of the magnitude of "The Romance of a Hindoo Princess," the most magnificent and gorgeous spectacle ever produced, with the herd of plunging elephants, now attracting thousands at both daily performances at the New York Hippodrome, as a supplement to "A Yankee Circus on Mars," the great musical extravaganza, with its wealth of special features, may be gained from the following figures: One hundred and ten carpenters are employed and sixty-eight clearers work in view of the audience, while fifty bustle about back of the curtain. They handle more than one thousand tons of scenery during the operation of transforming the great stage. The lumber used in the scene John F. Corrigan, the Hippodrome master carpenter, estimates would extend, stretched end to end, as far as Ossining, N. Y.; it supports fifty tons of elephants in motion, and 200,000 screws were required when it was cut into lengths and attached. Sixty bales of imported Irish linen are employed in the setting of the scene. Each contains 1,300 yards, costing 55 cents a yard. The ground cloth used in the first scene is the largest piece of canvas ever sewed. It covers 11,000 square feet and weighs 1,600 pounds. The biggest and heaviest piece of individual scenery handled towers 53 feet and is 150 feet wide. It weighs fifteen tons, and sixty-five men are required to set it in position.

Great Honor for Preacher.

At the International Conference of Unitarians, held in Geneva, Switzerland, last August, three sermons were preached, one in French, one in German and one in English. The English sermon was delivered in the State church, from John Calvin's old pulpit, by Rev. Dr. Minot Savage, of New York. Dr. Savage will preach in the Unitarian church here tomorrow evening.

Miss Mabel Conover, of Duer street, has returned home after a six weeks' trip in the South. She visited Montreat, Asheville and Hot Springs, N. C., also Atlanta, Ga., stopping at Washington on her return home.

CITS ARE HIT HARD IN A TOPICAL SONG

WM. N. RUNYON'S COMPOSITION SUNG BY T. M'MASTER MUIR.

Next to C. W. McCutchen's speech for Mayor Smalley, the striking feature of the Republican rally at Saengerbund Hall last night was Tommy Muir's song on the Cit leaders. Every verse caused outbursts of applause. The song was as follows:

Pray listen to my gentle Muse,
I'll let you hear some dead straight news;
The Cits may jaw till Judgment Day,
Oh fudge, they're licked already.

O, what a tangled web we weave,
When first we practice to deceive;
Our own Webb shows it's very true,
He certainly is tangled.

The Cits are fine at making claims,
And telling lies and calling names,
But when it comes to getting votes,
Newt. Smalley's got 'em groggy.

The Cits like Victor dogs rejoice,
Whene'er they hear their Master's voice;
His honeyed words are very slick,
But gee whiz, ain't they crooked?

The Cits say Smalley doesn't work,
But how about the Cits who shirk?
For instance take old Hank De Mott,
He certainly is a dead one.

Bill Conroy wants an office bad,
He talks and talks and talks like mad;
Bill Conroy keeps a carriage shop,
That's why his tongue keeps waggin'.

When Goodwin hollers, don't get mad,
His case is really awful sad;
You know that Johnnie in the war
Was shot while he was running.

The Conroy heelers don't like us;
And my, how Charlie Ball do cuss;
I think it's up to Mr. Ball,
To go and wash his mouth out.

Now what d'ye think of Slippery Sam;
Who wants to be the Great I Am;
He thinks he's like Abe. Lincoln some;
Oh my, ain't he mistaken.

Brave Mr. Place stands up alone,
And says "Hooray for my backbone;
I fined old Newt. three dollars once,"
I find Newt. made him do it.

McLaughlin's Statement.

William McLaughlin, who has been charged with swearing in non-residents of the borough as voters, denies that he placed Herbert Fletcher or Harry Williams on the registry list, as alleged by the Citizens. To a Daily Press reporter today he declared that the Cits had placed the name of Frank Swackhamer, brother of S. S. Swackhamer, on the list in both districts.

POLITICAL NOTICE.

Union College,
Schenectady, N. Y.,
Nov. 2, 1905.

My Dear Mr. Ackerman:—

I have learned with peculiar pleasure of your candidacy for the office of Senator, not only because your nomination expressed the confidence and good-will of your fellow-citizens, but especially because you represent the type of men needed in American political life.

I have known you since your boyhood and have seen you develop the qualities which will make you a fearless, conscientious and fair-minded representative of the people. You have both the ability and the character demanded by the responsible office for which you are running.

What I like best about your candidacy as I read of it in the paper is your independence, leaving you free, if elected, as you surely must be, to serve your district and the State according to your own intelligent judgment and deep-seated convictions. It is just this self-respecting attitude that is now commanding to an unusual degree the attention and support of the people. It is a clear note of progress, an evidence of improved political conditions, a promise of the more truly representative government needed in every State.

If I were now a Plainfielder, as I once was, I would take great satisfaction in voting for you and persuading others to do so.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed)
Andrew V. V. Raymond,

To the Hon. Ernest R. Ackerman.

CIT CHARGES FALL FLAT

Complete Failure to Prove Illegal Registration Before Board.

ONLY ONE NAME OFF

That Scratched at the Voter's Request—Question of Legal Residence Governed Practically All the Cases.

Unable to prove any intention to practice fraud in a single case, and unable to prove that any one of the men whose right to vote they had assailed was not a legal voter, the Citizens suffered flat failure in their attempt to expose alleged registration padding by the Smalley forces before the County Board of Elections at Somerville Saturday afternoon. Of the twenty-four names they moved to have stricken from the lists but one was removed. The one scratched was James Kane, and the result in that case contained no elements of satifaction for the Citizens, because Kane has boarded in the borough for two years, and his name was removed simply because he sent word by his brother-in-law, who so testified under oath, that he wished to retain his legal residence in Plainfield.

The men whose right to vote was questioned were Edward Smalley, Summit avenue; Vincent Godshall, Fairview avenue; G. B. Fletcher, Fairview avenue; Leslie Tingley, Grandview avenue; John Wendell, Jr., Clifford Schorb, Somerset street; August Melcher, George Bonnell, Manning avenue; Charles Cox, Harmony street; B. B. Bailey, Manning avenue; Walter Webster, Manning avenue; George Waldron, William Waldron, James Kane, Manning avenue, A. T. Van Pelt, Harmony street; Joseph Scheurlein, Watchung avenue, and nine negroes from a boarding house on Race street.

In practically all the cases the question hinged about the legal understanding of the voter's place of residence. All but one of the men in question had been undoubted residents of the borough at one time or another, who had moved over into the city or left town entirely; but they all claimed the borough as their legal residence, and the Citizens could bring forward no proof that they had done anything inconsistent with that claim.

A. V. D. Honeyman, S. S. Swackhamer, John H. Van Winkle, Jr., Walter Linbarger and Dr. J. H. Cooley were present to press the charges. Nearly a score of the voters in question appeared before the board. They were taken to Somerville on the 1 o'clock train by Mayor Smalley and Corporation Counsel Reed and some of their lieutenants. Their fares were paid by the Mayor, and those whose wages suffered by reason of the trip were reimbursed by Mr. Reed.

Mr. Honeyman and Mr. Swackhamer conducted the case for the Citizens. Mr. Reed conducted the defense. The hearing lasted from 2 o'clock until 4:45.

The Citizens based their case practically on two witnesses, E. D. Hutchinson and William N. Pangborn, who served the notices. They both testified that people at the houses from which the voters registered either denied that they resided there or had no right to vote. Cross-examination by Mr. Reed disclosed the fact that neither Hutchinson nor Pangborn knew of their own knowledge where the men did live.

Mr. Reed put several of the voters on the stand. Most of them had testimony bearing on the other cases, as well as their own, to present. When his witnesses of that character were through Mr. Reed put W. F. McLaughlin, the Smalley lieutenant who followed up the Second district election board after its registration trip, on the stand, and his testimony served to keep two or three of the names on the list.

Several of the chanllenges were withdrawn. In one case the Cits had forgotten they served the voter, and they were forced to acknowledge to another indignant voter that they proceeded under a wrong impression in his case. On the whole it was not a happy afternoon for the Cits.

Several wordy fencing bouts between Mr. Reed and his two opponents enlivened the proceedings. Mr. Reed lost no opportunity to use satire and sarcasm.

Mr. Honeyman and Mr. Swackhamer made an attempt to get the testimony of Dr. Cooley, the assessor, and Charles J. McNabb, census enumerator, before the board, to prove, they said, that the names of the men challenged were not on the assessor's lists or the census sheet, but the board agreed with Mr. Reed that such testimony had no actual bearing on the question of a man's right to vote, and refused to give the time the witnesses would take up. Joseph Fitzga, the chairman, appeared to be annoyed by Mr. Swackhamer's insistence on the point. The effect of that incident was illustrated when it came to summing up. Mr. Reed said that he would submit his case without argument. Mr. Swackhamer said he wanted to say something on the case.

"Well, make it short," said Mr. Fitzga, curtly.

The board decided the cases after a very short deliberation. It held that the question of legal residence is governed solely by the voter's intention, and where no proof is shown of his intention to make any other place than the one hec laims his legal residence, that place must be regarded as his home. It was for exactly that reason that the name of Kane was ordered off.

Smalley and his friends were jubilant. They had a supper of celebration at Cawley's restaurant before going home on the 5:30 train and sang and cheered all the way between Somerville and North avenue. The group of Citizens were quiet and sober-faced. They made the journey home in a seat at the extreme rear of the smoker, apparently in earnest consultation.

Mr. Swackhamer was approached by a reporter as he left the train at North avenue.

"What do you think of the whole thing?" he was asked.

"We were handicapped by our inability to subpoena witnesses," he said. "If we could have compelled competent and necessary witnesses to appear before the board a different story would now be told. That's the whole explanation."

Mayor Smalley said:

"This simply shows what would happen to every one of the charges those people have made if they had nerve enough to meet me in public as I have been daring them to. Every time they come out into the open where we can reach them they are left without a leg to stand on."

The members of the board before which the charges were heard is made up of Joseph Fitzga, Charles Bateman, editor of the Unionist-Gazette; Jacob Shurts, chairman of the Democratic County Committee, and J. H. Mattison.

BOTH SIDES CONFIDENT "ACROSS THE BROOK"

A. V. D. Honeyman—I feel sure we will win unless there are too many illegal voters run in. I don't know how many illegal votes they will cast but I believe we will overcome them by a good round majority. If illegal votes are cast and the fusion ticket is defeated thereby, the result will be contested in the courts.

T. S. Armstrong—From what we hear as the results of the canvass I have no reason to recede from my original prediction that there will be a substantial majority for the Citizens' ticket.

George F. Brown—Things are coming out all right. I think Smalley will get over 100 majority. Some bets were made this morning that the Republicans would pass the hundred mark majority.

Newton B. Smalley—The big majority of people in the borough have got good sense and we'll prove it in this election. The Honeyman people have waged a campaign of falsehood but everyone of their stories have been shown to be without foundation. The "de-light-ed" will be for me and the "if" for them after the votes are counted. There has been no efforts made to register a single vote without knowing they were legal, and that question was settled at Somerville Saturday.

POLICE COURT CASES.

Two Drunks Fined and One Suspended.

Michael Gleason, forty-seven years old, of West Third street, a laborer, was arrested Saturday night by Officer McKeon for drunkenness and disorder. He was fined $5 or twenty days in the city court this morning.

Peter Moffett, thirty-eight years old, of Elizabeth, was arrested yesterday by Officer Messler, for drunkenness. Moffett said convivial companions led to his jag, and Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

Michael Fitzsimmons, of South Second street, a laborer was arrested by Detective McCarthy yesterday, for drunkenness. He said he got his drunk in South Plainfield. He was fined $3 or ten days.

George Mitchell, colored, twenty-seven years old, of South Second street, a porter, was arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct, by Officer Martin. Mitchell is charged with guying the cop on the street. His counsel, H. C. Runyon, had the case adjourned to next Saturday.

CITS LAST MASS MEETING

Promised Revelations Failed to Materialize and Nothing New Brought Out.

SWACKHAMER SPEAKS

Reviews Some Familiar Stories—Former Mayors Place and Needham and Candidate Conroy Also Talk.

The last gun in the borough campaign was fired Saturday night, when the Cits conducted a big mass meeting in Saengerbund Hall. Contrary to expectation and whispered rumors for several days previous, there was "nothing doing" as far as any startling revelations were concerned. A large part of the audience was made up of Smalley men but it was easy to see that none of the verbal volleys stirred them any more than a charge of rock salt against a brick house. There was nothing new brought out—simply a repetition of what has been hackneyed over since the tickets were made up.

Former Mayor Place presided as chairman and first introduced former Mayor Needham, then Candidate W. J. Conroy, Dr. J. H. Cooley and S. S. Swackhamer in turn. Swackhamer first produced a long strip of paper measuring thirty feet or more which he said was Charles Arthur Reed's speech at the first Republican mass meeting. One end he handed over the edge of the stage to John Goodwin, who walked down the aisle holding it aloft. When he went as far as he could go, Mr. Swackhamer said:

"Be careful of that speech—it's rotten."

After ridiculing this same address of Mr. Reed's, principally because of its length, the speaker took up the dismissal of William Pangborn, declaring that no matter if he was intoxicated on the street, he was a veteran of the Civil War and was entitled to consideration. He also reviewed the John Goodwin case and the athletic exhibition in Saengerbund Hall but both were on the "Twice Told Tales" order.

Getting down to the registration cases, Mr. Swackhamer said the executive committee had simply tried to do its duty, the members deeming it strange that 150 names should be added after the canvass had been completed. He produced affidavits made by Lillie Kiss, of Harmony street, and Mary Ann Beggs, of Manning avenue, to bear him out that men on the registry lists registered from these houses had no right to vote. The remainder of Mr. Swackhamer's address was devoted to comparing North Plainfield with Rome and other ancient cities, which made the Cits up front nod their heads and look as though they had just returned from the scenes he was picturing in Swackhameresque language.

Candidate Conroy's address smacked of those he had been giving Thursday nights at the Cits' social sessions. He did say he was in favor of a sewer system and that when elected he would see that the matter was properly taken up. With a sewer system, he continued, North Plainfield would have to move the mountains back to make room for new citizens. He declared Smalley is a boss and touched up Charles A. Reed by asserting that he earns his $500 a year salary in the same space of time as it takes a laboring man to make $9, and "no wonder he wants to hold on to it." He ended with an appeal for the Democratic vote and a caution to the Cits to be calm and cool on Election Day.

Dr. Cooley, in taking the platform, first acknowledged the mentioning of Harry Williams' name in connection with the registration cases was a mistake, as he was not placed on the list. He spoke on several other matters of minor importance.

Mr. Place said he pleaded guilty to being a "hound" but that he was one of the kind that was going to "hound" Smalley out of office. Former Mayor Needham in his remarks said the tendency of the day in New Jersey was to overcome boss rule and the end of North Plainfield's ring would begin Tuesday.

Hay Barrack Destroyed.

In some mysterious manner a barrack of hay containing eighteen tons, and valued at $200, was destroyed by fire Saturday morning on the farm of P. J. Haines, a milkman, living at Oak Tree. It was about 9 o'clock when the fire was destroyed, and Mr. Haines, with the assistance of his neighbors, who all joined in, the barn on the premises was saved. Mr. Haines has not the slightest idea how the fire started.

NEW HOUSE DEDICATED

Local Corps of Salvation Army Formally Takes Possession of Handsome Structure.

APPROPRIATE SERVICE

Charles W. McCutchen Acts As Chairman and Many Prominent Officers Assist in Programme.

A new era in the history of the local corps of the Salvation Army began yesterday, when its new building on East Second street, erected in memory of Mrs. Booth-Tucker, who, for several years, was one of the leaders of the army in this country, was dedicated. Many prominent officers, including Col. Peart, second in command of the Salvation Army; Col. Gifford, Major and Mrs. Sheppard, with the staff band from National Headquarters, New York, were present and took part in the exercises.

At several churches, in the morning, representatives of the army were present and spoke, and the staff band conducted a service at 10 o'clock on North avenue, opposite the Hotel Kensington, where a considerable sum was received for the work here.

The dedicatory exercises were held at the new building in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, and after opening the programme, Col. Gifford introduced Charles W. McCutchen, of the borough, as chairman. During the opening there were selections by the band, singing of hymns in the army's characteristic style. Col. Gifford also made a few introductory remarks. He said that the army had done some good here and he thought the future was bright for greater results. He referred to the fact that the corps here had been handicapped for lack of suitable quarters, and he praised Ensign and Mrs. Magee's earnest labors in securing such a fine building, which at first he thought was hardly possible. He mentioned the generosity of Charles W. McCutchen, who started the building fund with $200, and the kind help of others.

Mr. McCutchen in taking the chair, congratulated the army and the local corps upon the possession of such a fine building so suitable for the work of saving souls. He said that the people of Plainfield had given liberally and cheerfully to the building fund, not only in memory of one who was so beloved by the army, but for the reason that it was appreciated that the army needed a comfortable home.

Mr. McCutchen then dwelt briefly on the character of the work of the army, the problem of caring for and helping the poor, and said that it is up to the people of Plainfield to help lift up these unfortunate ones, and it is here that the army comes in and helps. Although figuratively speaking the Salvation Army was organized thirty-seven years ago, Mr. McCutchen said that in reality it was organized when Christ healed the sick and fed the 5,000 and sent out his disciples. He wished the army Godspeed.

The staff band then played "Salvation We Will Proclaim," after which Mrs. Sheppard spoke a few words of congratulation. Col. Gifford sang "Joy Bells," with the assistance of the band, and the audience joined in the chorus.

Col. Gifford made a statement regarding the finances in connection with the erection of the new building. Together with cost of land, it represents an expenditure of $9,700. The corps is now in debt about $6,450, exclusive of the amount received yesterday from the various churches, which was over $700. It was the desire to raise $1,450. Arrangements were made to put a $5,000 mortgage on the property, and the interest on this is far less than rent would be anywhere in the city.

The officer explained that aside from the main room, which is equipped with a partition and a movable platform, which makes it possible to arrange the room to suit the audience, it has six rooms on the second floor, where the officers have their quarters. These are equipped with all modern conveniences and are very comfortable. The building is constructed of brick and two stories in height. The corner-stone, laid several months ago, bears the name of "Mrs. Booth-Tucker," and across the top are the words "Salvation Army," in large letters and the army insignia.

With a $50 contribution received from a New York man, $400 was received from the churches yesterday and during the collection at the dedication, a substantial sum was given, including $100 from Mr. McCutchen and $25 from Col. Peart on behalf of National Headquarters. The staff band also contributed its services free.

The closing hour of the dedicatory exercises was devoted to an interesting sermon by Col. Peart, in which he referred to the necessity of building on a solid foundation and not on sand, and it was his belief that the new building had been placed on the strong foundation. He then made a strong appeal to the unsaved, pleading with them to be reconciled to Jesus Christ.

Last night a service called a "Battle for Souls," was held at headquarters, in which Col. Peart led and the staff band took part. Tonight there will be a service called a "Council of War," in which many prominent officers from New Jersey and New York will take part. The public is invited to this service.

The task of securing sufficient funds to start the erection of the building was undertaken by Ensign and Mrs. Magee, of the local corps, and they have worked unceasingly. They were warmly complimented yesterday by all the officers present.

SOME INFORMATION FOR THE VOTERS

The polls will be opened tomorrow at 6 o'clock in the morning and will close at 7 o'clock at night, with the customary recess of one hour between 1 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

In addition to casting a ballot or recording a vote for the various candidates for public office the Plainfield voter will register whether he desires:

"The adoption by this city of the provisions of an act entitled 'An Act to enable cities to supply inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water.'"

This is in accordance with an ordinance introduced in the Common Council by J. Stephen Higham and adopted by that body. It will give the voter an opportunity to decide whether he wishes the Common Council to investigate the matter with a view to securing a municipal water plant. The word "for" and the word "against" will be printed above and immediately following the proposition on the ballots. Scratch the "against" if you wish the investigation to be made, and the "for" if you oppose the proposition.

If you vote in a district where the machine is in use, that is, in the First district of any of the four wards, merely turn the little lever in the centre of the mechanical rectangle directly under the square containing the mention of the scheme to "Yes." If you oppose the plan, turn the lever to "No."

The various polling places in the four wards of the city are located as follows:

First district, First ward, 152 North avenue.

Second district, First ward, 545 East Third street.

First district, Second ward, 319 Watchung avenue.

Second district, Second ward, 699 South avenue.

First district, Third ward, "Casino," West Seventh street.

Second district, Third ward, Clifton's barn, corner West Seventh street and Spooned avenue.

First district, Fourth ward, 204 West Second street.

Second district, Fourth ward, 672 South Second street.

Third district, Fourth ward, 921 West Third street.

In the borough there are two polling places. The one in the First district is Trewin's barber shop, at 83 Somerset street. In the Second district it is Saengerbund Hall.

Struck by Auto.

Frank Hunter, of Scotch Plains, was struck by a large touring car on the Springfield road about 5 o'clock last night and hurled into a ditch. He was found shortly afterward by E. S. F. Randolph. Dr. Westcott was summoned. Hunter was cut and bruised and it is thought that several bones are broken. The auto which hit Mr. Hunter was occupied by a man and woman, but they increased the speed of the machine after striking the man and it was impossible to get even the number of the car.

Lack of space prevents the publication of Saturday's golf scores. They will be found in tomorrow's issue.

PASTOR ADVISES VOTERS

Speaks in Favor of Municipal Ownership Investigation by Council.

COMMENDS CANDIDATES

Says Ackerman and Nugent Deserve Credit for Conducting a Clean Campaign—"On This Side of the Brook."

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck advised his congregation to vote "for" to the water question at tomorrow's election at Trinity church last night.

Investigation of the municipal ownership question was a good thing, he said, and he hoped all his people would vote in favor of it. He explained that the question submitted to the voters now was not for the purchase or rejection of the plant, but merely to give the Council authority to decide whether or not the ownership of the plant was advisable.

Other political reference was made by Dr. Schenck. He commented on the high character of the campaign waged by Ackerman and Nugent. It was a pleasant thing, he said, and as such matters should be, that Ackerman and Nugent fought for office without indulging in odious personalities and wild charges. In referring to the cleanliness of the sensational campaign, Dr. Schenck used the phrase "on this side of the brook," and his hearers received the impression that he had the other sort of campaign in North Plainfield in mind.

Life insurance companies came in for their share of attention. Dr. Schenck said he had read that President McCurdy sneered at the ministers who spoke of the insurance corruption, because ministers knew nothing of the life insurance business. Dr. Schenck thought it would be a good thing for the insurance companies if they hired some indigent young ministers, without other charges to keep them busy, to sit in their offices and directors' rooms to read the ten commandments aloud.

BIG CROWD AT FAIR.

Crowded Saturday Night and Receipts Mount Up; Affair Continues.

A big crowd attended the Red Men's fair in Vardon's dancing academy Saturday night. The hall was so jammed that dancing was almost impossible. The receipts were three times as large as on any other night.

The feature of the evening was the singing of Harold Willard, the eleven-year-old son of A. E. Willard. He sang "I'm On the Water Wagon."

The fair has been such a great success that it will continue tonight. The dance will be a masquerade affair. Solly Brown, the robust tenor, will sing Jerome Remmick's latest hits.

Mrs. Emma Brown.

Mrs. Emma Brown, for many years a resident of Mercer avenue, the borough, died suddenly at her home in New York on Saturday. She had been ill for some time, but her condition was not considered critical. She was a member and attendant while here of the Church of the Holy Cross. Mrs. Brown was the mother of Carl Brown, well known here. The funeral services were held from the late home at 10 o'clock this morning and the interment was in New York.

Salvation Army Members Lead.

Officers from the Salvation Army conducted the services at Hope chapel and the Monroe Avenue church last night. At the former, Major Sheppard spoke, and at Monroe, Adjutant and Mrs. Winchell, of Newark, had charge. The services in both instances were heard by large gatherings and special offerings for the new army hall on East Second street were taken.

A Silver Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Armstrong, of Duer street, the borough, have issued invitations for the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, which will be celebrated at their home on Friday night, November 17, when a reception will be held from 8 to 10 o'clock.

POLITICAL NOTICE.

Union College.
Schenectady, N. Y.,
Nov. 2. 1905.

My Dear Mr. Ackerman:--

I have learned with peculiar pleasure of your candidacy for the office of Senator. not only because your nomination expressed the confidence and good-will of your fellow-citizens, but especially because you represent the type of men needed in American political life.

I have known you since your boyhood and have seen you develop the qualities which will make you a fearless, conscientious and fair-minded representative of the people. You have both the ability and the character demanded by the responsible office for which you are running.

What I like best about your candidacy as I read of it in the paper is your independence, leaving you free, if elected, as you surely must be, to serve your district and the State according to your own intelligent judgment and deep-seated convictions. It is just this self-respecting attitude that is now commanding to an unusual degree the attention and support of the people. It is a clear note of progress, an evidence of improved political conditions, a promise of the more truly representative government needed in every State.

If I were now a Plainfielder, as I once was, I would take great satisfaction in voting for you and persuading others to do so.

Yours sincerely.
(Signed)
Andrew V.V.Raymond.

ALIS III. STILL WINS.

Defeats Dunellen Juniors Handily 10 to 0 in Dunellen.

The Alis III. football team defeated the Dunellen Seconds on Saturday afternoon at Dunellen. The score was 10 to 0. The victors' first touchdown was made when Taylor crossed the line, after steady line plunges had brought Alis near Dunellen's goal. On a trick play later in the same half Harvey Douglass made a long end run for a touchdown. Neither of the goals were kicked. In the second half Alis rushed the ball straight for Dunellen's goal, but the half was short, and time was called when the ball was but one yard from the line.

Charles F. Drake, of West Third street, is sojourning at Washington, N. J., for the benefit of his health.

Mrs. W. W. Warnock, of Craig place, has returned from a visit with relatives at Englewood.

Col. Peart at Trinity.

Col. Peart, of the Salvation Army, occupied the pulpit at Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning, and delivered an excellent gospel sermon on "Following Christ," taking his txet from the latter part of the ninth chapter of Luke. His discourse was an earnest effort and commanded th closest attention of the large congregation present. Col. Gifford, who accompanied Col. Peart, and occupied a seat on the platform, offered prayer at the conclusion of the address. As the congregation passed out a substantial offering was deposited in baskets in charge of members of the army.

Church Officers Installed.

At the morning service in Trinity Reformed church yesterday Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, installed F. E. Smith, H. J. Martin, Sr., and A. L. Force as elders and Edgar F. Sheppard, M. F. Gano and Charles M. Dolliver as deacons. The deacons met afterward and elected W. F. Oliver as chairman of the board and A. K. Willett treasurer.

Fred Sebring, of Division street, has returned from a visit with Newark friends.

L. B. Woolston, of the firm of Woolston & Buckle, who has been very ill at his home in Fairview avenue, is much improved.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

Visitors Invited to See the Ginna Chrysanthemum Display.

Without doubt the finest collection and exhibition of chrysanthemums to be seen in this State, if not in the country, is now to be seen at the conservatory of Mrs. S. A. Ginna, of Watchung avenue. In accordance with the custom of previous years, the public is given a cordial invitation to see the collection.

The collection this year, comprising 300 plants and between seventy-five and 100 varieties, include many of the finest ever grown. And in this large collection there are scarcely any two varieties alike. The colors include various shades of yellow, lavendar, red, brown and pure white.

A variety attracting considerable attention is to be found on two trees. The flowers are of pure white and are known as the Japanese variety. The trees are nearly six feet high and the flowers have a very peculiar formation.

Another tree has a very pretty pink flower. There are two other flowers, one which the late Mr. Ginna named "Baby Perkins," after his grandson, and another he named "Mrs. Perkins," that are the admiration of all who see them. The flowers have now been in blossom over a week and they will possibly last another week. Those wishing to see them should arrange to visit the conservatory the early part of this week, when the man in charge will gladly explain the different varieties, their origin and other interesting facts.

Mrs. H. S. Potter, of El Paso, Tex., who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, of East Second street, for several weeks, will return to Texas tomorrow.

IN THE JUNGLE

they do these things—that's one extreme. But here in Newark we have to do something else.

And it's a mighty good thing for every man that at Watson's can be selected clothes that go far to the other extreme—right to the proper limit of comfort, fit and style.

Watson-made suits have a quality which makes them look different from ready-to-wear clothing and puts them in a class by themselves or in a class with custom made. The fit and appearance you'll appreciate the moment you try on. The material has been so well chosen that you wonder. "Will it ever wear out?" All popular weaves and favorite colors and patterns are well represented.

Suits $10 to $25.

Where is the man who doesn't want an extra pair of trousers, especially when he can get such trousers as Watson makes at Watson's easy-to-pay prices?

$3 to $7.

The Daily Press will be issued at 1 o'clock tomorrow, instead of 3.

Vote in favor of the municipal ownership investigation if you have the interests of the city at heart.

As the situation is today, Mayor Newton B. Smalley and the entire Republican ticket will win in North Plainfield tomorrow. In Plainfield the result has not been in doubt, the Republicans being sure of success from the start. On this side of the brook, however, the campaign has not been a particularly active one and for that reason the majority party is not apt to poll a large vote. This condition seems general throughout Union county, excepting so far as the State senatorship is concerned. For that the rival candidates have waged a vigorous campaign, but there seems to be little doubt of Mr. Ackerman obtaining a good majority. Over in Somerset county, the Republican ticket is booked to win, the only opposition to it in the ranks coming from the alleged Thompson faction. The Democrats, however, appear to be sanguine.

Two Musical Events.

The First M. E. church has arranged for two musical events this month. The first will be a complimentary song recital which he will give on Thursday night, November 16, assisted by Miss Dolores Reedy, contralto, of New York. The second event will be on Thursday night, November 23, at which time the combined chorus of the First M. E. church, of this city, and Presbyterian church of Westfield, will present Mendelssohn's setting of the forty-second Psalm, "As Pants the Heart," and Mendelssohn's "Hear My Prayer." The programme will also include a solo, "In Thee, O Lord, Do I Put My Trust," by Spicked. This will be given by Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell. There will also be some instrumental music, the details for which have not yet been completed. This event will be in charge of the Brotherhood of the church.

In addition to the play for the T. R. Van Boskerck consolation cup at the Plainfield Country Club tomorrow there will be several special events and there will be social features at the clubhouse.

A MISUNDERSTANDING SAY CITS' LAWYERS

Editor The Daily Press:

As there seems to be a misunderstanding on the part of many persons as to the object and result of the application made on Saturday last to the Board of County Registration at Somerville, we herewith make the following statement:

The law gave us so short a time (practically but a few hours after we had knowledge of the extent of the alleged illegal registration by some of the adherents of Mayor Smalley on Tuesday last) that we could only serve notices on about twenty-seven out of fifty-three suspected persons. These cases we took to Somerville to request the County Board to eliminate them from the registry on the ground that they were not voters. One of the cases was admitted and he was stricken from the list. Of the other cases only five of the persons appeared and testified that in their judgment they were legal voters. In two of these cases we believe it quite probable that their contention was correct. As to the other cases, we believe the persons summoned, whether appearing or not appearing, are not legal voters, but as the law does not permit the County Board of attorneys to issue legal subpoenas and secure witnesses (the machinery of the law being in this respect impotent to carry out what the law intends), we had to rest our cases with the board upon hearsay evidence. This hearsay evidence consisted of inquiries made at the different houses from which persons were registered and the statement made by the occupants of the houses that no such persons as were registered from there were residents there; in fact, many of the persons were totally unknown there. The board took the view that the evidence was not sufficiently legal to warrant them in interfering except in the one case, but that our only remedy under the law as it stands is to challenge these persons at the polls tomorrow, which we are advised will be done.

A Big Production.

Though the fact is not generally known by Plainfielders, the production of "The Redemption of David Corson" at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, will be one of the best acted and best staged plays that has yet visited the city. It was given a full dress rehearsal at the local playhouse, last night, under the personal direction of J. C. Huffman, Klaw & Erlanger's chief director, Mrs. Lottie Blair Parker, author of the dramatized version, and a large gathering of New York managers, theatrical men and critics. It moved perfectly and to the entire satisfaction of the producer, Robert Parker. It bids to prove even more popular than Mrs. Parker's greatest success, "Way Down East."

FAIR MINDED MEN OF NORTH PLAINFIELD.

This large space in The Daily Press was engaged for the purpose of offering reply to any new and untruthful charges which might have been made by speakers at the mass meeting held by the Citizens' party in Saengerbund hall Saturday night. While a determined, studied effort was made to deceive the voters as to the real condition of municipal affairs in the borough, NOTHING NEW WAS PRESENTED FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF BOROUGH VOTERS by the speakers. The addresses heard at the Citizens' meeting were made up of a reiteration of assertions already persistently circulated, all of which have been successfully controverted and answered to the satisfaction of intelligent voters.

Therefore nothing remains for the friends and supporters of Mayor Smalley to do, to ensure his re-election and a continuance of good government in the borough, but to and the rest of the Republican candidates.

A priceless heritage of American citizenship is the right to vote. Do not be a stay-at-home. YOUR VOTE may decide the result. Every citizen in North Plainfield borough, desiring the best welfare of the town in which he makes his home, should go to the polling district in which he resides at the earliest possible moment after 6 a. m., after which hour up to 7 p. m. he may be able to perform the paramount duty of an American birthright, and

AMUSEMENTS.

The offering at the New Plainfield theatre tonight will be a dramatization of the Rev. Charles Frederic Goss' famous novel, "The Redemption of David Corson," by Lottis Blair Parker, author of "Way Down East" and "Under Southern Skies." The newspapers of other cities where it has been presented predict a longer life than either of her present great successes. In commenting one paper says, "It is a play that is worth while. Though it tells of weakness and wickedness, of love and license, of revenge and remorse in an intensely interesting way, yet it is above all else a clean and pure story. It is safe to say no one can witness it and honestly ask—'What's the use.'"

Not the least interesting part of the Fays' business is their correspondence. Every day their receive queries by mail from persons who have brought them books or letters thanking them for the information given the writer at their public entertainments. But not infrequently these queries are unique. One of the quaintest of these reached the Fays yesterday. It was from a newspaper man of Sioux City, Ia., and pertained to one of the last entertainments given by the Fays in that city. The writer had asked about the conditions of his brother who was lying at the point of death at Bucyrus, Ohio, and was told by the Fays that the sick man was very much improved. The questioner had received a telegram that day saying his brother was not expected to live. Two days later, after the Fays had left town, he received a dispatch stating that on the night of the day when the previous dispatch was sent, his brother had a decided change for the better and the indications were that he would recover. The Fays will be at the Casino for one week commencing tonight.

Miss Sophia Brandt, who is to be heard in the comic opera, "A Madcap Princess," at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night, is not only a beautiful young woman but a singer whose voice is powerful and sweet. She has been heard before as the widow in "The Prince of Pilsen" and in "The Princess Chic," and they say that those who heard her in "A Madcap Princess" will sit up and take notice that the new American prima donna has arrived. Some of the titles of the songs she will sing are, "Three Little Words," "Happy Island," 'I'm Called the Madcap Princess," "Two Love Letters," "Should I Greet Him?" and a rousing march song sung as a cavalier with plumed hat and sword.

The clever Russell Bros. have a new play this season which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre, Wednesday night. It is called "The Great Jewel Mystery" and is bigger and better than the drama they offered last season. This is saying much as "The Female Detectives" was certainly a very excellent and successful production. The new play is written by Mark E. Swan and tells a vigorous story of a robbery in high life and which may have been suggested by the late Philadelphia case.

LADIES DESIRING KNIFE-PLEATING OR PINKING done, will please leave their orders at No. 22 Duer St., and it will receive prompt attention. MRS. FORCE.

The great interest in the piece is centered in the work of the stars who as detectives assume various disguises among others of course the Irish servant girls which will forever remain their greatest impersonations. The period of the play is the present and locality, New York city, one of the scenes suggests a famous Metropolitan Hotel and many other landmarks are easily recognized. Mrs. John Russell is in the cast and has a stunning role, twenty other good players are named in the roster.

There are still theatregoers in this country who have never seen Joseph Jefferson as Rip Van Winkle, and these are all very young people. For forty years or more the public has associated Rip with the name of the most famous comedian—real comedian, not a personally whimsicality—until the men and the role appear to be welded into one. Joseph Jefferson's son, Thomas Jefferson, will appear in "Rip Van Winkle" at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday, matinee and night.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

For reliable insurance consult E. F. Dorman, of Park avenue. He is always willing to explain details.

John Winzenreid, of Lee place, is a reliable trucker and all work left in his charge will receive prompt attention.

Boice, Runyon & Co., the Park avenue coal dealers, sell the best coal at the lowest market prices; also masons' materials.

For first-class sanitary plumbing work, A. H. Enander, of Watchung avenue, cannot be excelled. His work stands the test.

Lovers of fresh pot cheese, the best butter, milk, cream and eggs can get these dairy products at the Brokaw creamery on East Front street.

If you have never purchased coal from Rugg & Cline, of West Third street, you have never burned the best coal mined. This firm handles only the best grade.

You are missing great opportunities these days if you do not visit Hill & Shupp's store. The firm in retiring from business offers the greatest of bargains in every department. The people of Plainfield and vicinity will probably never have such a chance to get such goods at low prices. The stock in every department is being sacrificed to clear the store and it is like getting just what you want at your own prices. Consult the firm's advertisement in The Daily Press.

NOTICE!

"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., cars Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C. W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

Hoboken Team's Work.

The Hoboken Club met the St. Michael's team on the grounds of the latter last Sunday, and after playing eleven innings during which neither team was able to score, the game was called on account of darkness. The regular Hoboken lineup, with Hesterfer and O'Neill as a battery, was opposed by McKenna and Brogan. Hoboken secured four hits and St. Michaels two hits. Each pitcher struck out five men and the game was replete with brilliant plays. Tomorrow the Hoboken team will play the Elizabethport Stars at Elizabethport.

CITIZENS, ATTENTION!!

The Republican party in Union county has never presented to the citizens, candidates better entitled to confidence, more worthy of support than are the gentlemen whose names appear upon the Republican ticket this year.

Mr. Ernest R. Ackerman, the candidate for Senator, is the first Plainfield Republican who has ever been nominated for that position. This fact should enlist the hearty support of all citizens. His standing in this community, his long and loyal service to Plainfield and its best interests, make him a candidate whom every voter can consistently and enthusiastically indorse. He has always lived in Plainfield; he attended the public schools and graduated from the Plainfield High School. Immediately after graduating he entered the employment of the Lawrence Cement Company at $3.00 per week, and by his individual efforts has risen from the position of office boy to the presidency of the Company.

Messrs. Perkins, of Westfield, Tillman, of Rahway, and Tucker, of Elizabeth, are candidates for the office of Assemblyman.

Mr. Perkins is a well-known lawyer of Jersey City. His record in the Legislature has already stamped him a man of rare ability, and with the experience gained he is a legislator of whom Union County may well be proud.

Mr. Tillman is a Rahway business man. He has many and important interests throughout the county and has already made an enviable record as a conscientious and conservative legislator. He well merits another term in the Assembly, and the voters of Union County will honor themselves in honoring him.

Mr. Tucker is a candidate for the first time. His sterling worth, his ability and his steadfast integrity have all contributed to make him a logical and ideal standard bearer this year. He is a New York business man and is possessed of just such training as will enable him to worthily represent his constituents.

Dr. William H. Lawrence, of Summit, will deserve the support of all citizens for the office of Sheriff. All classes of the community in which he has lived for years are enthusiastic in their endorsement of him as an honorable and high-minded citizen, and a man such as he will fill the position of Sheriff with credit to himself and his county.

Jacob Hagin is the candidate for Coroner. He is a young man whose honorable position in the business community of Elizabeth has been won by his own unaided efforts. He also is entitled to your confidence and support.

THE TWO GREAT PROBLEMS OF THE DAY WHICH DEMAND CONSIDERATION AND SETTLEMENT ARE: LIMITED FRANCHISES FOR PUBLIC UTILITIES, AND EQUAL TAXATION.

So much depends upon wise and careful treatment of these vital issues, so involved are they and so important the final outcome to every citizen of New Jersey, that the greatest care should be exercised by the voters in choosing for Representatives in the Legislature only such men as have the ability to cope with these matters and whose INTEGRITY AND CHARACTERS WILL INSURE A "SQUARE DEAL" FOR THEIR CONSTITUENTS.

The Republican candidate for State Senator, Mr. Ernest R. Ackerman, is exactly the type of man who should represent a constituency in that body. His character and his ability are guarantees that in him Union County's interests will have a champion of the first order. His record is the best proof:

FOR FOURTEEN YEARS MR. ACKERMAN HAS FIRMLY BELIEVED IN AND SUPPORTED THE DOCTRINE OF LIMITED FRANCHISES.

In 1891, when a member of the Plainfield Common Council, he fought against granting a trolley franchise in perpetuity and placed himself on record as a defender of the people's rights.

MR. ACKERMAN BELIEVES THAT EVERY PROPERTY INTEREST, CORPORATE AND INDIVIDUAL, SHOULD BEAR ITS JUST AND EQUAL SHARE OF TAXATION.

If elected, he will go to Trenton absolutely unpledged to any individual or corporation and entirely free to act as his best judgment dictates in each and every matter which may come before the Legislature.

HIS ONE PLEDGE IS TO THE WHOLE PEOPLE OF UNION COUNTY, A PLEDGE TO SERVE THEM FAITHFULLY AND WELL.

POLICEMEN'S PAY IS HELD UP BY COMMON COUNCIL

Recognizing Only Old Board, City Fathers Refuse to Honor New Commission's Bill.

TWO MEMBERS OBJECT

R. L. Tolles and F. DeW. Randolph Urged That the Money Be Paid —Decision Is Expected on Tuesday.

The newly-appointed police commission which has not been recognized by the Common Council on the ground that the Act under which Mayor Buckle appointed it is being tested in the courts, and Corporation Counsel Marsh not wishing to give an opinion regarding the power of the commission to act, until such decision in the case is rendered, the situation between the police commission and the police committee of the Council was further complicated last night, when the Common Council refused to pay over to the commission $1,466. A request for the amount was made to pay the employes of the police department.

It was stated on the floor by the independent members that the Common Council was not to blame for the hold up of the police bills; that the trouble was alleged to be due to the appointment of the police commission which at once raised the question of authority between the commission and the police committee.

Mr. Bullock introduced the matter by protesting against the payment on bill No. 11033, for $1,466, which was presented by the police commission, and intended for the payment of police bills. He declared that the commission is not recognized by the Common Council. Mr. Bullock said that he had no desire to withhold the salaries of the police, realizing that the members of the force are entitled to their pay, but he did not see what right the Common Council had to turn the money over to the police commission.

Mr. Murphy added his protest, stating that the validity of the Act under which the commission was appointed, had not been decided yet and it would be unwise to pay the money to the commission. He said he regretted the circumstances, especially the holding up of money from the police, but he also recognized the principle involved. He referred to the fact that the corporation counsel declined to give an opinion in the matter until a decision is handed down by the higher courts.

Mr. Hibbard said that he signed the voucher for the payment of the bill in question, but as a decision is expected on Monday as to the validity of the Act, he favored withholding payment of the bill until that time.

Mr. Tolles argued in favor of paying the bill, stating that the police want their money, and it might be necessary to wait a year for a decision from the courts. To this Mr. Bullock replied that if the bill had been presented in the usual way, it would have been paid, but he could not see why the Common Council should hand the money over to the police commissioners.

On a motion to refer the bill to the auditing committee, Councilmen Gloak, Higham, Hibbard, Randolph, Tolles, Tyler, Wilson and Daniel voted in the affirmative, and Councilmen Bullock and Murphy in the negative. When the bills were presented by Councilman Frank DeWitt Randolph, chairman of the auditing committee, Mr. Tyler moved to except bill No. 11033, explaining that the corporation counsel had said that a decision would be handed down on Monday on the police bill, and that while he was loath to work any hardship on the police, he thought it would be better to wait until Tuesday, November 14, when it will be known whether the police commissioners are a constitutional body or not.

Councilman Frank DeWitt Randolph said that the bill to which exception was taken was itemized and he could not see why the members should refuse to pay it. If the decision to be given on Monday declares the police bill unconstitutional why the local police authority would revert to the police committee.

By questionings Mr. Bullock showed that it was the way in which the bill was made out that raised the point as to the wisdom of paying it. The bill was made out to the police commissioners, and they are not recognized by the Common Council.

REDMEN'S FAIR CLOSES AFTER A BIG SUCCESS

PROFITS ON WEEK OF SALE AND FUN-MAKING TOTAL OVER.

After a week of great success the fair of Wetumpkah Tribe, Improved O. R. M., came to a close last night in Vardon's dancing academy. There was a large crowd and the evening was full of lively incidents. The night was marked "masquerade" on the fair schedule, and a number of the dancers appeared in costume.

At 12 o'clock the goods remaining in the booths were sold at auction. When the profits were cast up the tribal treasury was found to be between $600 and $700 better off than when the affair started. The expenses of the fair were cleared by Wednesday night, and all the receipts after that piled up the profit.

The entertainment features of the fair were the singing and dancing of eight-year-old Emily Henry, and the play of the shadow-dance lights on the vari-colored costumes.

The general committee, to whom credit for the great success of the fair must be given, were A. E. Willard, chairman; Richard Osland, Richard Scott, M. Leichtentritt and Jacob Fass. Their assistant at the various booths were: Candy, Miss Gertrude Geier and T. P. Kolb; Indian goods, Miss Edna Carson; bric-a-brac, Mrs. William Sharp, Mrs. A. E. Willard, Miss Blanche Walsh; Henry Windham; notions, Miss Alma Henry Wnidham's wines and spirits, Boyle, Mrs. M. E. Hubbard; food products, Miss Ella Sebring, Mrs. William Claassen; fortune telling machine, J. H. Ackerman; hit-the-baby game, William Neal, Eugene Walsh; crack-a-jack confection, Miss Caroline Martin; music, Miss Sadie E. Hughes.

Mrs. A. E. Willard, Clarence Berry and W. W. Barnetson largely assisted the committee.

Some of the graduates of the Plainfield High School, including Miss Lena Bass, '84; William M. Stillman, '73; Andrew McC. Parker, '74; Townsend Rushmore, '77, and W. D. Murray, '75, met last evening to plan for a reception to be held in the new High School building.

If the Board of Education approves, the plan is to have an afternoon reception on Monday, January 1, and on the evening of the same day to invite some of the now well known graduates of the school to speak briefly on subjects of interest to the Alumni. It is hoped that men like Robert Kerr, George E. Vincent, Edwin H. Lewis, Frank J. Miller, E. R. Ackerman and others will take part.

A meeting of representatives of the different classes has been called for Monday to perfect arrangements.

WHY LEAL'S CANCELLED GAME.

Newark Academy Team a Rough Eleven.

The reasons given as to why the Leal's School management cancelled it game on Saturday with Newark Academy, are that of questionable playing on the part of Newark with Montclair Academy and Pingry. It is said that Pope, captain of the Newark team, actually slugged players on both Montclair and Pingry elevens and that even though the interscholastic championship was won by this team, it is possible that the honors may be contested.

Miss Sorensen Surprised.

A surprise party was tendered to Miss Sorensen, of Webster place, yesterday afternoon in honor of her birthday. The party was arranged by some of the members of the Social Sewing Circle, of which Miss Sorensen is a member. The time was spent in singing and dancing. Several musical selections were rendered by Miss May Ericksen and Miss Sorensen. Miss Sorensen was well remembered with gifts.

RECALL COMMONWEALTH

Glimpse of Cromwell's Times Reproduced by Hope Chapel People.

MANY IN THE CAST

One Hundred in the Chorus—Historic Scenes—Good Singing and Quaint Costumes.

Replete with imposing processionals, tuneful choruses and vivid stereopticon views, the production of "Oliver Cromwell" at Hope chapel, last night, won instant favor and delighted a large audience. In many ways it is far superior to the "John Knox" entertainment of last year, great care having been exercised in arranging the marches and groupings, in which many men and women take part. The costumes are handsome and in the pretty light effects, revealed themselves in a way to make memorable pictures.

The principal role of "Oliver Cromwell" is adequately taken care of by David Bowden, who portrayed "John Knox." Though he has twenty-two speaking parts, several of them with lengthy addresses, he proved himself fully equal to the task and won repeated applause. Mr. Bowden's dramatic ability is well known and his work last night added to his laurels.

S. B. Howe, Jr., as "Charles I, King of England," and Dr. Guy H. Hillman as "John Hampden" were also pleasing and did much in making the scene in the House of Common impressionable. The thread of the story for civil and religious liberty in England was carried by Mrs. D. E. Mayers with the aid of the stereopticon. The programme and characters in detail were as follows:

Overture, orchestra; pianist, Miss Caroline Dewey. Part I—Allegorical Processional—Puritan and Cavalier vie with each other in praise to God. In this procession the comtumes distinctly contrast the Puritan party from the Cavalier. "How Beautiful is Zion," "Praise Ye the Father" (Gounod), chorus of 100 voices; leaders, Dr. P. B. Cregar and Emma Foster; Puritans, Dr. P. B. Cregar, Dr. W. K. Browning, Lucius Koons, H. B. Weatherwax, W. B. Gilbert, J. P. Murray, Dr. G. H. Hillman, E. E. Parvin, Herbert Fluck, William Baker, F. Legge, David Bowden, H. F. Miller, Emma Foster, Flora Griffin, Mamie McInnes, Jean Douglas, Laura Hangliter, Maude Doolittle, Mrs. Beryl Legge, Mrs. William Baker, Elsie Slorah, Marie Newman, Helen Barbour, Elizabeth Van Winkle, Isabelle Slorah.

Kimball; Warren Porter, Mr. Wallace; lecture on Cromwell and Charles I., of England; story and views, Mrs. Mayer.

Part III—(Scene)—Charles I. in Parliament, members of Parliament, special guard of Halberdiers, English soldiers, etc. The King tries to arrest five members. In this scene the civic and religious persecution is personified. After the King's withdrawal the Declaration of Civil War is made by Hampden, Cromwell and others.

AGAIN IGNORE COMMISSION

Tyler and Bullock Tell in Common Council Why They Will Not Comply With "The Mc-Adoos" Request.

HITS AT 'EM HARD

Witnesses Would Have No Confidence in New Commission and Would Not Give Testimony—Other Reasons Are Specified.

In a supplementary report presented to the Common Council last night Councilmen Tyler and Bullock, members of the councilmanic police committee, unfolded their reasons for refusing a second time to appear before the new police commission to present what evidence they have against Chief Kiely. The Councilmen hold that nothing can be done until the constitutionality of the new commission law is passed upon and that as the matter will come before the Supreme Court for opinion on Monday, it would be unwise to be too hasty.

An argument is made in the report that probably those who would appear at the councilmanic board's investigation would refuse to do so at a police commission probe. Note is also made of the fact that one person mentioned in the informal charges contained in the original report is now a member of the new commission. These reasons, together with one that the members of the body which may sit as judges, should not be called upon to take the part of complainants are the gist of the report.

The correspondence passing between the police commission, Chief Kiely and the old police board is reproduced in the report, which then goes on to say:

"These gentlemen appointed by the Mayor are unduly pressing their attempt to usurp the powers and duties of this Common Council in police affairs. The matter has been fully explained to them in the recent report of your committee to the Council. A decision of the Supreme Court is expected on the 13th of this month, which will probably determine their right to act. But in any case, action before that decision is rendered will be liable to be made void and to result in confusion and miscarriage of justice for which this Common Council must not be responsible, but which these gentlemen are evidently quite willing to risk.

"The official representatives of the Board of Police and of the Common Council are warned by the above resolution that they must, before said decision is rendered, recognize these gentlemen as the lawful successors of the Common Council. The demand is that they, two of the members of the Police Board, and responsible to the Common Council, whose duty it may be to act as judges in the matter, if the court shall so decide, must voluntarily renounce this duty, and themselves become complainants. They must present charges upon the complaints of other persons, who may or may not have the same faith to appear as informants before these gentlemen of the Mayor's choice, as they would before the Board of Police, which is ultimately subject to the control of the Common Council. If this demand is not complied with in ten days, and before the court's decision is known, the Mayor will be requested to assume still further control of the proceedings.

"This committee recommends, after careful consideration of the matter:

"1. That it would be improper for members of the Police Board to accede to the demand that they become complainants upon the charges of citizens, with respect to which they are likely to be called upon to sit as judges, even if such a demand were reasonable under any circumstances. The complaints have been presented to them, not by them. They are the elected representatives of the people, sworn to perform the duties of their office. Unless the law under which the Mayor has appointed these gentlemen is valid, it is still the duty of the Police Board and of this Common Council to be judges in this case, and they will be held responsible for its proper conduct and disposition. It would be a violation of their oaths of office were they to voluntarily abdicate or otherwise attempt to escape this duty and responsibility.

"2. That it would be unwise for the official representatives of the Common Council in the proceedings as hitherto conducted to take any part which might later involve the Common Council or the Police Board in any share of responsibility for the proper conduct of the same by another tribunal, over which they have no control. It is submitted that the fitness of the new tribunal to act upon these complaints, so far as one of its members is concerned, is, in the light of the facts reported by your committee at the last meeting of the Common Council, open to grave question. Neither the Board of Police nor this Common Council is responsible for the present condition of affairs mentioned in the above resolution, and it is their plain duty to pursue the only proper course remaining to correct as quickly as possible these conditions which have been forced upon them.

"3. It is submitted that it is at least open to serious question whether the information, of which these appointees of the Mayor are so eager to obtain pos-

COUNCILMANIC ROUTINE

Batch of Business Done at Regular Monthly Meeting Last Night.

MR. MARSH'S REPORT

Prefers Not to Act on Police Tangle Until Court Decides Constitutionality of Act—Some Petitions Filed.

Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh, to whom was referred the police committee report, with a request that a decision regarding the validity of the Police Commission bill be expedited, reported to the Common Council last night, stating in a communication that the case regarding the constitutionality of the act under which the Plainfield police commissioners were appointed, which is being tested in the interest of Elizabeth, that city having taken advantage of the same act, was argued in the Supreme Court last June and that a decision is expected on Monday, November 13. Until such a decision is given Mr. Marsh said that any opinion now given by him would be ill-advised, and he would wait until such decision.

Mr. Marsh also stated that the American Sewage Disposal Company, of Boston, which began an action against the city some time ago, alleging certain infringements of patents, had asked for certain concessions, and he had decided that it was unwise to grant them.

Four resolutions offered by Mr. Tolles, in each case providing for an appropriation of money, were adopted. One provided for the borrowing of $8,000 for sewer improvements. Another one provided for the borrowing of $7,000 for the fire fund and $1,000 for the poor fund and the execution of notes for two months. The third resolution called for an appropriation of a sum not to exceed $300 to cover the expense of auditing the city's books and approving the tax list, and the fourth resolution called for the appropriation of a sum not to exceed $150 to pay for the extra help needed in the tax collector's office in getting out the tax bills.

Petitions for two electric lights on Leland avenue, and three on West Eighth street, between Monroe avenue and the city line, were received and referred to the proper committee. Another petition received from Elston M. French and others, asking that a storm sewer be laid in Darrow avenue, between Fourth and Fifth streets, to prevent the flood of sidewalks and property, made possible by a change in the grade, was referred to the committee on streets and sewers. George B. Wean, city stenographer, reported that the necessary election notices were posted in various parts of the city as required by law and gave the location of each one.

Isaac P. Runyon, Esq., attorney for J. P. Emmons and Robert P. Bellchambers, executors of the estate of Ellen Gill, asked the Common Council to correct an assessment made in error on property owned by the estate and located on George street. The assessment, it was claimed, was made on the wrong property. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

A petition for an electric light on East Front street, between Leland and Netherwood avenues, was referred to the proper committee. Street Commisisoner Gavett reported the granting of sixty-two sewer permits during the months of August, September and October, and Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of twenty-six permits during October.

Little Affected by Raised Rates.

Statements made by the secretaries of the two Royal Arcanum councils in Elizabeth show that the membership of the lodges in that city has been affected less than those in any other community in the State, in proportion to the membership. There is a total of 432 members in that city in the tw olodges—Elizabeth Council, No. 170, and Resolute Council, No. 808. Of this number only fifty-two have been suspended or have withdrawn from the councils. The percentage of loss of membership in the Elizabeth Council is lowe than in any other lodge in New Jersey. Three members withdrew and nine were suspended for not meeting the new assessments. The reason for this was that there were fewer members in that lodge who were sixty years of age, and because the lodge had maintained a "loan" fund, out of which the dues of the delinquent members were paid, and an assessment of twenty-five cents was levied against the delinquent members for the loan. This fund has just become exhausted.

CITIZENS CHALLENGE VOTES OF SMALLEY MEN

LOCAL LAWYER WINS IN TWO APPEAL CASES

HEARD YESTERDAY IN COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

In the Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth, yesterday, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and S. S. Swackhamer were opposing counsels in two cases and in both the former received a favorable verdict.

The first was an appeal from the late Justice Moffett's court in the action of Fannie Alston against John Alston, to recover the value of furnnture he kept belonging to her. The original verdict was for $50 for the plaintiff, but yesterday, the defendant, represented by Hetfield, was granted a non-suit. Mr. Swackhamer appeared for Miss Alston.

The second case was that of Scheerer & Crown, of Newark, against Max Michaelson and Lewis Levine, of this city. The firm sold Mrs. Frank Ayers a lot of furniture on the instalment plan and she in turn sold it to Michaelson and Levine for $5, they knowing, it was alleged, that it had not been paid for. A jury in Justice Mosher's court awarded the firm $125 and cost and this was appealed by the defendants' counsel, Mr. Swackhamer. The jury was out but half an hour and brought in a verdict for the plaintiffs for $156. Scheerer & Crown were represented by Mr. Hetfield.

STORM SEWER BIDS WERE RECEIVED

ONLY TWO FILED WITH COMMON COUNCIL LAST NIGHT.

Prior to taking up the regular order of business at the November meeting of the Common Council last night there was a brief suspension for the purpose of receiving bids for the construction of the Richmond street storm sewer between Cedar brook and East Fifth street, in accordance with an ordinance previously adopted.

There were two bids, one from Richards & Gaston, of Somerville, the firm now making the improvements at the sewage disposal farm, and S. B. Opdyck, Jr. They were referred to the committee on streets and sewers and a report will be made later as to the successful bidder.

There was also a hearing on the ordinance providing for the establishment of the grade on Park lane, Park terrace and a portion of Berkeley avenue, and there being no speakers for or against, later in the evening Mr. Wilson, chairman of the street committee, called up the ordinance on final reading and it was adopted.

CHARGES ENOUGH.

But Nothing Came of Them, and Ben Austin Goes Free.

Ben Austin, colored, who lived in Halifax, N. C., until last March, was arrested last night on complaint of John Venable, also colored, who accused him of drunkenness, carrying concealed weapons and attempted murder. Venable alleged that Austin tried to cut him into slivers, and the cops did find a razor on the prisoner. It didn't look as if it had ever been fleshed.

Venable failed to appear against Austin this morning and the latter denied any murderous intentions. Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

IN SOMERSET'S COURTS.

Bail Bond of Flomerfelt Is Renewed.

In the Somerset County Courts Saturday, Jacob Flomerfelt, who is charged with manslaughter, renewed his bail bond in $2,500. Zachariah Smith and Richard B. Duyckinck, of Bedminster, became his surety. The case will probably be tried in December or January.

A number of Raritan boys who were charged with breaking and entering the grocery store of J. B. Losey in Somerville pleaded guilty and will appear for sentence later.

Twelve Whose Registration Was Questioned Held Up This Morning.

THE MAYOR IS READY

Will Take All Effected to Somerville and Procure Certificates of Election—Both Sides Expectant.

True to their announced purpose, after the fizzle of their charges before the County Board of Canvassers, the Citizens of North Plainfield challenged at the polls today the men they sought to have removed from the registration lists. In all twelve were held up before noon and none of them were allowed to vote, nor would they allow their votes to be sworn in.

Mayor Smalley and his associates were ready for just such an emergency and wired the fact to Somerville. All those challenged will be taken to the county seat on the 1 o'clock train and certificates of election will be procured from Judge Schenck. This will enable them to present their vote and it cannot be refused. All the others who are likely to be challenged will be hurried to the polls at noon in order to have this done, and they will also be taken with the twelve already held up.

The voting in the borough began to be heavy early in the day and the total cast is far above that for the same time of any previous year. Both sides are jubilant, but dozens of bets have been placed with the odds 2 to 1 on Smalley. Many hundreds of dollars have been wagered that his majority will be anywhere from 75 to 200.

The leaders of the Cita are expectant and declare that there is no doubt but what they will win.

WIFE ELORED WITH NEIGHBOR; HE SAYS

IS GIVEN DIVORCE, WITH CUSTODY OF THE COUPLE'S LITTLE DAUGHTER.

Mrs. Annie Moritz, an attractive woman, was defendant yesterday in a suit for absolute divorce brought by her husband, William Moritz, before Vice Chancellor Bergen in the Somerset Court at Somerville. Former Prosecutor James L. Griggs appeared for the plaintiff and the defendant was represented by Deputy Surrogate Anderson and John A. Frech.

The Moritzs lived in Somerville in an apartment house on Franklin street until a few months ago, when Mrs. Moritz suddenly disappeared. At the same time Michael O'Connell, who occupied an apartment above the Moritz flat, also disappeared. After an absence of several weeks Mrs. Moritz returned to her parents, but has not since lived with her husband.

O'Connell appeared in Somerville soon after Mrs. Moritz returned. Moritz testified his occupation kept him away from his home nights and that during his absence O'Connell had become acquainted with his wife. Evidence was adduced by the plaintiff to prove that O'Connell and Mrs. Moritz had eloped to New London, Conn., where they had lived as husband and wife for several weeks.

Mrs. Moritz did not deny the allegations of her husband, but she testified that his cruel and inhuman treatment, which she said began before she met O'Connell and continued through most of her married lifeh had driven her from her home.

After hearing the testimony, Vice Chancellor Bergen granted a decree of absolute divorce to the husband with the custody of his daughter, five years old.

L. L. Block, who was injured by a Philadelphia flier two weeks ago, has retained R. P. F. VonMinden, of New Market, to press a claim for damages against the P. and R. R. R. If the claim is not settled after a reasonable time, suit for damages will be brought. Mr. Block has an excellent case, and those who are familiar with those things say he is entitled to a good, round sum for his injuries.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Election Day is passing very quietly. Up to noon only a light vote had been cast, but this is usually the case at elections here, the largest vote of the day being cast between 5 and 7 p. m. From present indications the Republican ticket should win out as there is very little cutting being done by either side. Both parties seem to be well satisfied with the candidates selected. Ernest Ackerman, Republican candidate for Senator, will probably run ahead of his ticket as he is well known here and respected by all, both Republicans and Democrats.

The Plains and Saengerbund bowling teams meet tomorrow night. The result will mean a change in the lead in the league, as both are tied for first place.

NEWARK ACADEMY WINS.

Champions of the New Jersey Interacademic League.

Once again the Newark Academy has won the football pennant in the New Jersey Interacademic League. The game scheduled for Saturday between the Academy and Leal's School was cancelled by the latter team, so the title goes to Newark, with a perfect record. There has, however, been but little doubt since the season started as to who would win the championship. The local academy has been the logical candidate for the position right along, and it would have been little short of a fluke that could have wrested the title from her, considering the form she has shown in comparison with other schools in the league.

In the first game for the championship the Newark school showed its mettle by rolling up sixty-three points against the Pingry eleven. Carteret did not enter a football team this year, so the real struggle for the pennant was between Newark Academy. Even the Newark men thought the game would be a hard one, but the suburban school proved easy prey for the Newarkers, to the tune of 23 to 0. Meanwhile Montclair had won from Leal's, while Pingry also defeated the Plainfield academy. Later Montclair beat out Pingry in a close game.

HEALTHY PLANTS

Require the Most Careful Attention as Well as Good Soil.

Did you ever see a rosebush which—despite the most beneficent environment of soil—of sunshine—and of atmosphere,—seemed never to achieve a healthy growth.

A ton of manure will not help a plant that has a canker eating out its heart.

You must destroy the cause before you can remove the effect.

You cannot cure Dandruff and Baldness by rubbing on hair lotions, and rubbing in vaseline, etc.

You must look to the cause of the trouble—it's a germ at the roots of your hair which causes it to fall out.

Newbro's Herpicide destroys the germ, and healthy hair is the sure result.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

likes to feel so far as "looks" are concerned that he is "It." A soiled coat, worn and crumpled collar, ragged button holes and a generally run down and hung-in-the-garret-all-summer-look, certainly detracts the best of all overcoats and puts the man behind it in the undressed class. V. W. Nash, Sr., of Park avenue, is very busy these days delivering coal, the quality of which is the best and the price the lowest.

Good tailoring is done by Isaac Shrager, of Madison avenue. Take your garments to him when they need altering or pressing.

A proper dentifrice properly applied will often save you many a dentist bill. The best place in the city to get the dentifrice is at B. J. Schreiner's pharmacy.

If you send your clothes to H. W. Marshall's laundry on East Front street they will always come back home washed and laundered to your entire satisfaction. No rough edges on the collars or cuffs.

Van Camp & Franklin, at Front and Somerset streets, have one of the largest displays of carpets, curtains, rugs and mattings to be found outside the metropolis. And the best of it is, their prices are lower than anywhere in the State.

The Hotel Iroquois is known throughout the State as one of the best and most up-to-date in the Metropolitan district. Proprietor Leary exercises personal supervision and always watches out for the comfort of his patrons.

Almost from the first day that they entered business in Plainfield Neuman Brothers have endeavored to make a specialty of fancy fruits, and to that end the display maintained by them is not equalled anywhere in the city. They are showing at present a splendid lot of oranges, grape fruit, Nigara, Tokay, Concord and Malaga grapes, all of which were selected with especial care.

What About Your Eyes?

We have been writing eye sermons in this space for many months. Thousands have read them with profit, and thousands who have fully believed all the logical reasonings made and realized the dire consequences of neglect of vision, yet have put off coming here for no other reason than that they were "too busy."

Now just make up your mind this time that you won't procrastinate any longer, and that you will have the condition of your eyes inquired into forthwith. You'll never regret the resolution you made or forget what a blessing perfect sight is. No charges for examinations, you know.

GOLF PLAY FOR VAN BOSKERCK CUP

FIRST ROUND ON COUNTRY CLUB LINKS SATURDAY.

Although the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup was concluded at the Plainfield Country Club a week ago, the competition on Saturday for the T. R. VanBoskerck consolation, match play, held the interest of the members. This cup was offered by Mr. VanBoskerck to be competed for by those who made at least three points for the Golf Committee cup during the season, and during the past week the drawings were made by the Golf Committee. The result of the play was as follows:

C. B. Morgan beat J. J. Blackmore, by 2 up; Arthur Murphy beat J. E. Erickson, by 2 up and 1 to play; H. C. Munger won from G. M. Furman, by default; C. A. Stover beat E. E. Iremonger, by 2 up; Dudley H. Barrows won from T. R. VanBoskerck, by default; W. P. Boggs beat Howard Huntington, by 1 up; W. D. Riggs won from C. W. Abbott, by default; G. F. Pearl beat W. L. C. Glenney, by 4 up and 3 to play; M. D. Rae beat E. A. Cruikshank, by 1 up; Morris J. Dumont beat S. H. Patterson, by 4 up and 3 to play.

These drawings have been made for the second round, which will be played tomorrow morning:

H. C. Munger drew a bye, H. D. Hibbard and Dudley H. Barrows, C. B. Morgan and W. P. Boggs, M. D. Rae and C. A. Stover, Arthur Murphy drew a bye, G. F. Earl and F. O. Reinhart, W. D. Riggs and Morris J. Dumont each drew a bye.

In addition to the above play there will also be a competition for a cup offered by the club and these drawings have been made for that play:

T. R. VanBoskerck drew a bye, S. H. Patterson and Howard Huntington, J. E. Erickson and E. A. Cruikshank, G. M. Furman and C. W. Abbott, and W. L. C. Glenney, C. B. Andrews, J. J. Blackmore and E. E. Iremonger each drew a bye.

There was a large field of players at the Park Golf Club on Saturday to compete for the President's and club trophies, and some excellent scores were returned. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, S. St. John McCutchen and John L. Watson won the points for the President's cup, while for the scratch trophy the point winners were Raymond B. Carroll, Rev. J. O. McKelvey and S. St. John McCutchen. These scores were posted for the two cups:

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 96, 10—86; S. St. John McCutchen, 102, 10—92; John L. Watson, 116, 27—93; D. H. Rowland, 105, 11—94; Raymond B. Carroll, 86, plus 5—94; A. W. Kenworthy, 114, 18—96; Alex. Gilbert, 113, 15—98; Reuben Knox, 109, 11—98; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 107, 8—99; Samuel Townsend, 128, 21—107.

During the afternoon there was a tea at the clubhouse, which was attended by a large number of women as well as the players. The weekly competition will be concluded tomorrow.

GOLF.

Miss Daisy Elsberg has recovered from her recent injuries and has returned to her favorite game, golf.

The final play for the president's and club trophies will be the feature of the play at the Park Golf Club today.

There will be special golf events at the Westfield Golf Club today and tonight there will be an attractive programme.

FOOTBALL.

The fine schedule arranged for the balance of the season by the Orange Field Club will guarantee some fast football.

The Plainfield High School eleven has not yet been defeated this season, and judging from its present standard of play is not likely to be.

John Leal would not permit the football team from his school to play Newark Academy on Saturday owing to some reports he had received concerning the Newark eleven. The game was therefore cancelled. Tomorrow the tea mwill meet Plainfield High School and on Saturday another game with North Plainfield High School will be played.

POLICEMEN'S PAY HELD UP

Mr. Tyler then explained that the Common Council is not responsible for the complications, but until a decision is given showing which body is in authority to act, he thought it would be unwise to pay the bill.

Mr. Tolles spoke again on the question, saying that he could not see what difference it would make, whether the bill was paid at this time or later.

Mr. Murphy considered the action of the police commissioners merely a subterfuge to receive recognition by the Common Council. "If the bills of the police had been presented in the proper way they would have been paid without any delay," said Mr. Murphy. "It is the fault of the police commissioners and not the Common Council. They are forcing the issue."

A vote was then taken on an amendment that all bills, except No. 1103, the police bill, be paid, and was carried, Councilmen Bullock, Higham, Hibbard, Murphy, Tyler, Wilson and Daniel voting in the affirmative and Councilmen Gloak, Frank DeWitt Randolph and Tolles in the negative. All of the other bills were paid in the regular way.

An amusing incident during the proceedings of the meeting when the various bills were being signed was the act of Mr. Tolles, chairman of the finance committee, passing over the bills to Mr. Bullock, the fourth member of the auditing committee. This was considered somewhat unusual inasmuch as Councilmen Murphy and Hibbard who supercede him, were present. It was thought that an effort was made to secure Mr. Bullock's signature to the police bill as a member of the councilmanic police committee.

THE FORUM.

Children's Home Appeal.

Editor The Daily Press:

At our October meeting our treasurer told us that when our October bills were paid there would not be money enough left to meet our November bills, due December 1st. This is hardly a cheerful outlook, with a family of twenty-nine with which to face the winter. We must ask help once more from the friends who have never failed us in almost thirty years of our work. We have now about seventy sustaining members paying ten dollars each yearly. We want at once to raise the number to one hundred, giving us $1,000 which we can rely on each year towards our running expenses. We have lost several members in the last year. To our former friends we want to say the basket of barrel of mixed fruits and vegetables which you would scarcely miss from your generous harvest would be most helpful to us. Checks or cash donations may be sent to Miss Ella Serrell, 122 Plainfield avenue, or to Mrs. Horace Kimball, 325 Central avenue. All other gifts to the Home, corner Jackson and Westervelt avenues.

Heideloff Must Pay.

The case of John Schorb, Jr., against J. J. Heideloff, involving $92.86 alleged to be due as commissioner on the sale of Heideloff's hardwarde stock when he went out of business recently, was decided on appeal before the County Court yesterday. In Justice Hands' court the case was decided for Schorb and Heideloff carried it to the higher court. The verdict of the small cause court was sustained. H. C. Runyon appeared for Schorb and William Newcorn for Heideloff.

session, having been, in many instances, furnished confidentially to members of the Board of Police by citizens who had faith in that board, may now, in fairness, be turned over to the gentlemen appointed by the Mayor, in whom these informants may or may not have a like confidence and faith. It must be borne in mind that the same opportunities are open to these gentlemen, who claim to have authority over the department, as were open to the Board of Police, to make a thorough investigation into the conditions complained of, most of which, your committee is credibly informed, are personally known to one of the said gentlemen, and all of which they have at least as efficient means of learning as the Board of Police had. The absence of any plausible need for the particular information which happens to have come confidentially to members of the Police Board, and the absence of any apparent object for making this demand, render it doubly worthy of serious consideration, whether these confidences entrusted to the good faith of the Common Council should be voluntarily turned over to these gentlemen, whose disposition and use of the same are altogether beyond the control of the Common Council or the Police Board or any of its members.

DAVID CORSON" SCORES

Newest Lottie Blair Parker Play Delights Audience at Plainfield Theatre.

SUPERBLY MOUNTED

Walter Edwards and Miss Julia Marie Taylor at the Head of a Competent Cast—Many Notable People Present.

Miss Lottie Blair Parker's dramatization of Rev. Charles Frederic Goss' widely real novel, "The Redemption of David Corson," was given its premiere performance at the New Plainfield theatre in this city last night, and if the opinion of a local audience is worth anything, it will be one of the greatest successes of the season. No drama that Plainfielders have had the opportunity of seeing at home in years has been equipped with such a well balanced company or has had such superb mounting. The production is not only a triumph for Mrs. Parker, who gave the public "Way Down East" and "Under Southern Skies," but also to Robert Parker, who arranged the settings, and J. C. Huffman, Klaw & Erlanger's representative, who looked after the staging.

The cast is headed by Walter Edwards, the original "Sherlock Holmes" in "The Sign of the Four," and Miss Julia Marie Taylor, as capable an actress as ever delighted an audience. She was Richard Mansfield's leading woman for two years but in her new role of "Pepeeta," last night, all her previous work has been surpassed. She portrayed a lovable sort of a Gypsy girl in such a charming, refreshing way that she was watched breathlessly while on the stage and waited for expectantly while she was off. Mr. Edwards as "David Corson" was eminently successful and has a part which fits his dramatic abilities. Scott Siggins also undertakes a difficult role with credit and the remainder of the cast includes several artists who give some delightful characterizations.

Mrs. Parker adhered closely to the text of the book in dramatizing and the story is told with unusual strength. The period is 1850 and the scenes are laid in southwestern Ohio and New Orleans.

The production was witnessed last night by Mrs. Parker and a score or more of New York managers, playwrights and critics, but the Plainfield public was evidently unaware of the magnitude of the attraction. The local end of the audience was "small but appreciative," with the exception of several feather-brained women who wouldn't know a Shakespearian revival from a tank drama. They were seated well up in front and giggled incessantly at themselves, which was really good cause, but greatly annoyed Mrs. Parker and nearly everyone throughout the house, including the actors and actresses.

The play will appear in this vicinity for a week and then goes to Cincinnati, the home of the book's author, for a long run. It will be presented in New York after the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., of Jackson avenue, returned home this afternoon, after a few days at Lakewood.

BOILER TALK TO BOARD

School Authorities Hear an Insurance and Inspection Proposition.

ACTION DEFERRED

Medical Inspectorships, Overlooked at July Meeting, Filled by Reappointment of Old Incumbents.

The question of inspection and insurance of the boilers of the public school system was brought before the Board of Education at its monthly meeting last night. E. V. Murphy, representing the Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company, the biggest concern of its kind in the country, made a proposition to the board that will probably be accepted, at least when the next annual budget is made up, if not before.

The company offers to insure the board against loss or the payment of damages growing out of explosions up to a maximum amount of $50,000 for three years, for $35 on each boiler. The company limits the payment for any one accident to $20,000, but one such payment does not vitiate the policy—$30,000 of protection still remains. In addition to covering the board on risks of that kind, the company will send expert inspectors to test all the boilers four times a year.

Mr. Murphy pointed out that the cost of the insurance could very nearly be saved in the coal bill, as a result of suggestions as to cleaning and other things in connection with the everyday use of the boilers, which the inspectors make it their business to make after every visit. He pointed out that, of course, the chances of explosions were materially decreased by the inspections.

After Mr. Murphy had retired the board discussed the question. It was the consensus of opinion that the insurance was a good thing and should be secured. The question of money available for the purpose, however, prevented immediate action. Mr. Murphy told the board that he was figuring on eleven boilers, for which the total of three years' insurance would be $385, but Supt. Maxson could not remember any more than eight boilers in the whole system, including the two in the new High School. On eight boilers the insurance would be $280. Mr. Lovell suggested that if the money was not available at present, it could be incorporated in the next budget, which will be ready for use next July.

Drs. A. F. Van Horn and T. F. Tomlinson were reappointed medical inspectors at the same salary. In some way the reappointment of the inspectors, which should have been made in July, was overlooked at that time, and the appointments were made to date from then. The inspectors reported a busy time during October. They examined 638 children.

Clerk Clark reported the receipt yesterday of a check for $2,000 from Mrs. G. H. Babcock, the balance of her donation to the scientific fund of the new High School. The clerk was instructed to renew the thanks of the board to Mrs. Babcock for her generosity.

Supt. Maxson reported the year's results in swelling the library fund to $157. The total was made up of fines and sales of old books, etc., amounting to $29.44, and contributions from three schools as follows: Whittier, $34.29; Bryant, $43.85; Franklin, $49.45.

Dr. Maxson also reported the presentation of forty bound volumes of Harper's Magazine to the school library by the heirs of Charles Potter. He said the volumes were of material value and the board passed a resolution of thanks to the donors.

J. B. Ashton, of Elmwood place, applied for the position of engineer and janitor of the new High School. The application was placed on file. The position, for which there are a number of applications, will probably be filled at the next meeting. The berth is both an important and desirable one, and the appointment will be made with unusual care.

STRANGE, WIERD WAS THE PERFORMANCE

EVA FAY ASTOUNED AUDIENCE AT THE CASINO.

To say that a profound sensation was created by the Fays last night would be inadequately expressing the amazement and bewilderment of the large audience which crowded the Casino. As the people left the hall such expressions as "marvelous," "mysterious," "wonderful," were heard from all sides.

The Fays have certainly lived up to their announcements which preceded their engagement here. Their performance, entertainment, experiments, or whatever name the strange proceedings of the evening may best be termed, is certainly the most unique that has ever visited Plainfield. The programme is one which is hard to describe.

It consists of three parts. Part first consists of some cabinet tricks, if one may call them such. Leighton Calkins and H. M. Hedges went on the stage as a committee. They bound Mrs. Fay hand and foot, when a cabinet is placed about her, the curtain is drawn and in an instant she rigs bells, plays the guitar and tambourines; the cabinet is opened and she is found as closely bound as before. Several other tests were performed with the cabinet, which were just as mysterious and the cleverest things of the kind ever seen in this city. A handkerchief was borrowed from the audience. Mrs. Fay dropped it on the floor and at her command it assumed an upright position, standing as erect as a cane, and moved slowly across the stage to where she stood.

This feat, performed in full view of the audience, caused no end of wonder. Perhaps the greatest of all the remarkable entertainment was Mrs. Fays' work at mental telepathy, mind reading, or whatever one chooses to call it. You write a question on a slip of paper, which you retain, and Mrs. Fay, blindfolded and enshrouded in a sheet, with one hand exposed, tells you the question and gies the answer. At least a hundred tests of this kind were answered last night.

Question after question was called with lightning like rapidity. They covered every subject that sways the emotions of man. Some were ludicrous and others of a serious nature, verging on the pathetic.

AMUSEMENTS.

One of the biggest successes scored at the Herald-Square Theatre in many years has been made by Joseph Cawthorn, the German dialect comedian, in Klaw & Erlanger's production of John J. McNally's new musical comedy, "Fritz in Tammany Hall." From its title it might be inferred that this is a political comedy, but such is not that fact. The only smattering of politics in it comes from the incident of plot that Fritz von Swobenfritz, an East Side German baker, played by Mr. Cawthorn, is nominated by the Tammany machine for alderman as a district exigency and is unexpectedly elected. On this episode is built up a very comic musical play, teeming with novelties. The piece is presented in three acts with scenes showing Cooper Union, Donnelly's Grove at College Point, L. I., and the ball room in Tammany Hall. Mr. Cawthorn is supported by a company of 125 people. The principals include Mark Hart, Sue Stuart, Julius M. Tannen, Frank Shea, Ada Lewis, Neva Aymar, George Austin Moore, Susanne Halpron, Melville Ellis and Stella Mayhew, the comedienne.

"The White Cat" began its run at the New Amsterdam theatre Thursday evening and proved even more gorgeous than the previous Drury Lane spectacles which Klaw & Erlanger have presented during the past four years. It is larger in number of people employed, more magnificent in scenery and costumes, more novel in features and more brilliant in musical specialties, and is conspicuously excellent in the talent of the principals of the company. The wonderful ballets, "The Enchanted Orchard," "The Triumph of Hymen" and "Christmas of All Nations," surpass anything ever presented on the American stage. The Ercole-Ariaza troupe of Castilian daners and troubadours—nine women and four men—the only organization of its kind ever formed, created a sensation, and are the talk of New York. William T. Hodge, William Macart, Edgar Atchison Ely and Herbert Corthell are the principal comedians. Maude Lambert, Maida Snyder, Edith St. Clair and Harriet Worthington play the leading women's roles. The company numbers over 500 people.

There is no play outside of the classics—and the classics are only occasionally presented and with doubtful results—that has stood such a wonderful test of public judgment as "Rip Van Winkle." In the form in which Thomas Jefferson uses it considerable of the late Dion Boucicault's skill as a dramatist has been employed. For forty years it has endured in this shape, and today it is as fresh and charming and in as universal demand as it was a quarter of a century ago, when Joseph Jefferson was in the first heyday of renown. It will therefore be pleasant news to local theatregoers to learn that Mr. Jefferson is to play an engagement here at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday night, and that the play in which he will bid for favor as his father's successor is "Rip Van Winkle." He is confining himself pretty much to this play, first because he himself loves Washington Irving's jolly old vagabond of the Catskills, and second because the public demand it and seem to never have enough of it.

The attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight will be "The Madcap Princess," with charming Miss Sophie Brandt and an ensemble of sixty voices. It promises to be one of the best attractions that has yet held the boards at the local theatre.

No greater or more thrilling sword play has ever been witnessed than is shown in the military comedy-drama, "Lieut. Dick, U. S. A.," in which Robert Conness is meeting with such marked success. During the third act there is a scene between Lieutenant Dick and one Sancho Miguel, a Mexican gambling house owner. This Mexican has stolen and is keeping prisoner Dick's sweetheart, Macita. Lieut. Dick, who has been absent on duty, returns to learn of Macita's abduction, and traces her to Sancho's gambling house in Cheyenne, Wyoming, arriving there at a very opportune moment. Dick demands Macita's release. Sancho denies any knowledge of the girl's whereabouts, and Lieut. Dick is almost convinced that this is so when a cream is heard. It is Macita's voice. Dick attacks Sancho, who is armed with a deadly two-edged Spanish sword. A combat ensues, which for thrilling realism has never been equalled on the stage. During this desperate encounter the room in which it takes place is practically dismantled, furniture overturned, lamps and bric-a-brac smashed, curtains torn from their hangings, and the fight continues in semi-darkness. Macita manages to release herself from the room where she has been held prisoner at the instant Dick is disarmed by Sancho, who is a skilled fencer. She rushes to Dick, and Sancho, with murder in his heart, is just about to run them both through, when there is a flash, a loud report, and Sancho falls dead at their feet. Lieut. Dick is arrested and charged with murdering Sancho, but in the last act his innocence is established and the play is brought to a happy conclusion. "Lieut. Dick, U. S. A.," is to be presented by Mr. Conness and a strong supporting company at the New Plainfield theatre Thursday evening.

Walter Fessler is a theatrical manager of wide experience, and the author of a number of successful plays. He knows what the public wants, and, consequently caters to his patrons—which accounts for his success, both as a playwright and manager. He gives the public what they demand and in his latest production, "The Life that Kills," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, he delivers the goods, all silk and a yard wide. All classes will find samples to suit their individual tastes and the combination of the whole, so pleasing to the general public, that they will call again and again. Mr. Fessler believes in giving his patrons the worth of their money, and he has spared no expense in placing this production on the stage. Everything is bright, new, and up-to-date; the story is clean and free from anything coarse or suggestive. The cast has been selected with care and it is almost impossible to say which is the best, as all have good parts.

At the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night, the Russell Brothers will be seen in a brand new comedy drama which the author calls "The Great Jewel Mystery." The policy of giving these excellent players a new vehicle is a good idea, it shows enterprise. Last year they had a melodrama entitled "The Female Detectives." It was good and gave satisfaction. This fact enhances our approval of the chance to see something else, we know that the Russell Brothers are clever, they can impersonate the Irish slavey as no one else can upon the stage. In the new play they are known to be men, which adds to the realism of their roles, but the circumstances of the story give them opportunity to de detective work and their feminine make up is simply a wonderful disguise, of course the audience will laugh, they cannot help it, but the purpose is quite serious and the end commendable. There are about twenty other players in the cast and the management aver that they are well selected. The production will be liberal and the play treated with every advantage.

George Edwardes' London company, under the direction of Klaw & Erlanger, opened its engagement in "Veronique" at the Broadway theatre last Monday evening and made one of the most remarkable successes ever scored by a comic opera in New York. The piece is entirely different in its artistic daintiness fro,m anything ever seen here and the company, in point of personnel and talent, was enthusiastically praised, both by the first-night audience and the reviewers in the New York papers of Tuesday. Ruth Vincent sang the title role. She is a beautiful young woman with a superb voice and unusual dramatic talent. Lawrence Rea, a young American who is one of Mr. Edwardes' most talented artists, sang the opposite role, Count Floristan. He, too, scored a marked personal success. John Le Hay as Coquenard, the comedy character, and Kitty Gordon as "Agatha," showed themselves artists of the first rank. In fact, from the principals to chorus, a company stronger in ability and personal attractivenes has never been seen on Broadway. "Veronique" is staged in three acts and scenes which represent Coquenard's flower shop in Paris, a glade at Romanville and the reception room in the palace at Vercailles. These scenes and the costuming are artistically magnificent, presenting color schemes which have never been surpassed, either on the London or the New York stage. The favor with which "Veronique" was received at the Broadway indicates that it will repeat its London success here.

Newark Carnival Deficit.

The committee in charge of the Newark Hallowe'en Carnival announced yesterday that a deficit of about $1,500 exists in consequence of the large outlay needed to make the carnival the great success it was. The loss is attributed to the carnival balls, which were arranged on a grand scale, and were expected to be profitable, but the delay in the street pageant, caused by the inability of the police to handle the crowds, prevented the success of the balls The deficit will be made up by public subscription.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Laying his long, lean hand on Benton's knee, he bent earnestly toward him. "I need to know all you can tell me about Dr. Chilton and his family," said he. "Some of our vehement, war-to-the-hilt people are practically demanding the arrest of a southern family here to be dealt with in precisely the same way certain Virginians propose to deal with the doctor and that spirited daughter of his. No harm as yet," for here the young soldier's face had blanched and his eyes filled with dread and anguish. "No harm, that is—— Have we further news this [illegible] he busy secretary at the nearest desk, tilting the while one long leg over the other and clasping the bony knee with both hands. "Your general gave us the particulars of your escape so far as you had told him, and it is noted that you in no way reveal the names of those who aided you, but now—— What is it, Mr. Nicholay?" for with solemn face, the confidential secretary, holding an open letter in his hand, now stood at the president's elbow. Mr. Lincoln took the paper, knitted his brows and began to read.

"It came from the secret service, Mr. President, not ten minutes ago," said the secretary. "Col. Baker, I believe, is in the ante-room."

Benton felt like gripping the arms of his chair, for the room seemed swimming as the president looked quickly up. "Not so bad," said he, "if we can only take care of them here. They have simply banished them—father and daughter, both."

CHAPTER XVI.

"STONEWALL" IN AMBUSH.

McClellan's guns were thundering almost at the gates of the confederate capital when sympathetic kinsfolk took the Chiltons to their hearth and home and strove to soothe the wrathful old man. The city filled up fast with wounded. Every house was a hospital, and then, when by his devotion and professional skill, the good doctor might soon have rehabilitated himself, he was taken ill. When he was well enough, or at least so pronounced, to move at all, the crisis at the capital was over. McClellan was gone. The seat of war had shifted to the north. Jack, exchanged and released, was again in saddle, and how it was arranged Fred never heard until long after, father and daughter had been sent to Newport News with the wounded and exchanged, and thence had gone to the roof of the doctor's devoted sister in Washington. Once again had the great-hearted president sent for the general's aide-de-camp, and this time bade him go, meet the Chiltons and see them safely to their destination.

But that meeting had not made our Badger boy too happy. The doctor was aging fast and apparently breaking. Rosalie was stern and strange. Squire Benton, with Elinor, as he had long planned, hastened on to Washington when notified by wire that Fred had a week's leave from the front, and Fred's earnest, yet almost humble plea that he should be allowed to bring his father to see Dr. Chilton—his sister to see her—Rosalie had almost curtly refused. Then she had fairly stunned him by saying, "If you really wish to do me a favor, Mr. Benton, there is one man I'd like to meet, and that is—Maj. Lounsberry." Benton should have known by the flash in her eye, the fury in her tone that for no sweet assurance did she so desire to see that distinguished Virginian, now every moment expectant of exchange. But in Benton's helpless, hopeless love, he was consumed with unreasoning jealousy. Yet it was through his planning, after all, that they met—the blue-eyed sister who so surely had read her brother's secret—the dark-eyed, chafing, fitful, fuming Virginia beauty who so surely held it. Washington was torrid and unwholesome; and just before Fred hurried back to the division he had brief conference with his father. The Chiltons would surely need money, said he, and as surely refuse it if tendered by them. Neither the doctor nor Rosalie began to know until long months thereafter that the ample means so readily supplied by the doctor's widowed sister came from that hard-headed, hard-fisted western lawyer, whose next move was to Cape May with Elinor; and there were they still recuperating at the Atlantic seaboard, the fathers already friends, the daughters still "on guard" at the very moment when Jack Chilton, scouting with the advance of Fitzhugh Lee's brigade, and Paul Ladue, riding the dim picket lines of Ewell's grim veterans, and Fred Benton, here at Buckland's, closing in with that strong, disciplined division, were dreaming not ten miles apart of what the morrow might bring forth.

Not until the shadows grew long across the stubble fields that lovely August evening came the first fierce grapple of that devoted brigade. Marching at dawn through Buckland's, they found the pike toward Gainesville crowded with Sigel's trains and teamsters through which they slowly forced a way, for, far in the eastward distance little snowball puffs, bursting sudden into view above the treetops, then drifting into nameless nothing, told the shells were flying fast ahead, while similar, fleecy cloudlets against the dark background of the Bull Run range told equally of other fighting to their left and rear. The corps commander, with his one division, dived into the winding wood roads toward Manassas until brought up standing after two p. m. by disconcerting news from Pope—that the hare had not waited for the bag, that swift-footed Jackson had given them the slip, and wasn't where they looked for him at all. In point of fact, having no cavalry to do his looking for him, Pope didn't know where Jackson was.

It is three hours later when, bidding his biggest division obey its new orders, just received, McDowell, rides away to find his chief in Pope and show him the field. Thereby he loses Pope, loses touch with his divisions, loses all chance of usefulness in the battle that is to close the day—poses, in fact, himself, for he cannot find his way to his own command over the field he knew so well the year before, even when signalled by the guiding thunder of the heaviest cannonade, the sullen crashing of the firecest volleying, those tangled woods have ever heard. At five or thereabouts comes staff officer from Pope with these astounding tidings: Jackson is located. Jackson has dared to cross Bull Run and march in the teeth of the coming corps of the Army of the Potomac. Reno and Kearny have followed his rear guard—Hill's light division—straight to Centreville. Where is Gen McDowell? Here! Well, Gen. Pope's orders are for this, McDowell's corps to retrace its steps to the Warrenton pike, then turn eastward and march forthwith on Centreville, whither Jackson, with all hands, has shifted his colors, and where Pope now proposes to apply the sack. Further orders will meet the corps on the way.

Now there is but one division to obey the order, but loud ring the bugles through the leafy woods. Up spring the men of the old brigade, refreshed by three hours rest, with coffee and hard tack to comfort them ere starting, and, as the heads of columns reach the pike again and turn sturdily away eastward, some levelheaded band leader signals to his men, and the Black hats set up a shout as the woods ring to the rollicking strains of "Ain't I glad to git out o' de Wilderness!"

Four brigades in solid column they swing along the broad, dry thoroughfare, full 6,000 boys in blue.

But if Jackson's real movements are unknown to our generals, rest you sure the eyes of his army have not been left behind. Early that very morning Johnson sends young Gaither with his gray-clad troop spiering and when our confident courier comes galloping along with McDowell's dispatches to Sigel and Reynolds telling them just what is planned for the day, Gaither gathers him in, sends the much-appreciated programme to Johnson, who grins with delight, and passes it on to Old Jack himself, away on toward Sudley Springs, snoozing with his division commanders Ewell and Taliaferro, on their soldier pillow—saddles—in the snake-fence corner. Here is the chance of a lifetime! Somewhere to the west must be two of McDowell's divisions, alone. And, even while he is rousing his right and left bowers, Ewell and Taliaferro, there comes word from Stuart that Ricketts has gone out to Thoroughfare, and McDowell, with one isolated division is marching eastward from Gainesville. Now, "Up guards and at 'em!" Up Ewell and Taliaferro! Up guns and brigades—batteries three and brigades just five and away they go at the edge of the sheltering woods until nearly three miles out to the southwest, and there the dusty, grimy, gray brigades lie down and wait for that devoted division.

Off to the right front is a cosy farmhouse and Ewell lets his wideawakes go sampling, and takes a hearty sip, as a dark-eyed young aide-de-camp rides up with a dripping canteen of the soothing white fluid. "Thanks, Mr. Ladue," says he. "That's most refreshing. By the way, you know some of these fellows we're expecting out yonder, don't you?" and the general points southward. Ladue follows the gesture of his commander, and then, his eyes, dark, mournful and apprehensive, fix upon that vehement soldier face. "Wisconsin?" he falters. "I felt—I knew it must come—sometime."

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., cor. Hillen, Ocean Grove, N. J." Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C. W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

MYSTERY IN HIS DEATH.

Rich Man's Body Found Mangled on Railway Track.

Somerville, Nov. 7.—William Haelig, a rich quarryman, was killed in a mysterious manner near his stone crusher in the Chimney Rock ravine of the Watchung Mountain, four miles from here, Sunday morning.

Haelig left his home near the Watchung Mountain to inspect his quarry at 8 a. m. He carried a large amount of money. An hour later a Hungarian laborer found his mangled body on the railroad track near the stone crusher.

No Sunday trains run over that branch of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, which extends from the main line at Bound Brook Junction to Haelig's quarry, but there were several empty stone cars on an incline above the quarry last night, and it is believed that Haelig might have started one of these cars down the incline toward the stone crusher and fallen from the car while it was in motion. Otherwise, he met with foul play and his body was laid on the track, and the car run over it to conceal the crime. The empty car was found standing on the track several hundred feet from the incline.

Haelig's clothing was torn to pieces. His pocketbook has not been found.

Haelig's stone crusher supplies all the stone ballast for the roadbed of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. It is situated on the turnpike running from Bound Brook to Martinville. This thoroughfare is constantly traveled by vehicles, but no one can be found who saw Haelig meet his tragic death.

Haelig was prominent in the community and a generous supporter of the Chimney Rock Mission church, which is in sight of the place where he was killed. He leaves a widow and eight children.

Fire Insurance Rates Reduced.

As a result of the recent installation in Newark by the city authorities of a high pressure water system for fire purposes in the business and manufacturing centers, the Newark Fire Insurance Exchange has announced a voluntary reduction of ten per cent. in fire insurance rates.

HOSPITAL'S CONCESSION

City to Have Representation on Institution's Board of Governors.

ACT NEXT MEETING

Membership to be Increased from Twenty-four to Twenty-five —Reason for the Innovation.

Appreciating the necessity of having the city represented in an official way on the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, notice was given at a meeting of the Board last night that an amendment to the constitution would be offered at the December meeting. It will provide that the membership of the Board consist of twenty-five, instead of twenty-four as at present, and that the Mayor or someone nominated by him and the Common Council represent the municipality on the Board.

It has been the contention that the Board of Governors has no right to official recognition for aid inasmuch as the city is not represented in the management of the hospital. It is to overcome this and make the institution more of a public one as possible, that a representative of the city will be put on the Board.

Plans were approved for an elevator which it is proposed to install at the hospital for carrying patients from one floor to another. The building committee was authorized to provide for cold storage rooms, something needed very much at the hospital.

Charles J. Fisk was appointed chairman of a committee of three to consider plans for a carnival to be held next summer. Mr. Fisk will select the other two members of this committee.

The committee having charge of the nurses training school was instructed to collect data from the leading training schools in the country with a view to making the local school more efficient. The Board realizes that the training school is not up to the highest standard and it is the desire to make it as efficient as possible.

The usual monthly report from the medical staff was received and filed and after the Board authorized the investment of trust funds in bonds and mortgages, the meeting adjourned.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

The Hobokens defeated the Stars at Elizabethport on Sunday by a score of 5 to 1. "Larry" Hesterfer and Lamar formed the battery for Hoboken and Waller and Ross officiated for the Stars. Hesterfer only allowed two hits, while Waller was touched for nine. This practically decides the championship for Manager Daab's team.

JERSEYMAN'S GIFT TO SOUTH DAKOTA COLLEGE

RALPH VOORHEES PRESENTS WESTERN INSTITUTION WITH $10,000.

Huron, S. D., Nov. 6.—Huron College, a Presbyterian institution, has received a gift of $100,000 to its endowment fund from Ralph Voorhees, of Clinton, N. J. Two years ago Mr. Voorhees gave $25,000 for the erection of a dormitory for girls, which was completed last year and named in honor of Mrs. Voorhees.

The $100,000 will be used for the erection of a new central building, and the college will pay Mr. Voorhess an annuity of five per cent. during his life. The building will contain recitation rooms, offices and, for a time, a chapel, library and gymnasium. It will be called the Ralph Voorhees Hall.

Clinton, Nov. 6.—Ralph Voorhees is an uncle of former Governor Voorhees, of New Jersey. The donor, who has lived most of his life here, is blind, yet a stranger who saw him would hardly know it, so familiar is the philanthropist with the streets. He has large banking interests here. He began life as a farmer, and after having become engaged to be married was suddenly stricken blind.

Unwilling to burden his fiancee with his infirmity, he offered to release her of his engagement, but she refused and insisted that he needed her more than when he had his sight. So the marriage took place. Mr. Voorhees is probably the wealthiest man in this section of the State.

Mr. Voorhees has been a generous contributor to churches. In January, 1902, he gave $25,000 to the General Board of Missions of the Reformed church to found a college in Vellore, Presidency of Madras, India.

On Christmas Day, 1897, he distributed $60,000 among relatives who would have received the money at the time of his death. Of this sum the then Governor Voorhees got about $10,000.

Other gifts since then are: Rutgers College, $50,000; Carroll College, of Waukesha, Wis., $20,000.

A Huge Magnet.

Lakewood attracts visitors out of season as well as in season, and is getting to be one of the first points of interests in this country which foreign tourists inquire about. Averaging from ten to fifteen degrees warmer than New York, its healthfulness and accessibility from the Metropolis combine to make it an ideal winter resort. It owes much to the sports for the widespread extent of its fame, particularly to golf and pony polo, the golf links which are usually open all winter and the polo grounds at Georgian Court being unsurpassed. The hotels which have an aggregate capacity for more than three thousand guests afford accommodations equal to those in the big cities both in point of view of comfort and attractiveness. Although known as a society resort par excellence, the attractions of Lakewood are so diversified that it appeals to all tastes, and offers as much to those who seek relaxation and rest as it does in the way of recreation and social pleasures. Full information concerning Lakewood including rates at the hotels and boarding houses is given in the Lakewood Booklet, published by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, which is to be had upon application to C. M. Burt, G. P. A., 143 Liberty street, New York city.

ATLANTIC COAST R. R. SOLD.

Bought by Adrian H. Joline for $700,000.

The property of the Atlantic Coast Electric Railway Company was sold at auction Saturday at Asbury Park to Adrian H. Joline, a New York lawyer, for $700,000. Mr. Joline represents a large number of the bondholders. He was opposed in the bidding by George W. Norris, of Philadelphia, representing some of the general mortgage bondholders.

It is said Mr. Joline represents the interests of H. H. Rogers, the Standard Oil magnate, who controls the Seacoast Traction Company, running from Belmar to Sea Girt. When asked about it Mr. Joline replied: "I am representing myself just now."

Neither Receiver Smith nor any of the trolley officials were present at the sale. The bid will be submitted to the court for approval. A certified check for $25,000 was deposited to make good the bid.

Before long the road will have passed out of the receiver's hands. Important changes may then be expected. It is thought that double-tracking to Belmar will be one of the improvements.

The women of the First Baptist church will be at the church tomorrow to receive articles and donations for the Baptist Home for the Aged at Roseville.

ACKERMAN IS THE STATE SENATOR

The voters of Union county elected Ernest R. Ackerman State Senator by a majority of 2,594.

Elizabeth is the only place that gave Nugent, the Democratic nominee, a majority. In the county seat he received a total of 5,149 votes, a majority of 809, while Noah Woodruff, the shrievalty candidate, received 4,948, a majority of 344. Tucker was the only Republican to carry Elizabeth, getting a total of 4,804.

The majority in the county last year was 4,600, Stokes getting 4,200. The spirit of apathy was apparent throughout the districts as well as in Plainfield and considering the difficulty in getting the vote out, the leaders are jubilant. Nugent expected to poll at least 1,500 majority in Elizabeth and perhaps 2,000, thus overcoming what he contemplated Plainfield would give Ackerman.

In his belief, Plainfield would not give his opponent over 800 because of the Buckle non-permit episode but in this he was mistaken, as can be seen by the returns.

As it was in Plainfield, so was it throughout Union county and he was greatly dejected when the concluding returns showed him that he would not be elected.

Mr. Ackerman was at the county headquarters in Elizabeth all last evening and he was in high spirits as the returns were read off and he himself figured the majorities. United States Senator John Kean was one of the first to offer him congratulations.

The detailed vote is shown in the Union county table.

—The Daily Press is issued as a morning newspaper today. There will be no afternoon issue.

State Senator E. R. Ackerman.

DUNELLEN RE-ELECTS WYCKOFF

William Wyckoff, Democrat, defeated Wilson Frederick, Republican, for Mayor in Dunellen. He secured a majority of 59 votes. The result was somewhat of a surprise, as Frederick's strength was considered much greater than it turned out to be.

The detailed vote follows:

Mayor.

William Wyckoff, D. 186
Wilson Frederick, R. 127

Council.

J. Newton Apgar, R. 153
Edward Pennock, R. 149
W. H. Kuhns, D. 156
Theodore Apgar, D. 164

Commisisoner of Appeals.

George Giles, R. 162
David S. Campbell, D. 153

The entire Republican ticket in Middlesex county is elected by from 13 to 50 majority.

SWEEP IN MIDDLESEX.

Middlesex county went Republican by 2,500. The ticket included a sheriff, three assemblymen and five members for the new board of freeholders. New Brunswick Democrats saved one ward, the Third, their chief fortress, from the wreck. The Republicans elected a mayor and a recorded by 700 majority, and six out of the seven aldermen. The new board of aldermen will stand 11 to 2.

New York Returns.

McGowan is elected president of the Board of Aldermen, and Ahearn is elected president of the Borough of Manhattan. Metz will succeed Grout as comptroller. Former Comptroller Bird S. Coler will be the new president of the Borough of Brooklyn.

FRELINGHUYSEN IS SOMERSET'S CHOICE

Joseph Frelinghuysen, Republican, was elected Senator from Somerset county by a majority of 916 over Senator Childs, Democrat, of Bernardsville. Irving Hoagland, Republican, defeated Walter Durling, Democrat, for the Assembly by 950.

Both candidates run strongly in North Plainfield. Frelinghuysen got his biggest majority there, excepting Bridgewater, where he received a majority of 554. Hoagland's banner majority came from the borough, where he received 421. Bridgewater gave him 358.

The vote for Frelinghuysen and Hoagland in North Plainfield was the biggest ever cast there for any candidates not nominated from the borough. Democratic leaders not in sympathy with the fusion of their party and the independents lay the blame for Childs' and Durling's poor showing in the borough to the indifference of S. S. Swackhamer, who handled the campaign for the county managers, to anything but Smalley's defeat. A prominent Democrat said last night that the county and State managers would hold Swackhamer responsible for the candidates' defeat.

The majorities received by the candidates throughout the county are as follows:

Bedminster, Childs, 160; Durling, 148; Branchburg, Frelinghuysen, 48, Hoagland, 38; Bernardsville, Childs, 197; Durling, 180; Bridgewater, Frelinghuysen, 554; Hoagland, 358; Bound Brook borough, Frelinghuysen, 25; Hoagland, 8; Franklin township, Frelinghuysen, 152; Hoagland, 320; Montgomery, Frelinghuysen, 20; Hoagland, 23; Warren, Childs, 32, Durling, 47; North Plainfield, Frelinghuysen, 356; Hoagland, 421.

JERSEY CITY RE-ELECTS FAGAN

The first returns in Jersey City indicated the re-election of Mayor Mark Fagan for a third term. Three years ago Murphy, Democrat, for Mayor, received 687 in the Second ward. This shows a gain of about three hundred in that ward alone for Fagan over three years ago.

Quakers Rout Grafters.

Philadelphia, Nov. 8.—The Evening Telegraph in its night issue said: "Mayor Weaver's stand for honest politics and civic reform was vindicated at the polls today. Early reports received at party headquarters indicate that the reform ticket has swept the entire city. Chairman Edmonds, of the city party, claims the election of the reform ticket by 40,000, while more sanguine reform leaders look for a majority that may reach 1000,000."

LITTLE INTEREST IN MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

949 VOTERS WANT THE PROPOSITION INVESTIGATED.

In the vote for candidates, the municipal ownership of water was almost lost sight of and the poll was far below what was expected, though the question was carried by a majority of 541. Scores of citizens neglected to vote either way; Councilman Tyler being one who allowed the matter to slip his memory when he pulled the lever on the machine in the Third ward. The report has been prevalent that the Republican organization opposed the scheme. The total vote was 949, divided in the wards as follows:

		For.	Against.
1st ward,	1st dist	86	25
	2d dist	94	45
2d ward,	1st dist	241	55
	2d dist	111	22

DUNELLEN.

NEW MARKET REPUBLICAN.

Republicanism won a complete triumph in New Market. Every Republican nominee on a long ticket received good sized majorities.

The vote was as follows:

Republican—Total votes, 155. For sheriff, Church, 149; Assembly, Crowther, 155; Drake, 168; Haines, 153. Freeholders, Hanson, 157; Bunting, 189; Mundy, 156; Pownall, 155; Montgomery, 156. Coroners, Bishop, 155; Moke, 155. Township clerk, Day, 153. Township committee, Tappen, 133. Township collector, Larue, 148. Overseer of the poor, Dayton, 146. Commissioner of appeal, Vail, 151. Justices of the peace, Smith, 148. Constables, Gable, 159; Pierce, 129; Reilley, 150; Osmun, 145. Surveyors of highways, Boice, 159; Delafield, 140.

Democratic—Vote cast, 84—Sheriff, Quackenboss, 90. Assembly, Rose, 77; Hildebrand, 80; Durham, 83. Freeholders, Crowell, 73; Dunigan, 69; Meacham, 73; Quaid, 82; Stults, 80. Coroners, Martin, 85; Flynn, 84. Clerk, Nelson, 79. Township committee, Giles, 108. Collector, Kelly, 92. Overseer of the poor, Walker, 97. Commissioner of appeal, Rupell, 90. Justice of the peace, S. Day, Sr., 88. Constables, Pierce, 55; Reilley, 85; Osmun, 85; Gulick, 100. Surveyor of highways, Higgins, 86. A poor appropriation of $1,200 and a roads appropriation of $2,500, on both tickets, went through.

HARMONY NOW—RUNYON.

"Of course I am immensely pleased at the result. To my mind it marks the finish of all factional differences in Union county and from henceforth we can work unitedly and more effectively than for years past."

These were the words of Judge William N. Runyon, who withdrew from the field in favor of the nomination of Mr. Ackerman two months ago. The Judge visited The Daily Press office to receive the complete returns and a gleeful expression was evident in his countenance as he viewed the vote in Plainfield. No man worked harder for Mr. Ackerman's election than Judge Runyon, hence he had reason to feel proud.

Morton Gives $50,000.

Kingston, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Ex-Gov. Levi P. Morton will build an Industrial Home and reading-room in the village of Rhinecliffe. Announcement of the award of the contract for this purpose was made public yesterday. The home will cost about $50,000. Mr. Morton's summer home, Ellerslie, is near Rhinecliffe.

Gloucester and Cape May.

Gloucester county and Cape May county both went Republican by good-sized majorities. The complete tickets were elected.

CINCH FOR G.O.P. IN PLAINFIELD

Ernest R. Ackerman, Republican candidate for State Senator, while not polling as large a vote in Plainfield as his friends expected, received the substantial majority of 1,340.

His total vote was 2,112 and that of Edward Nugent, his Democratic opponent, 772. That the latter did not poll a larger vote was a great disappointment, not only to him, but his many friends here.

Dr. Lawrence, the Republican candidate for sheriff, was high man in this city on the county ticket, polling 2,121, against 749 for Noah Woodruff, his opponent, giving him a majority of 1,372.

The Republican candidates for the Assembly showed equal strength with the rest of the ticket, each receiving a large majority over his opponent. Perkins polled 2,129 votes against 741 for his opponent, Stanford, his majority being 1,388. Tillman received 2,136 votes against 743 for Feld, his majority being 1,393, while for Tucker 2,141 votes were cast against 738 for Coulter, the former's majority being 1,402.

John W. Murray, Jr., received a majority of 1,149 for tax collector, receiving a vote of 2,060, against 821 for his opponent, J. V. F. Dilts.

S. P. T. Wilbur, the successful candidate for freeholder, to succeed the present incumbent, J. Fred MacDonald, received 1,999 votes, against 856, which his Democratic opponent, Stephen H. Schleif, polled. Mr. Wilbur's majority was 1,343.

Probably in the councilmanic fight the greatest interest was manifested here. It was known that many of the independents were working hard against the organization, and for this reason greater effort was put forth.

The successful candidates for councilmen-at-large, received this vote: George P. Mellick, 2,056; Francis L. Montgomery, 1,930; Herbert Buxton, 1,926, and against this the Democratic nominees polled this vote: George Alcorn, 672; Dr. Charles M. Luckey, 736; Joseph M. Hawkins, 821.

The strength of the organization was again shown in the fight for the ward councilmen. In the First ward Councilman W. L. Gloak, who had no opposition, polled a total of 549 votes, a large number of Democrats placing his name on their ticket. In the Second ward, Daniel F. Ginna, the successful candidate, received 469, while his opponent polled 160. Councilman Daniel demonstrated his strength in the Third ward, where 472 votes were cast for him, while John Connor, the Democratic candidate received 131. Councilman Charles C. Randolph proved to be popular in the Fourth ward, polling 734, while his opponent, Fred Endress, received 331.

School Commissioner Charles F. Abbott was returned to his office with a vote of 2,139, one of the largest given any candidate. His majority over J. P. Homan, the Democratic candidate, was 1,394.

As was to be expected the vote cast on the machine was the first to be returned at the city clerk's office. The success of the machines was

MAYOR SMALLEY IS TRIUMPHANT

Mayor N. B. Smalley.

BRIEF ELECTION RETURNS

McCLELLAN WINS

George B. McClellan has been reelected Mayor of New York. An enormous vote was cast all over town and the predictions of the Tammany leaders early yesterday were more than fulfilled when the ballots were counted. The Hearst and Ivins managers are staggered at the extent of the McClellan vote, and even the Tammany men were surprised at the great sweep of sentiment for the Mayor.

McClellan has 3,429 votes over Hearst, with 180 districts missing and yet to be heard from.

The splendid discipline of Tammany Hall is responsible to a great extent for victory. Instead of there being the wholesale defections that had been predicted, the Tammany men marched to the polls and voted solidly for the candidate of their organization. The William Randolph Hearst men say that the free use of money and the wholesale intimidation of their workers and voters at the different polling places by Tammany men operated to beat them.

W. T. JEROME ELECTED

William Travers Jerome has been elected District-Attorney of New York city by a plurality estimated at about 10,000. The amazing thing about the result of the county election is the falling off in the Osborne vote.

Atlantic Republican.

There was no comfort for the Democrats of Atlantic county in the returns. The entire Republican ticket was elected.

Mercer Republicans Win.

A decisive victory was won by the Mercer county Republicans. They put their mayoralty candidate into office by a 500 majority.

Burlington County.

The whole Republican ticket was elected in Burlington county. The shrievalty nominee received a majority of 1,200.

—Advertise in The Daily Press.

Smalley was completely victorious in North Plainfield. He snowed Conroy, the Citizen candidate, under with a majority of 243, the biggest he has ever received.

All the ticket went with him, from Frelinghuysen, candidate for Senator, to the Commissioners of Appeal and the Justices of the Peace.

Smalley's victory was a remarkable one. He was the sole issue, and every argument of the opposition was directed against him, and in the face of the bitterest attack ever directed against him he was given the biggest majority he ever received. Before last night his biggest majority in the four campaigns in which he has figured was 178, won over Conroy two years ago.

E. P. T. Smith and Clifford W. McGee, the councilmanic candidates, ran practically abreast of Smalley. So did Frelinghuysen and Hoagland. The latter ran a little ahead. Frelinghuysen's vote was 746; Hoagland's, 765; Smith's, 731; McGee's, 738.

Conroy got a total of 503 votes. Childs, Senatorial candidate, 380; Durling, Assembly, 344. The Fusionists, divided on councilmanic nominations, split their votes for the councilmanic candidates as follows: Emmons, D., 111; Mobus, D., 115; Charles E. Ball, C., 400; Currin, C., 416.

The battle at the polls was the hottest ever waged in the borough. The vote was the biggest in North Plainfield's record, passing even the figure of last year, a Presidential campaign, when a total of 1,281 votes was cast.

In spite of the intensity of he campaign the election was orderly and uneventful to a marked degree. The blunt and outspoken Smalley went through the day without a single clash with any of the men who had led the battle against him, and the smaller fry attended strictly to the business of garnering votes. Not an arrest was made.

The liveliest feature of the day was the challenging of eleven voters by the Citizens, eight in the Second district, where all the registration trouble had its source, and three in the First district.

Contrary to the general expectation, the Smalley leaders did not

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The election yesterday gives the town a justice of the peace once more. The election law last year legislated Justice Clark out of office, and the Township Committee appointed the judge a recorder, so as to enable the township to take care of its drunk and disorderly cases, but all civil cases have had to be tried by an out of town justice.

Yesterday was one of the quietest elections held here in years, the Democratic leaders taking but little interest in it, not a one being out to work for the ticket. The Republicans worked as of old and got out a fair sized vote considering the interest manifested by the voters.

Dr. J. Ackerman Coles and A. D. Shepard and sons, although spending the winter in New York, came out yesterday to cast their votes as usual.

Miss Bella Hyams, who has been visiting Miss Susie Parse, returned to her home in New York yesterday.

Frederick Cooper, of Westfield, spent yesterday with Loftus Hollingsworth, of Prospect avenue.

William S. Rapp has decided to cut out the weekly dances at the pavilion for a time.

Miss Sadie Reger spent yesterday with friends in Westfield.

ARKANSAS CAMPAIGNS.

"Talk about the political game," said Robert G. Faust, of Little Rock, Ark., at the Cadillac yesterday, "you ought to see how it's played down in my State.

"Campaigns consist in a series of debates. Recently the Governor and the attorney general, arch-enemies, were billed at the same meeting. Emissaries from each camp met and decided that personalities could be used in the speeches without breach of courtesy. Always, before political speeches, the seconds decide whether or not it shall be a mud-slinging contest. And the rules adopted are strictly followed, too."—Detroit Free Press.

The Comfort Of It : : :

Watson's suits are correct in appearance, but the Watson tailors have been just as careful in looking out for your comfort—not only the comfort that comes from clothing of appropriate weight, but the comfort that comes from cut—from fit. A Watson suit is not only so full of style that you look your best, but so well designed that you can walk or sit, or run, in entire comfort. Then, materials are as serviceable as they are good-looking—cheviots, worsteds, cassimeres and thibets, in blacks and browns and grays and fancy mixtures.

Suits $10 to $25.

Wouldn't a fancy vest add a lot to your satisfaction in your clothes? We believe it would. And so we have had our tailors make a lot of them. The Watson kind—all at the Watson prices

THE PEOPLE ALL.

In Chorus Cried, Give Us Newbro's Herpicide.

This word of late has been in everyone's mouth, and many are wondering what the word signifies, though no one has yet been found, who will deny that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE does the work. Well, for the information of thousands of people who like to know all about a good thing, we would say that HERPICIDE means, a destroyer or killer of "Herpes." Now "Herpes" is the family name of a disease caused by various vegetable parasites. A similar microbe causes dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair; this is the microbe that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE promptly destroys; after which the hair grows. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

What About Your Eyes?

We have been writing eye sermons in this space for many months. Thousands have read them with profit, and thousands who have fully believed all the logical reasonings made and realized the dire consequences of neglect of vision, yet have put off coming here for no other reason than that they were "too busy."

Now just make up your mind this time that you won't procrastinate any longer, and that you will have the condition of your eyes inquired into forthwith. You'll never regret the resolution you made or forget what a blessing perfect sight is. No charges for examinations, you know.

The active season was concluded at the Park Golf Club yesterday with the final play for the President's and club trophies and the regular play for the Holiday cup. A. W. AMUSEMENTS.

Probably no team of comedians have become more famous than the Russell Bros., who will be at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. Their work in female Irish roles is admirable and so far not equalled by any other players. The vehicle they offer this season is a melodrama of New York life by Mark E. Swan, entitled "The Great Jewel Mystery," and tells the thrilling story of a most sensational robbery at a swell hotel of the metropolis, upwards of twenty character roles being required in the production, the same being filled by well selected players. One prominent members is Mrs. John Russell, who as Miss Lucy Tempest has a stunning part. The scenic equipment is promised to be very elaborate, seven big sets being required, all of which are new and realistic. The roles of the Russell Bros. show some very clever detective work and their success is worthy of Old Sleuth or the famous Sherlock Holmes. To the lovers of melodrama this play will doubtless be very acceptable.

LITERARY.

The human interest of outdoors, in many examples—President Roosevelt's sporting blood and nature-love, described by his friend, George Bird Grinnell; Professor Hodge's discovery of the secret of grouse drumming, with the author's marvellous photographs; the troubles and philanthropies of John D. Rockefeller on his great estate on the Hudson, together with plenty of others—pervades the pages of The Country Calendar. Beginning with the ramping sorrel "Rearing Horse" on the cover, the magazine is packed full of November thrill and snap. Raising a grouse from the egg in order to photograph his drumming and thereby to end the disputation that has vexed naturalists and sportsmen from Audubon down, was the idea, fascinatingly put into practice, of C. F. Hodge, Ph. D., Professor at Clark University. In this issue are his authentic account of the solving of the mystery, and the extraordinary photographs that rewarded his [illegible]

P. H. S. DEFEATS LEAL'S SCHOOL BOYS

For the first time in a number of years, the Plainfield High School eleven defeated the Leal's School team, yesterday, in a city scholastic championship game. The game was played on Hope Common before a notably large attendance of school boys and the fair sex. It is estimated that over 600 spectators watched the contest. During the past few weeks both teams have been in training for this game and were in the best of condition. Everyone expected a close score, remembering the tie game three weeks ago.

Leal's won the toss and Douglass, of P. H. S., kicked off to them, starting the game. On the first few plays Leal's smashed through their opponents' line, soon carrying the ball to within twenty yeards of the school boys' goal line. Here the school boys held their opponents for downs and Glenney on the third down signalled for a drop kick at the twenty yard line. He fell back to receive it and although the pass was high his line held well and he dropped a pretty kick between the posts.

Leal's then kicked to P. H. S. and from this time forward the ball kept advancing towards Leal's goal. The linemen were often called back and they too gained as much through Leal's line as the backs on formation plays. After eight minutes of play Douglass was pushed through tackle for the first touchdown for P. H. S. Flanders kicked a neat goal. High School then kicked to Leal's but the latter was unable to make an effectual gain and being held for downs kicked to P. H. S. A touchdown was soon reached, Douglass going over the line with all the backs in the rear of him. Flanders then kicked a difficult goal. Time was called soon after with the ball in Leal's possession in the middle of the field. Score at the end of the first half—P. H. S., 12; Leal's, 4.

The second half was started with a number of subs in the P. H. S. line. Glenney kicked off to P. H. S. and Mahaffey, the star High School player, who was injured in the Somerville game and who only played a part of yesterday's contest, received the ball and ran back with it thirty yards, amidst the cheers of the crowd. The story of this half was the same as the previous one, Leal's proving too weak to hold the terrible onslaught of the well trained High School team. The first touchdown in this half was made by Douglass, by a tackle formation. This goal Flanders failed to kick.

P. H. S. then kicked off to Leal's and after about a dozen plays Freeman was pushed through tackle for the fourth and last touchdown of the game. Flanders then kicked a difficult goal. For the remainder of the half the ball see-sawed up and down in the middle of the field, P. H. S. holding it on Leal's forty yard line when time was called. The feature of this half was the daring tackle of Todd, who overtook Dallas after a thirty yard sprint. In spite of the hard game played yesterday, the P. H. S. goal line is still uncrossed by an opponent.

It would be hard to give any individual praise to the P. H. S. team for each one played a star game and not a single player being injured. Especially good work was done by Freeman, Douglass, Loizeaux and Todd. For Leal's Dallas, Glenney and Howard did fine work, the latter figuring in nearly every play and showing good judgment in running back punts. As a result of the game a number of Leal's players are badly battered up, Glenney and Lyman being the worst injured. These teams will meet in the final game for the city championship on Saturday, November 18.

Plainfield, N. J., November 8, 1905.

The Daily Press is a morning newspaper today.

By a majority of fully 2,500 votes, Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, has been elected State Senator and The Daily Press offers its congratulations. His campaign was conducted on lines that might well be copied by other candidates and he has reason to feel proud of the support given him by the voters of Union county. In him they recognized a man who would put their interests collectively before anything else and they know that he will take his seat in the upper chamber of the Legislature pledged to no man and free to do as his best judgment dictates. Again The Daily Press offers its congratulations to Senator Ernest R. Ackerman.

Surprisingly little interest was taken in the municipal ownership proposition at the polls yesterday. In fact the returns indicate that the voters have not warmed up to the plan anywhere near to the degree that was expected. One out of every two voters neglected to register his preference, but a substantial majority was recorded in favor of having the scheme of public ownership of the water supply investigated. This view of the matter has been advocated by The Daily Press in the belief that a reasonable amount of money expended in obtaining the opinion of experts as to the feasibility and practicability of the proposition would be money well spent. And now it will be up to the experts to tell us whether municipal ownership of the water supply will be a good business venture.

Colby's splendid majority emphasies the fact that the spirit of good government is abroad in the land. The plucky young Republican of Essex county in his battle against machine politics and machine methods has given courage to honest men in all parties to fight continuously and stubbornly for that which is right and that which should endure. In a speech delivered at a Smalley mass meeting in North Plainfield a few nights ago, that much admired and much respected man, Charles W. McCutchen, said "Every man who has his ear anywhere near the ground of late knows that there is something doing in this country of ours. Will I tell you what it is? It is the reawakening of the conscience of the American people. Everywhere there is a recognition of that old principle of the law: 'Thou shalt not steal.'" Such is the principle enunciated by Everett Colby, senator-elect from Essex county, who won his nomination despite the "grafters" in his own party.

Does anybody deny Mayor Newton B. Smalley the right to look happy? The vote recorded for him was a most complimentary one. It bespoke confidence in his ability as a municipal executive, and an appreciation of his past services in the chair he has filled for three terms. It was a beautiful scrap he won, and the men who like a good fighter—and who does not?—must perforce admire him and his victory, whatever their personal feelings in regard to his character and his record. The triumph gives him a splendid chance to prove his breadth as a man and as a civic leader. The people of the borough have spoken emphatically for him, in the face of the most unreserved criticism to which a candidate in North Plainfield has even been subjected. From the heights of his victory he can easily find it in his heart to meet his political foes in a spirit of magnanimity that will present a rare picture in local politics. This stand, with a speckless administration, leaning rather toward nonpartisanship than its antithesis, would make him, when the time for his retirement came, one of the towering figures in the admirable galaxy of ex-mayors of North Plainfield.

EVA FAY ASTOUNDS.

Remarkable Performance at the Casino.

The fame of the Fays is abroad in the land and everyone is talking of them; people go to the Fays' entertainment and then they go again. It seems as if Mrs. Fay must possess some marvelous power or attribute which seemingly enables her to look into the future, to recall the past and catch a definite idea of affairs in general.

The Fays certainly have the city "going," in the language of the ring, and their wonders will never cease. The interest in the Fays keeps up, and if they were to extend their engagement for another week undoubtedly the Casino would be daily packed with the curious.

The audience which was assembled was indeed the smartest gathering of the season. Prominent society people, representing the most cultured and elite, were in evidence, and the comments as the groups collected in the lobby to discuss this wonderful woman's power were indeed of the most complimentary nature.

A number of well known people last evening thought to see if Mrs. Fay really could tell them anything so carefully wrote their questions at home in the privacy of their own rooms; some even sealed their questions up in envelopes and retained them concealed in their pockets, but this made no difference with the lady who juggles with the mentality of men, for she read their questions just the same, and seemingly correctly answered them. Some asked the numbers of their watches, others whom they had received a letter from on a certain date.

Mr. Fay does a levitation, in which he suspends a young girl several feet from the floor and then passes a solid wooded hoop about her form. This experiment is done within probably two yards distance of the first row and on a most brilliantly lighted stage, without special scenry, Mr. Fay even removing his full dress coat to show there is no mechanical apparatus concealed. This is indeed a marvelous act. Mr. Fay could probably give Kellar points on these lines.

With the Fays is one of the finest if not the best vaudeville companies that has ever appeared on the local boards.

The Sisters Rappo, who were the headline act at Hammerstein's for a long run last summer, are with the Fays, and they certainly have the greatest dancing act ever seen here. Sadi Alparabi is more than clever as an equilibrist he is without a peer. His work on a splendidly decorated electrical pyrmis is novel and certainly pleasing. Phil Staats, the man who talks and plays piano, keeps the house in a continual uproar and well merits the plaudits he received. Whatever Mrs. Fay pays these people, they are worth the money. They are certainly at the top in their line.

SHOT WIFE AND SELF.

Walsh's Secretary Dead; Former Maid Mortally Wounded.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Washington J. Quiggle, private secretary to multi-millionaire miner Thomas F. Walsh, shot and probably mortally wounded his wife early yesterday, and then shot himself in the heart, dying instantly.

The tragedy occurred in their apartments at the Brunswick.

Quiggle was twenty-five years old. He came from Colorado, and his grandparents live at Ouray, Col. He had been employed by Mr. Walsh for a year and a half. Mr. Walsh is the capitalist who has made his home in Colorado, in this city and in Newport, R. I.

Mrs. Quiggle, who was a Washington woman, was shot in the breast and the abdomen. She was employed as a parlor maid by Mrs. Walsh at the latter's summer cottage at Newport last summer, and she and Quiggle were secretly married shortly afterward.

The cause of the shooting is unknown.

Plethora of Inspectors.

Though it is not according to election day customs there were six inspectors on duty in the First district of the borough yesterday. It was brought about through a blunder or something else on the part of Charles E. Ball, so it is alleged. The county committee on either side is supposed to make the appointments, and David J. Carney, of the Democrats, had named William Kiely and Michael Kohler. When it came time for work yesterday morning Peter K. Dilts and Leander Hammond also reported, saying that they had been appointed by Mr. Ball. He had no authority to do so and the men could have been dismissed, but Carney told them to remain on. As the Republicans had appointed their two men, the district was well supplied with inspectors.

Grover Cleveland Votes.

Princeton, Nov. 8.—Former President Grover Cleveland showed that he still manifested a deep interest in local affairs when he walked from his home to vote early yesterday. Mr. Cleveland lives only three blocks from the First district polling place and refused to use several free carriages which were offered to him. The roof was crowded with students and he had a pleasant word with several of them before voting. He voted quickly.

"A MADCAP PRINCESS."

Packed House Enjoys An Admirable Play at the New Plainfield.

"A Madcap Princess" was presented at the New Plainfield theatre last night, splendidly staged and remarkably well acted. An audience that packed the house to the doors testified to an unlimited enjoyment of the play.

Miss Sophia Brandt, the star, acted the title role with a spirit and a degree of artistic finish that left no room for regret that Lulu Glaser was not present in the part she created. Miss Brandt has a most attractive stage presence, and her histrionic ability makes her an artist that may always be depended upon to appeal irresistibly to the most ennuied playgoer. In her present role she reaches a degree of success that she has never before achieved, and the audience at the New Plainfield last night was not slow in recognizing and testifying to her charm and her art.

The company supported her faultlessly. Claxton Wilstach, who manages the production, has gotten together a cast beyond criticism.

Bulletins on the election were read from the stage between the acts. The enterprise of Manager Counihan in providing that metropolitan feature of playgoing was much appreciated by the audience.

AWFUL DEATH UNDER ENGINE.

Dumped Hot Ashes on Man in Locomotive Pit.

Elizabeth, Nov. 8.—Thomas Gallagher, thirty-six years old, of Horton place, Far Rockaway, Long Island, was burned to death beneath a locomotive at Port Reading Monday. He went to sleep the night before in a pit near the roundhouse of the locomotives and in the morning when the fireman went to the yards to rake down his fire dumped the hot ashes on him, not knowing he was under the engine.

He was brought to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, and though still conscious declared that he had no pain. The brothers at the institution declared that it was one of the worst cases they have ever had there.

All his clothing was burned off and there was hardly an inch of skin on his body. The body was taken to the morgue of John F. Martin, here, and his family in Far Rockaway was notified.

SCENES IN NEW YORK.

Shouting Crowds Filled Streets of Metropolis.

If New York ever had to take care of a bigger crowd than that which swarmed through the streets last night those on the outskirts would be pushed into the East and North Rivers. It was the greatest celebration of the annual Fall Foolish Festival that the city has ever experienced. For noise, tumultuous good nature and the three-cheers-for-everybody it is doubtful if anything like it has ever been seen in this country.

Broadway was, of course, the centre and vortex of the celebration. From Union Square to Columbus Circle the street was a splash of people, light and noise. In the Tenderloin tired policemen worked for a time to keep lanes open for traffic and then gave up in despair. It was everybody's night, and nobody cared particularly who had been elected. Before the returns were in the crowds cheered for McClellan, Hearst, Jerome, Ivins and Osborne in discriminately. After the result was known everybody cheered for the winner.

Downtown the crowds gathered in City Hall Square and in the plaza in front of the Pulitzer Building. This crowd—and it was enormous— appeared to be more bent upon making noise and gathering news of the election than was the crowd uptown, where everything was movement.

In Harlem the congestion of enthusiasm and excitement was in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. The whole east side turned out to howl and cheer, and the Bowery woke up to a show of its old-time life.

Commissioner McAdoo had made preparations for handling a record-breaking assemblage of people, but he had to confess that his arrangements were inadequate. Had he 50-000 policemen instead of 8,000, he could not have kept a semblance of order. Not that there was any unlawful disorder. It was simply a case of disregard for convention, and the policemen, realizing that it was a time for casting aside the regulations governing everyday life, joined in the celebration and whopped it up with as much vim as anybody.

The crowds began to gather in Broadway at sunset. Tin horn peddlers by the hundreds appeared on the street corners. Vendors of noise-making instruments innumerable did the business of their lives. A contrivance that, when blown into, produced a sound like a cross between the whistle of an ocean lines and the wail of a lost soul sold by the thousands. When the lights flashed up, signalling the departure of day and the arrival of hurrah-time, men and women were equipped to make the welkin ring until its ears ached—if, indeed, the welkin has ears. However, it is no disgrace to be foolish last night.

Seats in restaurants had been engaged in advance. Window seats brought fabulous prices. The theatres were sold out hours before the doors opened. Every playhouse had arranged to have the election returns read from the stage.

POLICE RAID RESULTS.

Claim They Traced Racing Wires to Three Places.

Trenton, Nov. 8.—Captain Cleary, of the First police district, yesterday exposed a poolroom system which, he says, was to be operated in this city. He found the headquarters in the Forst-Richey building. Saturday afternoon, during the raid of Reister's hall, a receipt was found for payment of three months' subscription for interstate telephones. The receipt called for a 'phone in room 23 of the Forst-Richey building, one in Reister's hall and another at the Mercer Driving Park.

Captain Cleary investigated and says he found another complete set of paraphernalia in the room, but the birds had flown. Upon inquiry at the Mercer Driving Park, he says, he found that Edward J. Dillon, the Trenton representative of the syndicate, had made an offer to rent the place. He was told that it would not be rented, but he could buy it. He said he had a large backing and would probably do so.

It was in his name, the police say, that the office in the Forst-Richey building was rented under the guise that a newspaper bureau was to be conducted. A sign on the door read "Capital Reporting Company. J. C. Barrie & Co." Barrie has been staying for some time at the American House, and is supposed to be one of the men implicated. J. G. Kavanaugh, who has lately been registered at the Trenton House, is supposed to have been the telegraph operator. He is from Philadelphia and is among those held in $200 bail.

James Ryan, 1342 Ellsworth street, and Carlin Closser, 13 Butterworth street, Philadelphia, are supposed to be financially interested and their bail was raised from $200 to $500.

Captain Cleary, accompanied by Edward Walton, lineman for the police department, yesterday traced the telegraph wires. The wire from the office in the Forst-Richey building went into the Postal Telegraph Company across the street. A direct wire connected Reister's hall with the downtown office and another wire led to the driving park, where it was fastened to a pole of the Interstate Telephone Company.

The room in the Forst-Richey building is supposed to have been the headquarters of the system. Sheets were found which indicated that play had already been conducted there.

KING'S DAUGHTERS CELEBRATE

Faith Chapel Circle Reviews Its First Year's Work.

Interesting exercises marked the first anniversary meeting of the King's Daughters' Circle at Faith chapel, last night. Miss Rafferty, of the borough, who is identified with the work throughout the State, made an address, telling of this work and offering words of encouragement. Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of the chapel, also spoke, congratulating the circle upon the completion of its first year and hoping for greater things the coming year.

An informal programme of music, including piano duetts by Miss Helen Jeter and Miss Lottie May Conger, was followed with a social time and serving of refreshments. A silver offering was received for the work.

"CHIEF TYLER," HE FORGETS.

"By George, I Didn't Vote For Municipal Ownership."

By a peculiar shift of fate, Councilman William Tyler failed to vote for his pet scheme, the water question, yesterday. He entered a booth in his voting district, the First of the Third ward, and after a moment of preparation, stepped out with the air of a man who had carefully studied the machine and had voted just right.

"Well," said a friend after the bell rang and Tyler left the booth, "I suppose you put in a vote for the water?"

"By George, no I didn't," said Mr. Tyler, with what was almost a look of agony, "I clean forgot."

Hearst Says Fraud.

Max F. Ihmsen, campaign manager for Mr. Hearst, the defeated mayoralty candidate of the Municipal Ownership League in New York, issued this statement last night: "We claim the election of Hearst by 40,000 plurality in spite of Tammany Hall thuggery and fraud. The Law Committee of the Municipal League has secured much evidence of illegal methods by Tammany workers."

Stocks.

Crump, A.—Theory of stock speculation. 1903.

Perhaps the sanest consideration of the subject that has been written. If Mr. Crump urs, it is on the side of caution. He seeks to discourage the novice, and is wise in so doing. . . . (Though) written for English readers, its main truths and principles are applicable to the American market. S. A. Nelson in Preface.

Emery, H. C.—Speculation on the Stock and Produce Exchanges of the United States. 1896. Columbia University Studies, v. 7.

A valuable treatise on a subject about which little has been written in this country.

The above list has been examined by a prominent New York banker, and excludes such of the Library's books on the subject which would be of doubtful value to the student of banking.

DEER ATE THE ROSES.

The absence of roses in Druid Hill Park, while there are so many in Harlem and in the other city parks and squares, is frequently remarked by visitors.

"A few years ago we tried to cultivate roses," said Superintendent Boone, "but as soon as the buds would bloom the next day they would disappear. We could not understand why the roses should be stolen when other flowers were not molested. Then we watched for the robbers, and we caught them in the act. They were the deer, who will eat roses in preference to anything else. So we had to give up rose culture. The deer are also fond of peas, which we raise for fertilizing.

"I think now that we have as many as fifty deer, and they are increasing.

"Sometimes I ride through the park at night in au automobile, and when the searchlight shines in a deer's eyes they flash like balls of fire. Of nights they can be found eating the soft grass. They do not eat any other flowers but roses, as far as I have observed."—Baltimore Sun.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin McComas, former residents of this city, but now of Newark, have been visiting local friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Malli, of East Front street, left yesterday for New York, where they will make their home for the winter.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

A MODERN FAMILY.

"And she makes me," finished the man, with an aggrieved countenance, "she makes me make up my own bed every morning."

The man's wife, a professional woman with an office in town, sat by, smiling airily.

"Why not?" she asked. "I make mine, and the chidren make theirs, and the boarder has to make his."

The third party, who listened, all ears, to this good-humored revelation from a modern home, and she didn't see why not, indeed.

"But, where's your maid," she asked, conscious, as she spoke, of the foolishness of asking about that which now is, and tomorrow is not, and whose evanescence keeps us all in a state of turmoil.

"The maid is away," said the professional woman. "We are taking our meals out. When we are home we each one of us wait on ourselves."

"You bet we do," muttered the man, under his breath.

"You see," went on the lady, who is pretty and charming and clever, and can therefore do some things which everybody can't, "my office work has to be done, just the same as his. I can't let domestic friction interfere with my profession, any more than he can. I shouldn't get on at all, if every time the maid left or things went wrong at home I fell to and waited on the family hand and fott. Of course," she went on serenely, "that is what they expect. Oh, yes, you do, my dear. You're nice about it, but you still are hampered with old-fashioned notions. You can't get rid of a little lurking idea that the whole burden of domestic care ought to fall on me and leave you exempt, just because I'm a woman and you're a man.

"I don't see it that way, and neither does he," she laughed, audaciously, "when he is in a reasonable state of mind. My business is of just as much importance to me as his is to him. Our household is just as happy as any—and a lot happier than some, the chief difference being that no one of us is a slave to the others. When the maid is there everything goes swimmingly. When she isn't, we must each depend on ourselves, instead of expecting anyone of us to neglect our work and wait on the rest. Don't you think that's right?"

The third party said she thought it was pretty modern, but she didn't know but what it was good logic, and some more to the same effect, anxiously endeavoring, as third parties do in such cases, to agree with both husband and wife.

"But does he know how to do these things?" she inquired.

"Oh, you needn't be afraid of that," groaned the man. "She's got me well trained."

His pretty wife laughed.

"Yes, I have," she said. "And I'm training the two small boys, too. I think it's dreadful for men to grow up so hopelessly ignorant of household duties that they're wholly dependent on women for their comfort. That's why so many women are mere drudges, with no time to cultivate themselves. It's time all that was changed."

And she nodded her head sagely, while the third party mused inwardly at the spectacle of that father and his two small sons carefully making up their beds every morning.

But none of them look unhappy. Really, they're as jolly and affectionate as families can well be.

And the third party was forced to conclude that it might be funny, but in the long run the proceeding was quite logical and sensible.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

CONCERNING CLOTHES.

More time, money and attention is wasted on clothes than on any other one thing in the world.

The man who has nothing whatever in his head is never satisfied unless he puts everything obtainable on his body.

Women are worse still. Clothes to them are far more than mere clothes. Dress serves as their topic of conversation , their reason for sacrifice, their object in life.

There are two extremes in the matter of apparel. The first is wearing no clothes; the second is wearing too many. Whoever adopts the one is known as a savage; chivalry forbids the classification of the other.

What is your own opinion of the person who drills holes in her ears in order to suspend pebbles from the wounds? Is that woman civilized who wears a dead bird on her head, the skin of a dead animal about her throat, and pieces of beaten metal around her fingers?

The man who dresses perfectly can have very little time left for other things. I know a young fellow who is an absolute authority on propriety in garb. His only difficulty is that he isn't able to earn enough money to put his theories into praictice.

People with brains are notorious for their carelessness in dressing. George Bernard Shaw always wears a flannel shirt. It has occurred to him that starch is simply a particularly unclean mud, utterly unfit for being applied to linen.

Neither sex feels that comfort is a desideratum in attire. The woman who would scream at sight of a straight-jacket voluntarily encloses herself in a corset. The man who considers the pillory a relic of barbarism dons a collar three inches high because his acquaintances do the same thing.

There is nothing sillier in the world than evening dress. A man puts on a waistcoat with a hole in it to prove that he is a gentleman, while his wife reveals a third of her person in order to establish the fact of her being a gentlewoman.

Theree are two good reasons for clothes—prurient-mindedness and cold weather. Neither of these reasons makes necessary tailors, modistes, and changes of style. What is your comment on mental conditions which make possible in America the publication of thirty-one magazines devoted to fashions and of only nine devoted to literature?

The mania for frippery cannot be excused on the ground of its beauty. When a sculptor wishes to design an attractive statue he does not elect to reproduce a figure in trousers and a frock coat; he copies the Greek costume, which consisted principally of a neatly-draped sheet.

Women know that the styles change simply in order that dressmakers may earn a livelihood. They would not patronize a doctor who created disease in order to cure it, yet they spend whatever they can obtain on apparel. Love of dress has caused more misery than yellow fever.

Clothes are a matter of absolutely no importance. Whoever would judge a fellow by his garb would judge whiskey by the hogshead. That man who is comfortable, clean and decent is well-dressed. The road to hell is paved with satin, and it's mighty slippery material.—Channing Pollock in The Show.

GOOD BREEDING.

Charm of manner may be an acquirement as well as an endowment. Manner is much more subtle than manner. Manners may take on a fine polish, but manner is the unconscious expression of the inner self, of the personalitk which, when revealing a lovely soul, is the most commanding and persuasive force that one can exert.

A loud laugh, an over-vivacious manner, betrays a lack of breeding. Copy the stillness of form, the quiet poise, which is the great charm of English women, while a vivacity somewhat under restraint adds that which is winning and piquant in the manner of our own countrywomen.

In sitting, place one foot slightly in advance of the other as a French woman always does. There will then be no effort needed to rise properly—it is done without strain on any one set of muscles, and is natural, easy and graceful.

When one has spent a day or more in visiting at a friend's house, ordinary courtesy demands that, on one's return home a note shall be written promptly to the hostess thanking her for her pleasant hospitality.

A gentleman does not make a girl conspicuous by over-attention, nor shun her when he is thrown into her society simply because she does not attract him.

HINTS.

Don't put cost before cut. Corded silk won't cover a poor fit.

It is not so much the hat itself as the angle at which it is worn and the coiffure which it adorns that count.

No woman who once tries the expedient of making a gown with two waits will ever abandon the practice.

Grossgrain belting ribbon is recommended by a home dressmaker as a foundation for collars. She says it will not break or wrinkle.

When new evening gowns are few and far between nothing is so useful as either black or white, which by change of flowers or trimming may be altered out of all knowledge.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

"Yes, sir, and John Gibbon commands that brigade now, they say. I've known him for years. To think of his being there—and he a Tar Heel!" And here his kindling eyes turn to where Trimble's men are stretched upon the turf—North Carolina closed on Alabama.

"Coming!" "They're coming!" "See!" are the excited whispers, and young officers spring forward and peer over the low crest in front. Poague, that year-old, yet veteran, gunner, has flipped a hand to his bugler, and low and muffled "Attention!" is sounded. Low and muffled, it is repeated still more faintly farther off to the east, where the horses of Wooding and Carpenter are grazing on the scanty turf, and drivers and cannoneers spring to their posts.

But Old Jack gives no sign. He is waiting and watching. He is there in saddle at the edge of the trees, indistinguishable in the gathering gloom. He waits until the leading brigade of the long column is clear of the eastward of the two groves. He lets it go until it drops into the low ground about Groveton, then nods to Ewell and—the ball begins. Out on a sudden from the left of the massed lines, Poague's lean horses and gaunt, sinewy gunners spring to their work. Six black-muzzled barkers are whirled round in battery. One—two—three—quick bellowing, with vengeful spit of flame and sulphur smoke, the nearest battery hurls its screaming challenge across the field, and in spite and fury the black shells burst in whistling hail over the startled heads of the second brigade. Out beyond the first battery trot Wooding and Carpenter, forming "action front' on the slope a little to the northwest of Groveton, and so three batteries are suddenly hurling their swift fire upon the now halted column. "Now see 'em take to cover!" shout the seasoned ones by the gunside, as the left half battery echoes the right, and all the front of Starke's brigade is now covered by leaping guns, bellowing in chorus, the men, leaping in and out to reload, dimly seen through the billowing battery smoke, and still, screaming and shrieking the shells sail high across the rolling earth sea. "See 'em take to cover," indeed! Well might they do so, for just beyond the pike the woods lie thick and unbroken, but, sudden as the shot, each regiment has "fronted" to its left. The steel ramrods of the foremost are seen flashing in air. The shrill voice of Old Graybeard, spurring back to his colors, has yelled the order to load at will, and not until they're bitten and poured and rammed and capped does he follow that with "Lie down!" The right of their line is flat on its belly at the edge of the field, while sparring, lashing and bounding, cannoneers racing alongside like mad, a well-handled battery—Gibbon's own, as Poague and Ewell more than suspect—the beloved of the brigade out on the field, comes "front into line" at a breakneck pace, whirls without halting its bronze beauties about, and in another moment the loud-ringing "Napoleons" are out-bellowing the twelve batteries blazing there northwest of Groveton, sweeping their sections with "spherical case." Five, ten, fifteen minutes the duel of death goes on. Gibbon's gunners are all regulars, lords of their trade, and old Ewell sees it and knows it. "Limber up, Poague! Back all of you! They are too heavy for our guns!" is the order, and Paul Ladue spurs to carry it. Out of the way, gentlemen gunners! It's our time now, goes the word from Starke's eager ranks, and so on down the long line. Into their saddles leap the field, staff and commanders. The sun has gone down; the dusk is at hand; the night must not come until that stubborn brigade has been swept from the earth. Who shall do it, Ewell or Taliaferro?

From the westward now, from the far right flank, a daring battery whips out on the field and unlimbers where its guns can enfilade Gibbon's triumphant boomers, and young Taliaferro's little brigade, till now held in rear, goes striding off behind its fellows, and so on to the extreme right as though in support. And still it is a battle of guns and gunners, for Jackson holds his hounds in leash, "down charged" at heel, crouched at the edge of the woods.

And then comes the surprise of the day, the event of the hour, the marvel of the campaign. Even as Ewell and Taliaferro are deciding that the moment has come for attack, lo! to the amaze of the men of the Stonewall brigade, still the extreme right of the line, there is a glint of steel in the opposite grove and a dark column bursts from the depths of the wood. Nimbly a swarm of skirmishers leap from their covert and come dancing out over the sward. Straight for the guns drives the daring blue line, backed by eight solid companies, closed on the colors and marching abreast. Fancy the canary defying the cat! Fancy the terrier boarding the tiger! Fancy the lamb assailing the butcher, and you have the sensation that thrills the waiting divisions as a grizzled Georgia colonel slaps down his field-glass and turns to his men with delight in his eye and five words on his tongue: "The Black Hats—by Goad!"

CHAPTER XVII.

HOW THE BRIGADE WINS ITS NAME.

Over at the southwest, half way to that second grove in the shelter of which the rearmost brigade has halted, stand that little orchard and nearby farm-house, a barn or two, with some fences and a decrepit wall of jagged rocks. Half way to this one peaceful spot, to the right front of these crouching, staring, incredulous lads of the "Stonewall," the threatened guns are thundering, the gray cannoneers leaning in and out through the billowing clouds of sulphur smoke. Half way toward that eastward grove, which conceals most of the second in column of the blue brigades, this solitary battalion in the feathered black hats and the wake of its skirmishers, is jauntily proceeding to show its comrades back on the pike how Bull Run veterans take a battery. Half way between the two groves, halted in the road and watching the scene are Doubleday's three battalions, all three not as strong as a fair-sized regiment. Gibbon, chief of the second brigade, has led the Black Hats through the wood, then, halting at the edge has bid them go in, their swathy little colonel waving his hand in glad acceptance of the trust—the last salute of his soldier life. Almost all of the blue division can be seen from the north by the men of the south: almost nothing of the gray division can be seen from the south by the men of the north. Gazing through their binoculars, the union commander and staff note not a sign of the foe, save these venturesome batteries, the one here directly to the north, the others slowly trotting off to the northeast beyond the range of Gibbon's guns. Yet there are a few mounted officers or orderlies spurring swiftly along that far-away skirt of woods, and one of these horsemen carries the order from Taliaferro, chief of division, to Taliaferro, chief of brigade, to move into line on the right of Baylor—the "Stonewall." Others are darting from Old Jack to Ewell and Taliaferro, both, with the word to pitch in.

And one of these riders, galloping down the line, is little Ladue, brought face to face, as he dreamed, here on the field of battle with the men he had known as a lad in the west, and though his heart is throbbing hard, his dark eyes are burning with excitement. With laughing confidence, the men of the "Stonewall" spring to their feet, the little red battle flags are lifted on high, and forward goes the brigade, sweeping in three slender lines to the low crest in front, as their far-forward skirmishers leap from the grass and volley their challenge at the coming foe. Then Georgia and Louisana and the men at the guns hold their breath and watch to see Virginia send those impudent Yanks walking back to the woods, or else——

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C. W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

THE BARON'S SCHEME.

"Did you ever hear about Baron von Schroder's coach dog that licked all of the fighting bull terriers in the neighborhood of Harrison street?" asked a well known clubman. "It happened a few years back. The Baron used to drive out from the family mansion on Harrison street on pleasant afternoons with a spotted coach dog trailing behind his very proper equippage. The sight of that coach dog was the torment of a butcher who lived in the neighborhood and who was quite a dog fancier, and every time the Baron's carriage rolled by the butcher would turn loose one of his fighting bull pups to chew a mouthful out of the coach dog. It was very annoying. Finally, however, the Baron hit upon a scheme for revenge. He looked around and got hold of a bulldog that could lick anything that walked on four legs. With the aid of a pot of paint he decorated the bulldog until he bore a close resemblance to a coach dog, and then sallied forth for his afternoon drive with the spotted fighter in tow. That new coach dog chewed up three of the butcher's prize fighters on three succeeding afternoons, and the Baron's coach dog was not molested after that."—San Francisco Chronicle.

MEXICO.

"Mexico is a young man's country, if the young man has money," said P. O. Saunders, of the City of Mexico, who was at the Coates House yesterday. "It is teeming with mineral wealth and any young man with money can do well there. I have been in the City of Mexico ten years.

"Previously I was a district judge in Texas. I can say that the law of the higher courts is cleaner and quicker than ours. 'Case law' and common law are of more importance there than statute law. But a man can get justice, and the trivial appeal we tolerate are unheard of in Mexico.

"The city is now quite modern. There is an 'American suburb' of about 30,000 people and the homes built are stately and beautiful. They know how to enjoy life, too. Warehouses close at noon every day and do not reopen until 3. Then they go on until 7. It sounds sluggish, but I can tell you that those people get through as much work as any. But we never do business there 'on honor.' Verbal contracts are unknown. Everything is written."—Kansas City Star.

MAYOR SMALLEY HAPPY

Feels the Result of the Election Is a Personal Vindication.

HIS PITHY COMMENT

"North Plainfield Redeemed," He Says—Citizen Leaders Unwilling to Say How the Mayor's Victory Strikes Them.

Mayor Smalley and the men who helped him conduct the campaign were naturally jubilant when the vote was made known, and they made no attempt to conceal their delight. The Mayor and his record had been made the one object of attack by the Citizens, and he frankly regarded the outcome of the contest as a personal tribute and a vindication of the charges made against him.

He beamed happily at a Daily Press reporter from his place in the carriage as the parade started off.

"What have I got to say about it?" he replied to the usual query. "Simply this: That North Plainfield is redeemed—redeemed from the uncleanness and indecency into which Honeyman and his followers have sought to plunge her. I have felt certain all the time that the methods those people have been pursuing could have but this one result. I have been daring them to meet me in the open all through this campaign, and today, when against their will, they were compelled to meet me on even terms, the result has been as I always said it must be."

"How does it strike you, Senator?" Mr. Reed was asked.

"The result is a victory of the intelligent and decent voters over Honeymanism and all that it means," was the reply.

D. J. Carney, the Democratic leader of the revolt against Conroy's nomination and fusion, wore an I-told-you-so expression.

"There is nothing of a defeat for the Democracy of North Plainfield in this," he said. "I told them what would happen when they talked of taking this man Conroy up. With Samuel Townsend in Conroy's place we could have won out hands down."

Honeyman and Conroy left the scene of excitement early, and the other Cit leaders were diffident about shaping remarks for publication on the spur of the moment. Both S. S. Swackhamer and Walter Linbarger said they might have something to say in the morning, but they couldn't really think of anything they wanted to put into print just at the present time.

"This is no new experience for me," said Linbarger with a courageous effort to appear sprightly. "Defeat is an old acquaintance of mine. I really wouldn't know how to take a victory."

Guild in Massachusetts.

Boston, Nov. 8.—The Globe, a Democratic paper, says—"Curtis Guild, Republican, has been elected Governor. His plurality will probably be not far from 35,000, or about the same as that which was given to Governor Douglas, Democrat, last year. For Lieutenant Governor all returns indicate that Whitney, Democrat, ran ahead of Bartlett, Democratic candidate for Governor, and Draper, Republican, behind Guild."

S. P. T. W. Elated.

"All I can say is that I am more than pleased," was the way S. P. T. Wilbur, freeholder-elect, expressed himself to a Daily Press representative this morning. "It was certainly a corking election, wasn't it?"

PANDEMONIUM REIGNS AFTER SMALLEY TRIUMPH

WITH BRASS BAND, FRIENDS OF SMALLEY MARCH BEHIND HIM.

With machines in both districts, the result of the North Plainfield election was known almost as soon as the polls closed at seven o'clock. When the fact that Smalley had swept the Citizens from their feet was sent through the crowds about the polling places, the supporters of the Mayor let themselves loose.

Yells filled the air, and Somerset street boiled over with the noise and confusion of the jubilant Republicans. Red fire found itself in the hands of a hundred men as if by magic and the glare lit up the street. Prearranged plans for a parade were put into effect immediately.

Eight big trucks and an open barouche were rushed to the street and a triumphal procession took form within fifteen minutes after the polls closed. Mayor Smalley, Charles A. Reed, E. P. T. Smith and Clifford W. McGee, the councilman candidates, and a half a dozen of their friends piled into the carriage, which took the head of the line. Men and boys climbed into the trucks, filling them to the available inch of space, and a cheering crowd that could find no place on wheels fell in line behind the improvised carryalls. Armed with red fire and burning brooms the paraders started off.

They cheered their way through every section and corner of the borough, the Mayor, waving somebody else's silk hat, standing upright in the carriage to acknowledge the cheers and waving of hands that greeted him everywhere. A little while after the parade started Knowles' brass band, of New Brunswick, ordered to the scene in a hurry, took the head of the line and took some of the strain of noise-making off the cheering host.

The line of march was laid by A. V. D. Honeyman's house, and the Cit leader, if he was at home, got the benefit of a full grown and well developed serenade. To add to the effect of its greeting the crowd piled a big mass of leaves in front of the house and set fire to it. It burned spitefully and sent a lot of ill-smelling smoke toward the house.

After parading all about the borough the celebrators came over into the city. They let themselves out in a brotherly greeting before the city clerk's office on North avenue, where a group of Republican leaders was receiving the results.

CHAIRMAN SMITH HAPPY.

Republican County Head Jubilant Over the Success.

"Very gratifying indeed," said Frank H. Smith, chairman of the Union County Republican Committee, to a reporter for The Daily Press at 4 o'clock this morning. "It was the largest majority ever given in the county in any off year. In all my time in politics I never saw it so hard to get the vote out and the active workers hustled as hard as possible.

"All the county committeemen," continued Mr. Smith, "gave me the best support and worked to the limit to get out the vote. I want to take this opportunity to thank all loyal party men who gave their time for the success of the ticket. It shows that all that is necessary for the Republican party to do in this county is to name proper men and stand for right issues and the people will elect them."

SURVIVES HUSBAND'S SHOTS.

Washington Woman Says She Cannot Explain the Attack.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Mrs. Washington J. Quiggle, wife of the secretary of Thomas F. Welsh, who was shot by her husband last night, is somewhat improved today, and the surgeons at the Emergency Hospital express the opinion that she has an even chance for recovery.

She insists that she knows of no reason why her husband should have killed himself or attempted to kill her.

COLBY WINS OVER "BOSSES."

Everett Colby, the "anti-boss" Republican candidate for State Senator in Essex county, wins by not less than 15,000 in the county and his ticket goes through with him.

Ohio Goes Democratic.

The Democrats have swept Ohio, and "Boss" Cox was badly defeated. He declares that he will quit politics. A Democratic Mayor has been elected in Cincinnati.

CINCH FOR G. O. P. HERE

thoroughly demonstrated. It was 7:55 o'clock when Clerk MacMurray received the first returns from the First district of the Fourth ward, and it was soon afterwards that the tally sheets from the First districts of the other three wards were filed. The wards using the old method of counting ballots came straggling in up to 2:30 this morning, the Third district of the Fourth ward, being the last to make returns.

COONEY MAY NOT PLAY.

Injuries Likely to Keep Him Out of Yale Game.

Princeton, Nov. 8.—While the Tigers are putting every effort forward to send out a strong eleven against Cornell they are worried over the coming contest with Yale. It is doubtful if Capt. Cooney will have recovered sufficiently from his injuries to go in the great annual game, and it is certain that he will not play against Cornell. The coaching staff has been joined by Crowdis, the big guard of 1888-89. He will devote his attention to the center trio.

J. W. MURRAY, JR., PLEASED.

"I am well pleased by the way things went," said John W. Murray, Jr., the successful contestant for the tax collectorship, to a reporter for The Daily Press at 3 o'clock this morning. "I shall endeavor to do my full duty and at the same time endeavor to please all the people in the discharge of the duties of my office," he added.

"Union county's vote is certainly pleasing to me as a life-long worker in the ranks of Republicanism. Ackerman got a fine majority and so did all the rest on the ticket."

Carney on Childs' Defeat.

David J. Carney, county committeeman in Somerset, said this morning:

"The pitiful plight of the Democratic end of the Citizens' movement found itself in after the votes were counted in North Plainfield was distressing. Messrs. Swackhamer, VanWinkle, Linbarger, Kline, Conroy and the others who led the movement did not have the foresight to see where the result would end. Mismanaged and misguided, they could not see that they were helping along the candidacy of Col. Frelinghuysen as can easily be seen by the result of yesterday's election in North Plainfield. The large majority accorded Col. Frelinghuysen in the borough is directly attributed by many Democrats of North Plainfield to S. S. Swackhamer, W. J. Conroy, Linbarger, Kline, Case, Bodine, VanWinkle and the other amateur politicians who could not see the snare set for them by the disgruntled Republicans."

M'CLELLAN HAD NO DOUBT.

"I never doubted that I would be re-elected. I was content to rest on the unerring judgment of the American people, which is not to be swayed by false pretense. My two years of administration was sufficient guarantee to the people that I would keep my promise. They believed in me and have chosen me as their chief executive again.

"As I predicted early in the campaign, attempts to divert the public mind from the real issue confronting the people failed.

"GEORGE B. M'CLELLAN."

WHAT ACKERMAN SAYS.

To a representative of The Daily Press, Ernest R. Ackerman, the victorious candidate for State Senator in Union county said this morning:

"From what I have learned I believe I have received about 2,400 majority. It was a clean campaign, no mud slinging, and it was waged solely on the issues involved. The Republican voters gave me good support and with the co-operation of the Democrats I received a splendid majority."

Fanwood Township Landslide.

The Republican ticket in Fanwood Township was carried yesterday by the biggest landslide the ticket has had in years. Out of a total registry of 338 only 245 votes were cast. The Republican ticket received 161, Democratic 78, a straight majority of 83. E. R. Ackerman ran ahead of his ticket, as well as William H. Lawrence, the former receiving a majority over Nugent of 102, while Lawrence's majority over Woodruff was 148. The Assembly candidate ran with the ticket, and went through with 82 majority; the same with the coroner. John Y. Hatfield, tax collector, was the only Democrat elected on the local ticket. He had no opposition.

SMALLEY IS TRIUMPHANT

rush every challenged voter to Somerville before Judge Schenck. They took up two, Edward Smalley, a nephew of the Mayor, and Charles Starks, a negro. Judge Schenck promptly decided in Smalley's favor and issued a certificate compelling the election officers to accept his ballot. A. V. D. Honeyman apologized to the young man after the decision. Starks was denied a vote.

There was an unusually heavy morning vote. Up to 1 o'clock there were 412 ballots registered in the First district, and 377 in the Second. A total of 628 votes was cast in the First, and 653 in the Second. Last year 617 votes were cast in the Second and less than 600 in the First.

In the afternoon both parties sent carriages to all quarters of the borough after procrastinating voters. The leaders of both forces were active about the polling places and their headquarters all day. Smalley, Reed, Honeyman, Swackhamer, Linbarger and Conroy were very much in evidence.

As the balloting went on the campaign generals, checking their canvass books, saw the shadow of the coming event lengthen. Toward 6 o'clock the Smalley men were confident of victory and predicting majorities ranging from 175 to 300. The Citizens were claiming victory, but not with any degree of assurance. At 6:30 o'clock former Senator Reed told his friends that it was all over but the shouting. He staked his reputation as a reader of political signs on the prediction that Smalley would get 250 majority, and the result vindicated his judgment.

HOTEL CLERK'S SUPERSTITION.

There is a new chief clerk at the Caswell—Mr. H. G. Koehler, formerly at the Regent, in Washington. He has had eight years of experience behind the desk. While we were talking yesterday a guest, looking for the blotter, raised one lid of the register and nearly closed it.

"Hold on!" nervously whispered Mr. Koehler. "Don't close that, old man. It's the worst kind of bad luck. Now, I'm not superstitious, but I'd sell any stock in a hotel if I saw the register closed night or day before it had been filled with names. I know actually of one case in Ocean City where a register was carelessly closed by a guest and the next day the house caught fire and nearly went up. It was saved only by the hottest kind of work with the hose. I don't mean to say that the house got disgusted and wanted to quit just because the register was closed, but I do mean that as long as I've been in the business I've my first man to meet behind the desk who does not tremble when a guest shows any symptoms of a closing-the-book fever."—Baltimore News.

Fusion Won in Camden.

When the polls closed in Camden the leaders of the Democrats and the Legal Voters' League, who fused on city and county offices, issued a statement that Joseph E. Mowrey had carried the city by a safe majority. The other candidates on the reform ticket, the statement says, have a fair chance for victory.

LITERARY NOTES.

Success Magazine for November devotes some space to a historical and analytical study of graft. In "Just Plain 'Graft'" Hosmer Whitfield goes back to the times of the Pharaohs to find the earliest recorded symptoms of what has today become a malignant cancer in political and business life, and shows that graft has been the cause of all our wars and has killed more men than ever died from foreign bullets. No part of our public or private life, says Mr. Whitfield, is free from this curse, which extends into the homes in the shape of trust-made adulterated foods, and even penetrates churches and charitable institutions. As to whether this disease is curable, the indications seem to show that there is little prospect of relief until the happy period of the millenium, when the strong will cease to prey upon the weak.

Barney Oldfield, the famous professional automobile racer, has crashed into the race track fence no less than seven times, and owes his escape from death to marvelous good luck. Only recently Earl Kiser, famous in the bicycle days, lost a leg as the result of an accident while driving the old Winton Bullet in a track competition, and other similar accidents has made the season of 1905 memorable in the annals of automobile track racing. The last severe accident seems to have brought matters to a head, for the shocking injuries sustained by Webb Jay at a recent race meet near Buffalo made it clear that track racing must cease until such a time as track owners will permit the tracks to be properly oiled, thus preventing the raising of huge dust clouds which make it impossible for drivers to see where they are going.—Willard Nixon, in Recreation for October.

The November Atlantic is a notable number, both in the importance and in the interest of its papers. Henry Holt, the veteran publisher, contributes a paper upon The Commercialization of Literature that is the most sincere and authoritative word that has yet been spoken upon this ubject. K. Asakawa, Professor of Oriental History in Dartmouth College, has a paper upon the development that is going on in Korea and Manchuria following the declaration of peace. Professor Robert DeCourcy Ward contributes an article upon Immigration in the South which is sure to attract attention. W. H. Allen, late special agent of the census, writes upon The Manufacture of Statistics, and makes a startling disclosure of the fallaciousness of certain of the industrial statistics which have been compiled from the last census. Lucy M. Salmon reviews the recent progress in the study of domestic science. F. W. Coburn has an uncommonly interesting paper on the recent surprising telephone development in the United States.

In the American Monthly Review of Reviews for November, the most prominent topics of discussion are,—the independent tendency in American politics, as illustrated in Mr. Jerome's fight for re-election in New York and in other local campaigns in various parts of the country; the question of insurance management; the meeting of Russia's first parliament, the Duma, and the method of its election; the lessons in sanitation taught us by Japan's recent war experience; the movement for church federation in America and England; the contribution made by Jews to our national life (apropos of the two-hundred-and-fiftieth anniversary of the landing of the first Jews in America); the present condition of rural Ireland, and the workings of the new land law; and the provision for sports and games in the park playgrounds of our great cities.

How Men Boast.

"Speaking of boastfulness born of pride in home," says Hamilton W. Mabie, "I was once in a smoking compartment with a man from New York, another from Chicago, and a third from New Jersey.

"The New Yorker was boasting of the Empire State Express, which he said went so fast that the telegraph poles slipped past seeming as close together as the teeth in a fine comb.

"'That's nothing,' said the man from Chicago. 'There is a train from my city to Milwaukee. Nothing like it. I started to cross a bridge on the road and heard the train coming. Having great presence of mind, I made a leap in the air and the train was gone when I came down!'

"'That's a fast train,' said the New Jersey citizen. 'The Jersey Central flyer is equally fast, but makes better time because it starts fast. My wife was on the platform to bid me good-bye in Jersey City. I opened the window to kiss her, and by the good name of the land of mosquitoes, I kissed a strange woman standing on the platform at Newark!'"

Rev. Dr. Reed to Speak.

Rev. Dr. George E. Reed, president of Dickinson College, will address the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Y. M. C. A. orchestra will render special music and will accompany the singing.

Miss Etta Raybert, of North avenue, soprano soloist, who recently sang in one of the churches at Whitehouse, Hunterdon county, created such a favorable impression that she has been engaged to sing at a series of special evangelistic services to be held at Whitehouse.

LOCAL MAN IN THE CAST

Walter Sherwin Plays "Lead" in Production of "The Life That Kills."

HIS STAGE CAREER

Has Had Wide Experience and Old Men in the Business Predict for Him a Brilliant Future.

When Walter Fessler's production of "The Life That Kills" is presented at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night it will afford local playgoers their first opportunity of seeing at home a Plainfield young man who has adopted the stage as his profession, display his histrionic ability. He is Walter Sherwin, son of Horace Sherwin, of Washington street, now in his sixth season as an actor, and with every prospect of becoming one of the best "leads" in the business. In "The Life That Kills" he heads the cast and interprets an important role with an artistic touch that has won him praise throughout the Eastern States. There is no doubt but what he will be greeted by a large audience of friends, and the fact that he is in his native city will spur him on to greater effort.

Though still a youth in years, Mr. Sherwin has had a wide and varied experience before the footlights. An actor generally has a preference as to roles, but to become successful he must be able to depict tragedy as well as comedy, and the young Plainfielder has had his share of both. The first part he ever undertook was as "Admiral Farragut" in William Howarth's well known drama, "The Ensign," on the stage of Jacob's theatre, Elizabeth, January 1, 1899, with the Burrill Stock Compnay. He remained with this organization all that season, playing small parts in "A Flag of Truce," "Michael Strogoff," and other popular dramas. The following summer he played in stock at Hamilton, Ont., with the well known dramatic star, Miss Laura Hulbert, a great favorite with Plainfielders in the old Music Hall days. He was assigned good parts in her famous portrayals of "Nancy Sykes" in "Oliver Twist," "Peg Woffington," "Leah, the Forsaken," "Sappho," "Nell Gwynne," "Felicia," "Lucretia Borgia," "Macbeth" and "Camille."

He joined the Pittsburg Stock, under the stage direction of Frank G. Campbell, who did much to aid his stage education. With this company he appeared in a great number of standard plays. His best parts were as "Cardinal Richlieu" in "The Three Musketeers," "Inasimodo" in Victor Hugo's "Notre Dame," and "Pierre" in "The Two Orphans." The following season he played with great success "Surly Jim" in William Calder's scenic melodrama, "Saved from the Sea." The character is a maniac, and in this difficult role Mr. Sherwin won pronounced recognition from scores of critics. Two seasons ago he portrayed "Starlight," an old Indian chief, in Rowland & Clifford's "Over Niagara Falls," in all the principal cities east of the Mississippi. When the company appeared at Elizabeth he was seen by many Plainfielders, who were enthusiastic over his work.

The following summer he was again with Miss Hulbert in a legitimate repertoier of "Pygmaleon and Galatea," "Medea," "Mary Stuart," "The Bells" and "Dr. Jeykl and Mr. Hyde." Last season he was with the distinguished tragedian, "Porter J. White, in his magnificent production of "Faust," playing "Valentine." The past summer was the first time he rested since he began "treading the boards," and he began the present season greatly benefited. His work in "The Life That Kills" has been pleasing to Mr. Fessler and others in the profession, and they predict that he will yet make his mark in the theatrical world as a legitimate actor.

Domestic Missions Conference.

The twenty-second anniversary meeting of the Women's Executive Committee, Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed church, was held yesterday in Dr. Kittredge's Madison Avenue Reformed church, New York. There was an exceptionally strong programme, helpful and interesting to all. Those in attendance from the Ladies' Christian Work Society, Trinity Reformed church, were Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Mrs. Winfield Schomp, Mrs. William A. Woodruff, Mrs. A. L. Force and Miss Lillian A. Force, Mrs. H. F. Crawford, Mrs. F. S. Cutter and Mrs. F. E. Woodruff from the Young Women's Mission Band.

ORGANIZATION HAS THE COUNCIL AGAIN

CONTROL OF THAT BODY PASSES FROM INDEPENDENTS AFTER JAN. 1.

From present indications the Common Council for 1906 will be an "organization" body as was hoped for by the leaders, although the members who retire this year, William Starr Bullock, J. Stephen Higham, Clarence L. Murphy and Theodore D. Wilson are "independents."

Others who have been independent in their actions, and who will remain next year are Leslie M. Daniel, W. S. Tyler and Henry D. Hibbard.

A forecast of the Common Council for 1906 by an "organization" man indicates that the organization faction will have a majority. Those who are ranked as independents are Councilmen Leslie M. Daniel, W. S. Tyler, Daniel F. Ginna, Henry D. Hibbard and George P. Mellick, while the "organization" members are Councilmen Frank DeW. Randolph, Herbert Buxton, William L. Gloak, Francis L. Montgomery, R. I. Tolles and Charles C. Randolph.

If this forecast is correct, the "organization" will be able to control the legislation, and many measures which it hopes to have passed will go through.

James T. MacMurray will be re-elected city clerk.

But with all this, next year promises to be just as interesting and exciting in councilmanic affairs as the present one has been.

BOROUGH RECEIVES NEW CHEMICAL ENGINE

WILL BE INSTALLED AS SOON AS ACCEPTED BY COUNCIL.

The borough's new combination chemical and hose wagon was received from Elmira, N. Y., Tuesday night and yesterday was installed in the fire house. It will not be placed in commission until it has been formally accepted by the Common Council.

The new machine is similar in construction to the one in the city's West End house, with several improvements. It has a tank capacity of sixty gallons and carries 200 feet of chemical hose in addition to the regular amount of hydrant hose. It also carries ladders and a full equipment of axes, pikes and other implements. The wheels have rubber tires.

By the terms with the La France Fire Engine Company, the makers, they are to receive in exchange, as part payment, the hose wagon bought by the borough from the disbanded West End Hose Company. This will leave another hose wagon and a fire engine to complete the house's apparatus.

NEEDLEWORK GUILD ELECTION.

Mrs. J. B. Dumont Chosen Head at Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield branch of the Needlework Guild was held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday, at which time there was an exhibition of the garments made by the associates and members. There were over 200 more garments made this year than last and over 1,800 in all. These garments are distributed to the hospitals, the different chapels, the Children's Home and St. Mary's Parochial School.

During the meeting Mrs. C. E. Ryder and Mrs. J. B. Dumont spoke to the guild concerning the importance of securing more garments this year than last. These officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. J. B. Dumont; vice-presidents, Mrs. C. E. Ryder, Mrs. F. D. Warren and Miss F. Tweedy; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. J. E. Corlies.

Big Attractions Booked.

Manager Counihan is still making big bookings for the New Plainfield theatre. Today he closed for the local appearance of "Simple Simon Simple," the greatest musical comedy success Philadelphia has had in years, having run there all summer, on Thursday night, November 16; Miss Ethel Barrymore in "Sunday" on December 8, Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon on December 26, and "The Volunteer Organist" on March 21. For next season he has already secured "The Prince of Pilsen," "The College Widow" and "Mother Goose."

Union Co. Freeholders Republican.

As a result of Tuesday's election there will be one more Republican in the next Board of Freeholders of Union county, Adolph H. Gruener, of Rahway, being the successful candidate. The board is now strongly Republican.

INSPECTED SANITATION

In All 1,626 Houses Were Visited And 150 Nuisances Abated.

HEALTH BOARD WORK

Two Officers Inspected Every Dwelling from Attic to Cellar and the Work Was Thorough.

The importance of the house-to-house inspection being conducted by the Board of Health, was shown in the report on the subject presented at the November meeting Tuesday afternoon. This sanitary survey was started in 1904 and was continued last summer. Two extra inspectors were employed who gave their entire time to the work. Each house was inspected from the attic to the cellar, particular attention being paid to the plumbing, heating, ventilation and general sanitary conditions; nuisances in the yards such as vaults, cesspools and accumulation of ashes, garbage or manure.

The work was started about the middle of May and concluded about September 1. During this time, 1,626 houses were inspected, which, with the inspections made a year ago, cover a section, of the city bounded by Green brook, Clinton avenue, West Sixth street, Park avenue, Prospect, Woodland and South avenues and Berckman street.

The reports of the inspectors showed a large number of privy vaults, cesspools, chicken yards and nuisances due to garbage and forty-eight per cent. of the properties inspected contained vaults. The following shows the violations of the ordinances found during the inspections:

	1905	1904	1904-5
Number vaults found	779	481	1260
Number cesspools	482		482
Number vaults which required cleaning	309	198	507
Number cesspools which required cleaning	79	15	94
Number abandoned vaults not properly filled	164	83	247
Number abandoned cesspools not properly filled	73	1	74
Number abandoned wells not properly filled	17	1	18
Number driven wells	340		340
Number dug wells	45		45
Number defective plumbing systems	51	38	89
Number unsanitary cellars	61		61
Number chicken yards	245		245
Number privy vaults too near well	100	1	101
Number cesspools too near well	111		111
Number cesspools too near house		4	4
Number overcrowded houses	7		7
Accumulation of garbage	57	25	82
Accumulation of ashes	51		51
Accumulation of ashes and garbage	42	27	69
Accumulation of manure and garbage	14		14
	3084	884	3968

In connection with the house-to-house inspection, the following notices were served:

120 notices to connect with the sewer; 306 notices to abolish privy vaults; 106 notices to abolish cesspools.

During the year there were 85 sewer connections made; 206 vaults abolished; 62 cesspools abolished.

During 1905 there were 186 complaints of nuisances, and of these 150 cases were abated and in the remaining thirty-six cases either there was no cause for complaint or no action could be taken by the board. To secure the abatement of the 150 nuisances, sixty formal notices were served.

In the opinion of the board a vault or a cesspool on any property is a nuisance and dangerous to public health, being annoying and offensive because of the odors emanating from them and may be a direct cause of disease. The report states that such diseases as typhoid fever and cholera are known to be transmitted by flies, and the board recommends that the house-to-house inspection be continued until every vault and cesspool is abolished.

The board states that there is only one relief from the nuisances caused by the accumulation of garbage and that is, municipal collection, and it believes that complaints will con-

RUSHMORE APPEAL HEARD

C. A. Marsh Says Judge Coddington Prejudiced the Jurymen.

MR. REED'S DENIAL

Judge Coddington's Partner Tells the Court That the Facts Were Not As Presented by Mr. Marsh.

Samuel Rushmore's appeal from the verdict of $500 damages awarded to William H. Addis in the Circuit Court for injuries sustained in collision between Addis' bicycle and Rushmore's automobile was taken up by the Supreme Court at the opening of the November term in Trenton yesterday. Craig A. Marsh, Rushmore's counsel, argued for a rule granting a new trial, on the ground that new evidence had been discovered and that Judge Coddington, of Reed & Coddington, Addis' counsel, had unduly prejudiced the jury by theatrical methods

Mr. Marsh said Judge Coddington waved a bloodstained handkerchief belonging to Addis before the jury while summing up, and insisted that the action "unduly impassioned the jurymen." Mr. Marsh said further that Judge Coddington also declared all automobiles were criminals, that their crimes should be stopped, and the only way to stop them was "to touch the pocketbooks of the owners."

Judge Reed asked Mr. Marsh if Judge Coddington had made those statements to the jury. "No, sir," answered Mr. Marsh, "he was too shrewd to make those statements to the jury."

Former Senator Reed, Judge Coddington's partner, opposed the application at the afternoon session. He denied that Judge Coddington had used the blood-stained handkerchief as told by Mr. Marsh. He said Judge Coddington held Addis' bicycle while summing up, making points from that, but that Mr. Marsh handed him the handkerchief, saying, "Why don't you wave this?" Judge Coddington returned the handkerchief to Mr. Marsh.

Senator Reed declared that no new evidence had been discovered, and insisted that Rushmore was responsible for all the damage done. The court took all the papers and reserved decision.

The opening of the court was attended by a number of Plainfielders as well as all the prominent lawyers in the State. There are fifty-eight cases to be argued in the main court and ninety-eight in the branch court.

Among the cases on the calendar is that of Oakley vs. Emmons et al., in which Plainfielders are interested. W. S. Angleman is Oakley's lawyer and Isaac P. Runyon represents the other side.

BUSINESS PROPERTY TRANSFER

Modern Buildings to be Erected on East Front Street.

Dr. Albert Pittis, of East Front street, has just purchased through Albert Lederer, real estate broker, twenty feet of land from the tract adjoining his property on East Front street, and owned by W. R. Codington and F. A. Pope. The purchase was made for other parties, and it is the purpose to build on this site.

This whole tract was sold last May to Dr. Pittis, W. R. Codington and F. A. Pope by Albert Lederer. Mr. Codington and Mr. Pope have plans now for the erection of a handsome building on their portion of the East Front street tract.

Mr. Lederer has also purchased for the well-known business men, the vacant part of the Manning tract at Madison avenue and Fourth street, which adjoins that of the former Spicer & Hubbard tract, recently purchased by a local company for manufacturing purposes.

FRED VAN EPS WEDS.

Clever Banjoist Becomes a Benedict.

Announcements is made of the marriage of Fred F. VanEps, of Westervelt avenue, and Miss Louise Belcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. C. Abel, of Baldwin, L. I., which was performed on Tuesday by Rev. Dr. Green, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Cranford, at the parsonage.

Mr. VanEps is very well known her in musical circles, where he has frequently appeared in various concerts. His performances on the banjo have won flattering praise for him both here and in many large cities. Mrs. VanEps is also a talented musician, as a pianist. The couple will reside in this city.

BAD PORK SUBJECT OF BOARD'S SESSION

HEALTH OFFICERS FIND ONE INSTANCE AN ISOLATED CASE.

Although the Plainfield Board of Health has not yet received a report from the State Board of Health regarding the diseased portion of pork sent to Trenton for analysis, a report was presented on the case at the November meeting of the local Board held Tuesday afternoon.

At the time the diseased pork was found by the Board, the State Board was requested to send a man here who could make a thorough investigation of the matter. This was impossible at the time, but a careful examination was made and it was found that the pig in question had tuberculosis, and as this disease is rare in pigs and more easily transmitted to persons than by other animals, the butcher was instructed to destroy the carcass which he did.

The report states that the pig was bought from John VanNess, who has been supplying meat here for some time. His place was visited and found to be in very good sanitary condition. The pigs were all cornfed and there was no disease among them. It was reported that the diseased pig in question was purchased from a neighbor who had two pigs. One of these was taken sick and immediately slaughtered and sold to Mr. VanNess.

Through the State Board of Health the local board was enabled to have all the places supplying pork to Plainfield, inspected by Dr. Harrison, a veterinarian employed by the the State Board. He visited the farms of Edward Kinsey, Somerville; Joseph Dilts, Three Bridges; John F. Mundy, Warrenville; John VanNess, Martinville; Lewis E. Snyder, Pluckamin, and David Nevius, North Branch.

Dr. Harrison reported that in each of the above cases the hogs were all in a healthy condition. After it was learned that diseased meat was being sold here, an inspection was made of all the butcher shops in the city, special attention being given to the pork stock at that time. No diseased meat whatever was found, but the board states that many of the butcher shops were none too clean.

The Symphony Trio will give an entertainment at the Park Avenue Baptist church on Thursday night, November 16.

FR. CHADWICK ON FRIARS

Chaplain of Ill-Fated "Maine" Says That They Are Misunderstood and Maligned.

IN THE PHILIPPINES

Priest Declares American Policy There An Unfortunate One—States That Friars Are Noble and Unselfish.

Several hundred people were in the audience that heard Father Chadwick's lecture on the Spanish friars of the Philippines at Watchung Council, K. of C., last night. The lodge room was crowded to the very limit of its capacity, and a dozen interested listeners who could find no room inside heard the discourse from the anteroom. Father Chadwick's fame as the chaplain of the ill-fated battleship Maine and his eloquence, with which the members of Watchung Council and their friends were familiar, served to draw the big audience.

Father Chadwick's lecture was a most interesting one. He recounted the story of the friars' arrival in the Philippines, when the islands were in the grip of savagery, and their subsequent labors for the uplifting of the people.

The lecturer credited the friars with being the authors of all that the people of the islands have enjoyed in the way of civilization, in wealth and in advancement.

In the course of the lecture he painted the friars as the undeserving victims of an unfortunate policy on the part of the American government, and presented a most eloquent defense against the charges of cruelty, of greed and of immorality brought against them. He pictured them as unselfish, self-sacrificing heroes and martyrs, teachers, friends and fathers of the people, and earnestly deplored the circumstances that have combined to drive them from the scene of their labors.

He scoffed at the idea of generosity in connection with the $7,000,000 paid by the Government for the friar's lands. Was $7,000,000 any sort of valuation to place on three hundred years' work in bettering not only the land but the people?

Father Chadwick was restrained in his references to the Government's attitude toward the friars. He said the anti-friar policy came simply from the fact that in seeking a basis of compromise with the insurgent leaders, the Government found it could not treat with them except as repressors of the friars and of friar influence.

He closed with a passionate appeal to American Catholics to see to it that the people of the Philippines were reserved in their Catholicity, as the friars had left them. The heritage of responsibility, he said, had been left by the friars to the Americans of the faith.

Before the lecture two entertainment numbers were enjoyed. Albert Matthews sang and Miss Egany recited. Both were warmly applauded.

SOMERSET'S BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS IS REPUBLICAN

For the first time in many years, the Somerset County Board of Freeholders will have a Republican director, this year, succeeding the present official, William J. Logan, who has held this position for a long time. The change is made possible by reason of the fact that the board now consists of eleven members, instead of ten as heretofore. There are six Republican members and five Democrats.

The eleventh member chosen on Tuesday, is Peter B. Smith, of Bound Brook, who is the first representative that town has ever had in the board. He was elected by a majority of seven votes.

As yet it is not known who will succeed Mr. Logan as director.

One of the surprises was the defeat of William Logan, Democratic candidate for freeholder from Bridgewater. He has held the position for many years and has also been director of the board. His opponent, Joseph Fitzga, received 133 votes, against 54, giving the former a majority of 79.

The Board of Freeholders will now be constituted as follows:

Bedminster—David Philhower, D.
Bernards—John V. Bunn, R. *
Branchburg—Henry W. Baird, R.
Bridgewater—Joseph Fitzga, R. *
Bound Brook Borough—Peter H. Smith, R. *
Franklin—Thomas E. Gibson, D. **
Hillsborough—R. W. Hoagland, R.
Montgomery—Walter M. Vreeland, R.
North Plainfield—Wm. M. Demler, D.
North Plainfield Borough—J. Emmons, D.
Warren—Joel Codington, D.
* Newly-elected members.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Rutgers College Glee Club will hold an entertainment in Friendship Hall tonight. The club opened its season Monday night, and made a great hit. The programme is a most entertaining one. The Sunshine Society has arranged its presentation here.

Dr. Brakeley and H. S. Garretson, the Republican leaders, were surprised at the strength displayed by Mayor Wyckoff in Tuesday's election; or perhaps it would be more accurate to say that they were surprised at Frederick's weakness.

The junior and primary classes and teachers of the Piscataway Baptist church were entertained by Miss Sadie Martin at her home Monday afternoon. Games, singing and refreshments were the features.

The Democrats of Piscataway were whispering promises of a surprise in the vote before Tuesday. They certainly took part in a surprise party, but whether it was like the one they had in mind was doubtful.

The election of the new Board of Freeholders retires P. C. Staats, who has represented Dunellen on the old body for four years. Mr. Staats was an honored, capacitated, and hard-working member.

William Haelig, who was killed at his stone crusher at Chimney Rock, is survived by a widow and ten children. Mr. Haelig was well known here.

Albert Grieb, of Brooklyn, has returned home after a stay with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Grieb, of North avenue.

Union evangelistic meetings, led by Mr. Birch, will be held at the Baptist church this afternoon and tonight.

The Township Committee met in regular session yesterday. Routine business was transacted.

Charles H. Kirby is rapidly recovering his strength after a long and weakening illness.

George Voorhees has been entertaining out of town friends.

Mrs. Clement Dixon spent Election Day visiting in Raritan.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Some enthusiastic voter for the Republican ticket at Tuesday's election in his excitement voter a full fledged Plainfield ballot, another thought if one ballot counted one for his candidate two ballots would count twice as much, so put in two Republican tickets. These together with a marked ticket made three rejected ballots the ticket lost, but they were not needed in the landslide.

Tomorrow marks the opening of the local hunting season. Rabbits are reported as being quite plentiful this year and all the hunters are arranging to make an attempt to reduce the number of cottontails in this section.

The second of the series of winter dances arranged by the Suburban Club, of the borough, will be held tonight in the club's hall. The indications are the affair will be one of the most enjoyable ones the club has yet held.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Clark and family, who have been residing at Finderne, New Jersey, for the past year, are spending the winter with Mr. Clark's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark, of Front street.

A fire in some of the stoves of the Public Service Corporation cars would be a decided improvement and make travelling during the early morning hours much more comfortable for patrons of the line.

Ray Brick, who broke his ankle while playing about the school several weeks ago, is still detained at home with the fracture, as the injury was much worse than was supposed at first.

H. H. Anderson and family, who have been occupying the Kyte cottage in the borough during the summer, have returned to New York.

Mrs. A. L. Frentz was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday, to undergo an operation for the removal of a cancerous growth.

Miss Kate Munroe, of Washington street, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Mary Munroe, of Bartle avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice McGrath, of New Brunswick, are visiting friends here.

Miss Marion Porter, of New York, spent Election Day visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Porter, of West Third street.

The total cost of inspection for the three months and a half, compared with the cost for 1904, shows that it cost $796 last year and $1,626 this year. A year ago the cost per house was 10.8 cents, and 13.8 cents this year, the average cost per house being 12.3 cents.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill-health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is the statement of a Plainfield citizen who has reclaimed good health by the use of this remedy:

Richard Day, of 208 East Front street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I have given a statement which has appeared in our papers for several years. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills because I know there is no reason why they will not do for others what they did for me. I had a miserable dull pain across my back and a sort of lameness across my kidneys. Standing any length of time or walking any distance aggravated it greatly. I was never sick much and did not like to take medicine but these attacks grew worse instead of better, and reading frequently about Doan's Kidney Pills I bought a box and used it. After taking two boxes I was cured."

FAIR PRICES + EASY TERMS

These Two Features, Coupled with High-Class Pianos, Have Built at WANAMAKER'S

The Greatest PIANO BUSINESS In the World

THE fact that the purchaser can be absolutely sure that nobody can get a lower price, for cash or otherwise, and that no other store can sell an equal piano for less money—and almost always sells it for much more—has established public confidence in the Wanamaker method of selling pianos.

Then the person who wishes to pay a little at a time, while enjoying possession of the piano, pays exactly the same price as the cash purchaser—only paying a banking interest of four per cent. a year on the amount unpaid. This has again and again been proven to make a piano cost a hundred dollars or more less than other piano stores charge when they sell for easy payments.

The WANAMAKER CLUB PLAN Doesn't Add a Dollar to the Price

And the first payment required ranges from Ten Dollars cash, and the monthly instalment from Six Dollars, on the lower-priced pianos, upward; according to value.

The WANAMAKER PIANO STORE, right here in your own town, enables you to judge the splendid pianos sold by us, at your convenience. It brings the benefits of Wanamaker Methods right to you, without requiring a journey to the City.

Store open every evening. Demonstrations of the Angelus every day and evening.

RECURRENCE OF BICYCLE.

Restoration to Favor of the Handy Conveyance Seems to Be Assured.

The restoration of the bicycle to popular favor can have only good results. No other means of conveyance ever possessed such a large number of good qualities, and it seems only natural, says the New York Sun, that the manufactories should again be working at night to meet the demand. The manufacturers, even with their present extra effort, are working merely to reach a sane and reasonable demand, and it is not at all probable that such a mania for wheeling as we saw ten years ago will be repeated.

It is probable that few of these wheels are being manufactured now for use in New York. There is no place left in the life of the metropolis for the enjoyment of the bicycle. Since thousands rolled about the streets local conditions have changed. Preparations for the building of the subway helped to hasten the decline of bicycle riding as a sport in this city. Now that the streets are clear of this obstruction the volume of traffic is greatly increased. The presence of the numerous automobiles is sufficient in itself to make the recurrence of the old-time numbers impossible. There is no longer any room in the streets for so many riders. It is a misfortune for New Yorkers that they are not going to share in the convenience and healthfulness which will be a consequence of this revival of the bicycle. It is to the dwellers in small cities that the benefit of this change will go. There one realizes the extent to which the bicycle is an important feature of life. As a means of relaxation the wheel is subordinate to its practical utility as a method of getting from place to place.

OIL OF THE BAKU FIELDS.

Petroleum Production Falling Off as a Result of Disturbances in Russia.

The effect of the recent disturbances in Russia on the production of petroleum in that country is made the subject of a report to the government department of commerce and labor by United States Consul Stuart, at Batum. Mr. Stuart says that "the production of crude oil in the Baku fields in 1904 exceeded the apparent production of 1903, but there was a very great loss of crude oil through fires in September and October, 1903. In 1904 the production was also curtailed by a strike in December, which commenced on the 26th and continued until after New Year's day. Notwithstanding that the producers made great concessions (after incendiarism had destroyed 120 rigs, mostly of producing wells), it is said that the workmen since returning to their employment have not been working with anything like their former energy.

"The loss of production by the December strike, leaving out of the question flowing wells, was not less than 110,000 barrels per day for the month. As there were 289 wells completed in 1904, against 189 in 1903, the results indicate very clearly that the production can only be maintained at about the quantity necessary to cover the demand by the drilling of at least 300 wells yearly."

WARRIOR'S ODD PASTIME.

Famous British General Prefers Modeling in Clay to Anything Else.

One of the many interesting features in a recent issue of Printer's Pie, states the Dundee Advertiser, is a symposium on the "Pastimes of Popular People." Maj. Gen. R. S. Baden-Powell writes as follows:

"Apart from playing the bassoon—which I look upon as giving, par excellence, the best exercise for the intelligence and temper as well as for the minor physical organs, both inside and out—the pastime which [illegible] more than any other is that of modeling in clay. It is a nice and messy pursuit, and yet very clean. It is fascinating, and at the same time restful. For a busy man it is accommodating, because he can take it up or leave it at any moment—in his room or office, or even, as I have done, in the train. It beats golf in the number of iron or wooden tools which can be used in it, but which are none the more necessary to success.

"Personally," adds the major general, "I like it because the results of my efforts far transcend and surpass those of anybody else—in their total absence of merit."

Peculiar Life Insurance.

A curious form of life insurance is springing up in French manufacturing towns under the name of "La Fourmi" (the ant). The peculiarity is that the longer a man lives, the less he becomes entitled to. The payment of 4s a month assures the payment of £200 to the heirs of a man dying before the age of 38, the payment diminishing proportionately to £102 at 51. The idea seems to be that if a man dies young his children are likely to be in want, but that when he is 50 they will be able to earn their living.

England's Barbarity.

It is a notorious fact that the punishment of criminals known in England under the term "penal servitude" is the most barbarous in existence in western Europe.—Stockholm Svenska Dagbladet.

SOME PRETTY TALL CORN.

Farmers Require Tree Climbers to Go Up the Stalks for the Ears.

A story printed a few days ago that Missouri has corn ten feet high at this season in one section amused the Kansas farmers who read it, says the Kansas City Star. In defense of Kansas corn big stories can be found readily. Lute Newton, who owns several farms along the Neosho, northeast of town, says:

"Missouri may be able to brag on raising mules with ears ten feet long, but the fact that it has corn ten feet high is not remarkable. Kansas can give Missouri cards and spades and beat all its corn stories. Corn 14 feet high out along the Neosho is not causing any particular comment among the farmers. It is still growing. It will reach 18 feet before it matures. That is not an uncommon height for Kansas corn in favorable years."

Most of the early corn has been "laid by" and has reached the roasting ear stage. The unusually good corn year has revived the old-time corn stories of the Jack-and-the-Bean-Stalk type. The other day a farmer, after buying a new buggy and set of harness at an Emporia store, inquired if the merchant had any tree climbers in stock.

"Tree climbers?" responded the merchant. "What have you on the string, a bee tree?"

"Naw," drawled the farmer. "We fellers on the bottom this season will have to use climbers to reach the ears of the corn."

RED-TAPE IN BUTTONS.

An Instance of the Absurd Extent to Which Officialdom Goes in England.

Seriously as the British war office takes it, the height of absurdity appears to have been reached in the matter of buttons. The design is about to be changed, and already a small fortune has been spent upon designs and other incidentals, to say nothing of a year of conferences. With the question still undecided, $25,000 has already been spent, and, judging from past experiences, another year and a second appropriation will be required.

On one occasion no less than 200 conferences were held by the high officials of the department on the subject of a button which upon adoption was found to be most unsatisfactory.

The Brodrick cap, a German importation, adopted only after endless discussion, including a parliamentary debate, was discarded almost immediately with a loss of more than $500,000 to the government. At least one suicide may be directly traced to the controversy.

Even more costly has been the change in rifles, more than $1,500,000 having been wasted in the adoption and discarding of various arms upon the mere question of the proper length of the barrel.

Under such circumstances as these even the "embalmed beef" of the Spanish-American war becomes a mere trifle.

VICTIM OF TIGHT LACING.

Curious Warning on Antique Tombstone in Scotch Burial Ground.

A few miles from Annan, in the world-famed burial ground of Spring Well, celebrated in song and story in connection with the tragic death of Fair Helen, of Kirkconnel Lea, there is to be seen still in a state of good preservation a curious old tombstone, upon which is sculptured a full bust figure of a woman with a waist that any lady in search of a slim figure might well envy.

But this tombstone, writes a correspondent of the Dundee News, was not erected to encourage vanity in the feminine mind, but for the purpose of warning ladies who were inclined to indulge in tight lacing of the fate that awaited them—as the lady over whose remains this unique tombstone was erected had fallen a victim of this fashionable tightness of the waist. On another part of the stone there is a mounted figure supposed to represent a horseman hurrying to seek a doctor to relieve the sufferer.

Sinbad's Alleged Prototype.

The story of Sinbad the Sailor is believed to owe a good deal to the legend of St. Brendan, the Kerry saint whose day is May 18. According to the legend, St. Brendan sailed the ocean for seven years in search of the island that had once been Adam's Eden. During that time he regularly revisited the Island of Sheep, where the sheep are as large as oxen; the Island of Birds, that are really fallen angels, and another island which is really a big fish named Jascon trying to get his tail into his mouth. St. Brendan used to encamp on the fish on Easter Monday. He found the Eden island at last, but no one has seen it since, though it appeared on seventeenth century maps and in an eighteenth century treaty between Spain and Portugal. Probably Irish monks took this legend with them to the east in the ninth century.

Fruit Used in Fishing.

A recent writer in The National Geographical Magazine" tells of a tree growing in the Malay archipelago, the Andaman islands and Ceylon, which produces a fruit used in fishing, with results of a remarkable character. The fruit is pounded up into paste and left in bags over night, after which it is sunk at low tide in deep holes along the reefs. The fish soon begin to appear at the surface; some of them lifeless, others attempting to swim or faintly struggling, with their ventral side uppermost. In this condition the natives have no difficulty in picking them out of the water with their hands.

A FACT PROVEN.

Should Convince Even the Most Skeptical of Its Truth.

If there is the slightest doubt in the minds of any that Dandruff germs do not exist, their belief is compelled by the fact that a rabbit innoculated with the germs became bald in six weeks' time.

It must be apparent to any person therefore that the only prevention of baldness is the destruction of the germ—which act is successfully accomplished in one hundred per cent. of cases by the application of Newbro's Herpicide.

Dandruff is caused by the same germ which causes baldness and can be prevented with the same remedy—Newbro's Herpicide.

Accept no substitute. "Destroy the cause you remove the effect."

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

JAPANESE MANUFACTURERS.

Falling Off in British and German Imports Caused by Their Enterprise.

Japanese enterprise in various manufacturing industries is being felt in the Japanese markets by British and German traders, according to a report received at the Washington department of commerce and labor from Ernest L. Harris, commercial agent at Eibenstock, Germany. Mr. Harris says:

"The product of Japan's industries are gradually forcing themselves into various markets of the world where their competition is being keenly felt by English and German traders. Japanese ingenuity and industry are beginning to exert an influence to such an extent that their exports are increasing, while at the same time the markets in Japan are passing more and more into the hands of home manufacturers. This is causing a reduction of imports. It has long been thought that the Japanese were masters of the art of imitation, but it is now generally admitted the world over that they also possess powers of great initiative.

"A recent report of the British consul at Kobe records the fact that the import of cotton yarns shows a big decrease, due to the increased growth of the Japanese industry, which is gradually but surely ousting Lancashire coarse cottons from the Japanese markets. Among woolen manufacturers the outlook for imported goods is not bright. The manufacture of flannels in Osaka has improved to such an extent that imports of this article have fallen off considerably. Japanese manufacturers to-day are producing the cheapest kind of cotton underwear, socks, toilet soap and lamps. The indigo and tobacco trades are also rapidly passing into Japanese hands."

FAIR INDIAN TERRITORY.

Contrary to Common Impression It is a Fine and Productive Country.

The people of the east have very little comprehension of the conditions of things out in Indian territory. According to the popular impression it is a wilderness, sparsely settled by savages, partially civilized halfbreeds and a few white adventurers and escaped criminals. That never was the case, writes W. E. Curtis, in Chicago Record-Herald, although the territory has had more than its share of rascals and adventurers, and is not entirely without them yet. To-day, as you ride through from the Kansas to the Texas boundaries on any of the railroads, you will see very little difference from either of those states, and will not realize when you have crossed the border line. The landscape is lovely—a rolling prairie, broken by frequent timber and watered by large streams—including three of the largest tributaries of the Mississippi river. Practically all of the untimbered land is under cultivation, and you are scarcely ever out of sight of a house. The soil is as thoroughly cultivated as that of Kansas, Nebraska or Missouri, and just at this time of year, when the wheat fields are ready for the harvest, the corn is waist high and the foliage of the forest is lustrous with life and vigor. No part of the United States is more beautiful to the eye, while few sections respond so generously to the labor of the farmer.

AT THE PHOTOGRAPHER'S.

Sitter Who Needed a Little Fixing Up, But the Artist Was Equal to It.

"I have come to get my wife photographed," said the determined-looking man as he entered the studio, followed by a meek-looking woman. "You can make fools look grand, sir, can't you?"

"Certainly, sir," replied the photographer; "that is part of my business, you know."

"Well, Maria here fell out of the window last year and broke her nose. You can straighten it out, I suppose?"

"Certainly, sir."

"And you can push in Maria's ears so that she won't look so much like a rabbit?"

"Oh, I think so."

"And what about the squint in her left eye?"

"Oh, I can touch it up with Indian ink."

"And the freckles?"

"They won't appear on the picture at all."

"And will the hair be red?"

"Oh, no."

"Well, you can go ahead. Sit down there, Maria, and try to look pleasant."

Sun Dials in Many Gardens.

Since the sun-dial and hour-glass have become necessary adjuncts to the landscape garden women cannot make the clock an excuse for being late. The old contrivances cannot err unless somebody tampers with them. In many gardens of beautiful country places the sundials shine. In Woodlawn park, Saratoga, Henry Hilton's beautiful estate, which the Clarence Mackays have taken for August, there is a garden behind the house which boasts a curious sundial. Mrs. Mackay has a collection of hour-glasses, many of which have historic interest. One of her friends says they indicate her appreciation of "sand."

Suggestion Rejected.

"John, my son," said the doting father, who was about taking him into business, "what shall be the style of the new firm?"

"Well, governor," said the youth, "I don't know—but suppose we have it John H. Samplin and Father!"

The old gentleman was struck with the originality of the idea, but didn't adopt it.—Chicago Journal.

Plainfield, N. J., November 9, 1905.

Hearst had the ballots but Tammany had the boxes they were put in. Hearst got the most votes, but McClellan got elected.

That the influence of the Roosevelt administration had great weight in deciding the contests in two strongly Republican States is seen in the results in Ohio and Pennsylvania. Taft denounced his party's machine in the Buckeye State and Democrats obtained 40,000 majority. In Pennsylvania, where the reform forces had the support of Roosevelt and Root, the Democrats carried the commonwealth by over 100,000 majority. This simply means that decent Republicans can not be fooled into continuing corruption in power by bosses' cry to "sustain the national administration." Roosevelt, Root, Taft and all other honest and clean men of the party have reason to be thankful the way the elections went.

For the first time in the history of local newspaper work, an early morning edition was issued yesterday, containing complete returns from Union county as well as the entire vote in this city and in the borough. In addition to this, it told how New York, Philadelphia and other large cities, where there were bitter fights, had gone, and it gave a good report of Somerset county returns as well as those of other counties throughout the State. This feat was accomplished by The Daily Press, which was issued at [illegible] yesterday morning. Politicians of both parties as well as the interested public generally gave it credit for having the best election returns of any published anywhere in Union county yesterday.

Through the business section today thick clouds of dust produce a condition disagreeable to the shopper and costly to the merchant. There is no good reason why the nuisance should be tolerated for one moment. The only excuse given by Mr. Wilson, councilmanic street committee, for not abating the trouble is that funds allotted to that department are getting low, but he knows well enough that the Common Counsel can and would remedy the difficulty so far as that end of it is concerned. We are certain that it will do so at its next meeting, but in the meantime we want to ask whether Chairman Wilson has ever called his fellow members on the committee together since September, and why an inexperienced man should be placed over such a competent, obliging and energetic city surveyor, civil engineer and street commissioner as Andrew J. Gavett has proven himself to be?

THE FORUM.

Denied Right to Vote.

Editor, The Daily Press:

A resident of Plainfield since the sexenth day of May, 1868, for the first time last night I lost my vote. When, near closing time, I went to the polls I was asked by one of the election officials to produce my citizenship papers. I certainly did not have the little document with me; I thought my name had been in the books long enough.

No doubt the gentleman had a perfect right to do as he did. But when prominent gentlemen and politicians of both parties vouched for the veracity of my claim to citizenship, stating that they had known me to vote thirty years, I thought— But!

My papers are signed by the late H. R. Cannon. If the gentleman or his party reaps any benefit by my losing my vote, they are welcome.

NEITHER SIDE ABLE TO SCORE IN EITHER HALF.

The North Plainfield High School and Somerville High School elevens met yesterday afternoon on the Cricket Grounds, and after two very exciting fifteen minute halves neither side was able to score. While the game was a fine one, it was almost featureless. There were no long runs and not once was the ball in danger of the goal in either half. The borough school boys made their gains through the lines entirely.

For the home team Mundy and Webster, the latter playing for the first time in three weeks, did especially good work. The contest was not what one would call snappy and both teams seemed to lack a certain spirit and dash. The last time these teams met the Somerville eleven won by a score of 5 to 0, and the fact that the borough team was able to prevent their opponents' scoring yesterday, speaks well for their work. The game was witnessed by a large crowd of football enthusiasts, many rooters coming from Somerville.

The lineup and summary:

N. P. H. S.	S. H. S.
A. Van Arsdale, left end	McConnell
McClintock, left tackle	Kershaw
Ammerman, right guard	Trembath
Powlison, centre	Haberle
Fisher, left guard	Myers
Smith, right tackle	Edwards
M. Van Arsdale, right end	Brokaw
Peacock, quarterback	Hickey
Matthews, fullback	Hoagland
Webster, right half	Noll

Umpire — Brokaw. Linesmen—Burtis and Rose. Timers—McWilliams and Leo Kenney. Time of halves—15 and 15. Score—First half—N. P. H. S., 0; Somerville, 0; second half—N. P. H. S., 0; Somerville, 0; final score—N. P. H. S., 0; Somerville, 0.

PROOF NEXT TIME.

Johnson Must Stop Calling His Wife Names.

Robert Johnson, colored, was arrested last night, on complaint of his wife, who charged him with raising a rumpus at their home on East Third street, while drunk.

"He's a good provider when he's all right," said Mrs. Johnson in court this morning, "but when he's drunk he's a regular devil."

Judge Runyon told Johnson to go home and try to be good.

"That's what I want, Judge," said Mrs. Johnson. "I want him warned. He calls me all sorts of names when he's drunk, but a warning is good enough now. Next time I'm going to make him prove those names." She looked surprised when the court and the court officers laughed.

HAVEN FOR AGED PAUPER.

Seventy-year-old John Crawford Sent to the Industrial Farm.

John Crawford, seventy years old, tottered into police headquarters last night and looked amicably around. The totter came partially from age and just as much from whiskey. Officer Overbaugh put John in a cell.

He told Judge Runyon this morning that he had no home, and the magistrate sent him to the Industrial farm. Crawford has lived here for thirty years.

A Surprise Party.

In honor of the anniversary of her fortieth birthday, a surprise party was given to Mrs. Charles B. Lawson, of 833 West Sixth street, last night. The home was decorated with chrysanthemums and roses. There was an informal programme of music presented by E. J. Lawson and Miss Waddington, of Jersey City, and Miss Ethel Ball, of this city. Euchre and flinch were played. Charles E. Ball took first prize and Charles B. Lawson the booby prize. Miss Minnie Young, niece of Mrs. Lawson, arranged the party.

Tasteful composition has a large share in the production of the specimens although ink and paper have done their share, the typography has given the stamp of distinction to nearly every piece. A thorough appreciation of the suitability of certain type-faces to different kinds of printing has been the chief factor in producing this good work. Refers to Stafford, Printer.

Nov. 12: "The Dangers of Indulgence." Prov. xxiii. 29-35; Isa. v, 22-25. — A Temperance Meeting.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Appetite is an indication of need. In health it is accompanied by relish for that which nourishes. The pleasure which results from meeting the cravings of our various appetites may be given more importance than it deserves, and we may seek the pleasurable sensations rather than the condition of vigor which comes from nourishment. When this is done to any great extent, the power of relish diminishes, and more powerful things have to be used to give the same feeling of satisfaction. This always ends in a diseased condition of the body which reacts on the mind and spirits and throws all the powers of life out of proper course and ends in decay and death.

Proper satisfaction of normal appetites tends to health and happiness. Any indulgence of pleasurable sensations merely for the pleasure there is in the feeling is overstepping the danger line and is in nature vicious.

All the appetites need to be under the constant and immediate control of the best judgment. Reason must rule, and passion must be under its control. Whatever is not reasonable is dangerous. All indulgence of appetite and passion which cannot justify itself to reason must be cut off if we are to live in this (God's) world, which is ruled by One who is highest reason and justice.

The penalty for wrong may not be inflicted at once, but may be delayed indefinitely, and one may flatter himself that he has escaped the ordinary results of misdoing. But, however delayed, it is altogether inevitable, and when it comes will fall with greater disaster because of the delay in execution. Laws of nature are laws of God, and they are never broken. They are the orderly manner in which the power of God is exerted. We may misunderstand them, but we cannot evade their influence. We may go counter to our knowledge of the right and the reasonable thing, but we never in the slightest alter the laws that govern. We cannot break or suspend the law, nor change the course of the force that works, but we are broken against the unchangeable adamant of fixed fact.

Drunkenness, gluttony, licentiousness have had baleful fascination for men ever since the race began to know thirst and hunger and the instinct of sexual attraction. Thirst, hunger and love are forces which make for life and without which life is impossible in our human world of existence. Our good and pleasure in living are largely dependent upon their proper satisfaction. To stamp out any legitimate appetite is as disastrous as to give unbridled license to any and all indulgence of desire without reference to reason.

Drunkenness and not drinking is to be avoided, gluttony and not eating, lust and not love.

Danger lies in the first and every subsequent indulgence of appetite for the mere pleasure there is in the satisfaction of the desire and not for the need that is indicated by the desire. We are not necessarily to drink just because we are thirsty, nor eat because we are hungry. Perhaps there is more pressing need or the food and drink are not wholesome or another may have greater need than we.

The needs of mind and soul must always have preference above those of the physical nature. Lust must never usurp the throne of love. The highest must ever be chosen when there are impulses to different courses. The most accurate of our thinkers say that impulses to action never rise singly. When we feel desire in one direction there is always the counter suggestion, and we must balance and choose the best. The danger of indulgence is more than lies on the surface of the single case. The first wrong sets us in the path of all wrong. It is hard to turn back.

The Life Worth Living.

Each soul has its own faculty; it can help in some way to make the world more cheerful and more beautiful. This it is which makes life worth living. If we are living only for ourselves, our own amusement, luxury, advancement, life is not worth living. But if we are living as coworkers with Christ, as fellow helpers with God, as part of the noble army of martyrs who bear witness to the truth in all time, then our lives are full of interest. This gives sweetness and strength to all our days.—James Frank Cameleer.

Love Be My Stay.

Lord, be the gift of love divine
My theme today;
Touch every thought and act of mine
With love's sweet ray,
And in the depths or on the height,
In midnight gloom or morning bright,
Through deepening shades or gleam of light,
Love be my stay.

Through all my life be this my prayer,
Love be my stay;
Through weary days of toil and care,
More love I pray;
As Thou dost tint the summer glows
And fill with dew the fragrant rose,
So fill me till my heart o'erflows—
Love be my stay.

No longer then shall I have fear,
With love my stay
And Thou my God forever near
To gladden day;
To help me know my brother's needs,
To help me soothe the heart that bleeds,
To help me banish selfish greeds—
Love be my stay.

O Son of God, in silence still
The moments stay
Till I may learn Thy holy will
And find the way;
Then with my faltering hands in Thine
I'll look beyond where gleams divine
Of heavenly light shall ever shine—
Love be my stay.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 12.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The dangers of indulgence.—Prov. xxiii. 29-35; Isa. v, 22-25. (A temperance meeting.)

Indulgence in alcoholic drinks is one of the greatest curses of humanity. Its dangers are very great, and few who ever enter upon the downward path through strong drink are ever reclaimed. It destroys men bodily, mentally, morally and spiritually. It has been doing so for centuries, and yet it still finds victims who are willing to be debauched. It is one of the great mysteries of human life that indulgence in strong drink has not been abandoned voluntarily or made impossible by human legislation. God's law is against it, and so is the law of man.

Progress, however, is being made in the cause of temperance. More and more the drink traffic is being outlawed. More and more men who persist in indulging in intoxicating liquors are being considered unfit for the serious and important duties of life. Drunkenness injures a man's public career today, whereas it used to be considered no serious barrier to political preferment. It's a dangerous as well as a disgraceful thing for the holder of an important public office today to have the charge of drunkenness proved against him. The public conscience is being aroused, and the cause of temperance is marching on. The church should endeavor to save the young from this curse and to reclaim those who have fallen victims to indulgence in strong drink. The power of God can save men even from this evil, and we should bring it to bear upon them.

The dangers of intemperance are numerous and awful.

1. Intemperance endangers the man personally. It destroys the body, seriously affects the mind, weakens the will and makes moral and spiritual power and development impossible. No part of the man who indulges in strong drink is left undangered. His whole being and all his faculties are endangered by intemperance.

2. Intemperance endangers a man's financial position. Nothing impoverishes faster than strong drink. Men have taken fortunes down their throats through the drink habit. They have impoverished themselves and their loved ones through the appetite developed for strong drink.

3. Intemperance endangers the home life. The world has never known a greater home wrecker than drunkenness. The hearts of loving wives are broken, and poverty and rags take the place of the plenty provided when the husband and father was a temperate man.

4. Intemperance endangers industrial position. Employers of labor are today, as never before, demanding sober men for positions of any importance whatever. No secular power today is doing a greater work toward crushing out this evil than those who control the employment of labor in demanding that their employees must be sober men.

5. Intemperance endangers alienation from God and separation from heaven.

BIBLE READINGS.

Lev. x, 9, 10; Isa. xxviii, 1-4; Joel i, 5; Prov. xxiii, 1, 2; Amos vi, 1-6; I Cor. vi, 10; Gal. v, 19-26; Eph. v, xviii; I Pet. iv, 1-5; Rev. xxii, 12-15.

Ohio's New President.

The Ohio State Christian Endeavor union has a new president in the person of Rev. E. A. King of Sandusky. Mr. King comes to the office with large Endeavor experience and with a store of wise executive ability, which will help to prove him an ideal executive officer. Ohio has forged to the front at a remarkable pace during the past three years and now stands as one of the best organized states in the union along Christian Endeavor lines.

REV. E. A. KING.

On the Giving Hand.

Less than 10,000 societies reporting to the united society the actual amounts contributed for beneficence for a period of five years gave a total of $2,187,000.

Not a penny of this was given to the united society or used in Christian Endeavor work, but every dollar was a contribution to the missionary and philanthropic work of the church.

And yet once in awhile we read a criticism of Christian Endeavorers because, in addition to their gifts to other causes, they give a small sum to strengthen the movement in their own local or state union or through the world's union to the mission fields afar. I venture the assertion that there is no organization in the church today that spends so little upon itself and gives so much to others or that has enlisted so many unpaid workers in the service of the church as the Society of Christian Endeavor.—William Shaw at Baltimore Convention.

Eager to Preach Christ.

I want you to be especially eager to preach Christ these summer days. You will come in contact with some whom you may never be able to reach again. Live Him out, tell of His redeeming love, put so much heart back of both conduct and testimony that the message must get in. This is the heart of our endeavor. God forbid that we should ever forget it.—Rev. Dr. Edwin Forrest Hallenbeck.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Wonder of wonders! So far from scurrying at sight of the "Stonewall," that sombre, black-crested line halts short at sudden word of command; a crashing volley, driving point blank up the gentle rise, sends its storm of lead square in the "Stonewall's" face. Down go two battle flags. Down goes Neff, colonel commanding the Thirty-third. Down go dozens in the foremost rank, and to the amaze of Starke and Lawton, the "Stonewall" fairly staggers. "Forward!" is one hoarse shouted order, "Fire!" another; and with the skirmishers crouching, crawling, rolling away to right and left, Virginia blazes at Wisconsin now ramming fresh cartridges into the smoking tubes, and with never a thought of retreat. So far from sweeping the field the "Stonewall" is brought to a halt and gets another fierce volley, followed by rasping fire by file that is far more effective than the downward aim of the command, schooled rather to charge than to shoot. Sol Meredith's Hoosiers are sweeping at double quick straight from the pike at the west of the grove. Arms at the trail, at the shoulder or anyhow, all eyes to the front, Indiana is heading straight for the left of Wisconsin, and in five minutes more its long front is hidden in its own fire-flashing cloud. Another five minutes and another brigade is in line for the south, another battalion for the union, and still not a man has thought of retreat—save only the thick stream of wounded hobbling painfully back for the rear.

"Shall iron break the northern iron—or steel?" mutters Old Jack, in the words of the prophet, his eyes filled with trouble, his teeth firm set as once again the cheering, banner-waving, fire-flashing ranks of his devoted battalions sweep down the gentle slope until almost lost in the smoke of the opposite lines, then slowly settle to a halt, astounded, for though full half of its left wing seems shot out of line, and the Hoosiers and Black Hats are shrunk to half their original strength; there, shoulder to shoulder, daring, defiant, indomitable stands the brigade, the swart faces of the men lit by the flash of their guns, and Ewell, grim old soldier, turns to the rear with a shattered thigh, groans to his mournful aides that at last the division has met its match.

Jackson's pale face is rigid as he himself bends over his loyal second in command, and his lips move in prayer, never in imprecation, ere they issue their next order, "Try again." And this time, Trimble, too, drives in with Lawton, only to see that machinelike regiment to the east of the Black Hats, despite the numbers dropping in their tracks and dribbling away from the extreme right under the deluge of shrapnel from the southern guns, doing more fancy drill in front of the foe, changing front forward by company under command of that gamecock of a lieutenant-colonel, and then pouring withering fire into the left of the Louisiana men. "Try again," says Jack, and try they do, manfully, loyally—but heavens, what can human valor win against iron resolution? Two of Doubleday's battalions, one a mere skeleton like most of those of Baylor's and Taliaferro's, have ranged up in the gaps of the union brigade, a shadowy fabric now, visible only in the flash of the guns, but as Paul Ladue trots through the groups where surgeons and stretchermen are trying to care for the vast numbers of wounded, he looks in vain for a division commander to whom to deliver Jackson's last order and the news that Ewell is down. Taliaferro, too, has been borne to the rear, and Ladue rides on after Starke to bid him take command. Gods, what a sight, what a shambles, he finds at the rear of that line!—dead, dying and crippled by scores of the "Stonewalls." Three colonels, Neff, Grisby and Botts have been shot from their steeds, two of them straight to their graves; four majors are down of the Virginia command, and Walker, colonel of Taliaferro's Tenth. Full half the fighting force of the Second and Fourth Virginia are stretched on the field, as, for the last time, they close in on the center in front of the now almost invisible line of their foes, and with strength, cartridges, hope all spent and gone, they drop their useless rifle butts to earth and lean exhausted on the hot, black muzzles. At least they hold the ground.

So, too, does that stern, silent, iron command across those 50 yards of smoking void, "with obstinate determination," writes Old Jack, in rueful admission of the stubborn valor of his foe. And after all what has he accomplished? What has he not done this night but blunder? All he had to do was to remain there in concealment beyond that unfinished railway grade, resting in the shady woods, and, all unconscious of his presence the union brigades would have passed him by, leaving Ricketts far in the rear to be cut off, crushed or captured. But the sight of 6,000 Yankees marching along almost parallel to his front, all unsupported, was too much for even such piety as Jackson's. Ordinarily he had done wonders with a dozen regiments nearly as small as these. To-night he sends in twice that number to assail a smaller force, and is fought to a stand within an hour. He has gained nothing. He has lost one-third of his best and bravest—his Virginians. He has betrayed his position to the enemy, for Sigel, away to the southeast, has heard the sound of battle, and McLean, brave leader of one of his few American brigades, watches the desperate struggle from Ladue's old lookout at the Henry house, and Pope, skillfully directing his diverging column to trap Jackson at Centreville, hears over the left shoulder, far over Bull Run, the furious cannonade a long league behind him, the storm of a battle that only dies out at nine, but that tells him the tale of one more trick of Jackson's—the time-honored tale of the Irishman's flea.

But it opens Pope's otherwise blinded eyes, changes in toto his plans for the morrow, and bids him turn his columns on Groveton. Jackson's blunder has taken much from his own fame, added much to those of another, and given the Badgers and Hoosiers the title they rejoice in ever thereafter—the name of the Iron Brigade.

Sore times are these, this black, moonless night, as, within hailing distance of each other, officers and men of the opposing forces go groping about with glimmering lights, looking for friends among the slain. Sad hearts are these beating in the bosoms of the group of union generals in the fence corner back of the moaning wood, for it is full of wounded. The regimental commanders are slowly withdrawing their wearied men to the line of the pike, leaving strong pickets to protect the surgeons and their stretcher-bearers at the front. It is a dramatic scene when that dark-eyed soldier, commander of the Seventh, rides in to report to his brigade chief concerning the regiment that caustic "regular" has sometimes misjudged. "What do you think of the Seventh now?" is the irrepressible question just before the colonel slips, fainting, from his saddle, and then and not until then permits it to be known that all the time as he held his men to their desperate work, he sat his horse, pierced through both thighs by Enfield bullet, his boots running over with blood. Old Graybeard of the Sixth, too, is shot through the leg, and Gibbon has borrowed his right-hand man, the tall, brainy adjutant, and the Sixth feels bereft, though it, too, falls into soldier hands. But the Black Hats and the Hoosiers have lost more than all.

At nine o'clock, as the last scattering shots are fired out to the northwest, where some of Stuart's fellows have stumbled on the Hoosier pickets in the darkness, the division general sends an aide with brief note to Ricketts, telling him of the battle, and saying he means to hold the ground despite the fact that prisoners report old Stonewall 60,000 strong. He sends other staff officers in search of McDowell, his corps commander, with similar report and the request that Ricketts be ordered to close in and support him. McDowell's own engineer officer is with him, a deeply interested witness, coming up with Hatch's brigade, which hurriedly recalled, had faced about and marched eagerly back, hoping to be of use, but reaching the field only as darkness settled on the line. So the engineer stays to hear the reports and views of the various commanders before going himself in search of his chief, stays long enough to give his opinion that the division must move off the pike to the right or suffer demolition at dawn, and this, too, is the opinion of Hatch and Gibbon, sitting with their division commander and it is urgently given by both.

There is nothing for it then, urge the brigadiers, but slip off southeastward in hopes of support, and Fred Benton, riding out to the left front with orders to bring in the pickets, finds those venturesome Hoosiers crawling forward on hands and knees, beyond the original line.

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C. W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

AMUSEMENTS.

Thomas Jefferson will play "Rip Van Winkle" at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday night. This unrivaled actor of the sweetest and most wholesome as well as the most idealistic character known to the modern stage has lost none of his fervor, skill and enthusiasm, and his portrayal of Rip Van Winkle has all the attractiveness, charm and impressive beauty that his father showed when he was first winning renown in it. Mr. Jefferson is stirring his audiences this season as happily and as satisfactorily as in the past, and that everybody who sees his "Rip Van Winkle" is at once impressed with its wonderful quaintness, humanity and humor, and the completeness, polish, strength and sweetness of its delineation.

"The Life That Kills" is a thrilling love story in four acts and ten big scenes, and clearly depicts the greatest scoundrel in New York, and how he quickly disposes of his many wives, and wins others. The scenes are all located in New York City and the Palisades on the Hudson River. All classes of society are represented, from the Fifth avenue district to the Bowery. Ikey Cohen, the Yiddish Jew, and his Irish wife, Mary Ann, with Jakey Schwartz and his Bowery sweetheart, Liza, are a combination of funmakers second to none. Remember this production will be given in this city exactly as originally produced in New York, at the New Plainfield theatre, tomorrow night.

"There is an unwritten law," a law mightier than the law on the statute books, and this forms the central idea upon which "The Unwritten Law," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre Tuesday night, November 14, is founded. It is the law of nature that gives us the right to protect our homes and wives against the libertines who would attempt the destruction of both. Mark E. Swan, the author, has written a powerful story of heart interest. One that will appeal to every man, woman and child, and in which a true story of human love and passion is woven.

There have been many cases that have outraged society and the offender has gone free. But we should be pardoned for advising that summary punishment be dealt out to every man that is guilty of wrecking a home, and it is claimed that no injury will convict the man or woman who protects honor, even if it has to be by violence.

The season's latest offering in musical comedy will make its first appearance here at the New Plainfield theatre Honday night, November 13, when "Ikey and Abey" will be presented. The piece is under the management of Edward R. Salter, and is one of the really few successes of the year. Among the features are pretty girls in ravishing costumes, songs, dances and novel specialties of all kinds. The real novelty is the chorus, the ladies of which are all blessed with good looks and good voices, which, after all, is the keynote of success of all musical shows.

At the New Plainfield theatre one week from Saturday night Charles E. Blaney will present his latest and most wonderful dramatic offering, "The Curse of Drink." Many strong scenes have been witnessed on the stage, but for startling realism that in "The Curse of Drink," showing the drunken engineer suffering from delirium tremens, will stand absolutely alone. There have been many railroad plays, with engines and other railroad effects, but nothing to compare with the scene in the fourth act, showing a full sized locomotive running at full speed, and the rescue of Harry Rand, fireman of "751," of his sweetheart, who has been drugged and placed upon the tracks by Sam Handy, the villain.

Infectious humor and tuneful music will hold sway at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, November 17, when B. E. Forrester will present the inimitable dialect comedians, Yorke and Adams, in the new musical comedy, in two acts, "Bankers and Brokers." The play is a kaliedoscope of pretty girls, rich dressing and pretentious scenery. Fun and glitter are combined with musical numbers of the type that will be whistled and played long after the merry company has gone on its trumphant way. The company of sixty-five contains besides its score of clever principlas an active and well drilled chorus of forty. Bright, clean, sparkling, with a complete series of up to date specialties are promised all who attend the coming series of performances.

THIRTY-ONE BIRTHS DURING OCTOBER

AND TWENTY-FOUR MARRIAGES ACCORDING TO HEALTH BOARD REPORT.

But few contagious diseases were reported at the November meeting of the Board of Health on Tuesday, and among those mentioned two of typhoid fever were traced absolutely to sources outside the city. The source of the third it was impossible to find. Three cases of scarlet fever were reported, two of diphtheria, three of typhoid fever, eight in all. There was one death from typhoid fever and three from tuberculosis.

During October there was reported twenty-four marriages, thirty-two births and fourteen deaths. The death rate is very low, about 43 per cent. of the total number being persons over sixty years of age.

During October sixty-eight dairies were visited and forty-two samples of milk were analyzed. The reports of the inspectors shows the following results:

Plumbing inspections, 24; water tests, 4; smoke tests, 26; sewer connections, 3; cesspool connections, 20; cellar water closets, 5; completed plumbing systems, 6; additions to plumbing systems, 6; alterations to plumbing systems, 8; defective plumbing systems, 2; total, 98. The work of general inspections included sixty-one visits to houses with contagious disease, twenty inspections on complaint and seventy-eight inspections for vaults and cesspools, a total of 159. Twenty-six butcher shops were also inspected, making a total of 351 inspections.

These permits were granted: To sell milk—Fred W. Dunn, John C. Cooper, William Mernaugh; to collect offal—Swift & Co., and W. T. Banks. William J. Dodd, A. L. Carney and Nicholas Cody filed plumbers' bonds. The application of Peter Bennett to sell milk was laid on the table for one month.

UTTER IS RE-ELECTED.

Rhode Island Again Chooses Former Plainfielder Governor.

A heavy poll for the Republican candidate for the executive chair, Governor George H. Utter, formerly of this city, which gave him a plurality of at least 3,000 over the Democratic nominee, Lucius F. C. Garvin, was the feature of the State election in Rhode Island.

A plurality of 1,000 was the larges t looked for even by Mr. Utter's most ardent supporters. Governor Utter's running mates on the ticket also seem sure of large pluralities.

Fine Gift to Church.

Mrs. Mary E. Carroll, widow of Dr. William E. Carroll, of Newark, has typified her devotion to the Catholic faith by a liberal presentation of her worldly goods. Her collection of diamonds and precious stones has been set in three magnificent ostensoriums designed for St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark.

Pumpkin Pie Social.

Under the auspices of the Benevolent Bank, King's Daughters, a pumpkin pie social will be given tonight at the home of Mrs. DeWitt C. Ivins, of Hillside avenue, and a general invitation is extended to the public.

Rabbit Season Starts Tomorrow.

The open season for rabbits opens tomorrow and from the number of local hunting parties being formed the cotton tails will have a hard time dodging shot. Most of the gunners are planning to scour Somerset, Hunterdon and Warren counties.

"And the Next Day It Snowed."

The first snow of the season started at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. It was only a flurry, but enough to convince the people that Ohio and Pennsylvania were really carried by the Democrats.

Jurors Are Excused.

All of the jurors, except those needed to try a case in the Union County Court, tomorrow, have been excused until next Tuesday, when the criminal cases will be taken up.

VIOLATED PHARMACY ACT.

Druggist Found Guilty of Selling Poison.

Franklyn M. Murphy, a druggist of Upper Montclair, was arraigned yesterday before Recorder Yost in Montclair and fined $100 and costs on a charge of selling poisons in violation of the State Pharmacy Act.

Josiah Stryker, an assistant in the office of Robert N. McCarter, State Attorney General, prosecuted the case. The State Inspector of Pharmacy produced a bottle of laudanum and a package of sugar of lead, which he said were purchased in Murphy's store last October 7.

The secretary of the State Board of Pharmacy, Dr. Henry A. Jordan, testified that the defendant was not a licensed pharmacist.

Murphy, through his counsel, M. J. Murphy, of Paterson, before the trial began asked for an adjournment on the ground that important witnesses for the defence could not be present.

Recorder Yost refused to grant the adjournment. Murphy put in no defense.

Mgr. Doane's Estate.

A final accounting of the estate of the late Mgr. George H. Doane, of Newark, was made yesterday to Surrogate Russell, of Essex county, in behalf of James Smith, Jr., Jeremiah O'Rourke and John F. Shanley, executors. The value of the estate was $13,800, of which $6,300 was devoted to debts and bequests. Of the residue, St. Michael's Hospital, Newark, will receive $2,500, St. Mary's Orphan Asylum $2,500, Home for the Aged $1,250, and House of the Good Shepherd $1,250.

Prof. Louis C. Bevier, Jr., of Rutgers College, is the guest of Prof. Krebs, of the North Plainfield public schools today.

FIVE MEN CHARGED WITH REVOLTING CRIME

Young Girls With Whom They Have Been Consorting Confess.

ONE PRISONER A NEGRO

Arrests Brought About by Father Bogan—Parents Knew Nothing of What Was Going On.

John Galbraith, sixty-three years old, Richard Mattis, sixty-four, William Ross, twenty-seven, Peter Linzer, forty-six, and Thomas Holland, colored, are locked up at the station house under a charge of criminal misconduct with young girls. Four of the prisoners were arrested last night; Galbraith was arrested this morning.

The girls connected with the case are Cathie Ennis, daughter of James Ennis; Anna Ross, daughter of Mrs. Mary Ross; Rose Green, daughter of Lawrence Green, and Mary Regan, daughter of Daniel Regan. They are between twelve and fourteen years old. All of them are white.

Three charges are made against Galbraith, one of the sexagenarians, two by Ennis and one by Green. Regan accuses Holland, the negro, and another complaint is being made against him. Peter Linzer is charged by Mrs. Ross, and a second charge is being prepared against him also. Regan is the complainant against Ross, the youngest of the quintet, and Mrs. Ross charges Mattis, the sixty-four-year-old.

The crimes with which the men are charged are said by the police to have stretched over a period of four or five months. The men usually met the girls in the neighborhood of Grant avenue, and carried through their misconduct in that section of the West End.

A few days ago Father Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church, got a hint of what was going on, and immediately investigated. He was appalled at the practices and crimes disclosed. He lost no time in getting the police to act. Chief Kiely says he had heard that the four girls were boasting of the money they got from men, and had been investigating the case when Father Bogan called on him to join in bringing the men to book.

Action was taken yesterday afternoon. Judge Runyon, Chief Kiely and Justice Mosher met at St. Mary's rectory, where Father Bogan had the girls and their parents. The girls made a statement of their relations with the men, giving names and dates, and as fast as they could be made out complaints were drawn up.

Chief Kiely's men picked up the men, with the exception of Galbraith, as soon as they could locate them. Mattis was captured red-handed. Galbraith was allowed to stay in his home overnight to save his family from shock and humiliation of a police raid. He was arrested as he left the house at 6 o'clock this morning.

Chief Kiely said this forenoon that all the men but Galbraith had confessed. Galbraith is regarded as the worst offender.

Until the Chief told them yesterday afternoon, none of the fathers and only one of the mothers, it is said, had a hint of the ways into which their daughters had fallen. When they learned the extent to which their children had been wronged the men were wild with rage. Chief Kiely had a hard time holding them in check until the prisoners had been gathered in. For fear of mob violence the whole proceeding was carried through with secrecy. Holland, the negro, was hurried to the jail as fast as the patrol horse could run, and the officers didn't breath easy until the cell door clanged on him. From the comments on the streets this morning, it is certain that mob vengeance on the negro would have been attempted had one call for attack followed even a hint of what he was charged with. The temper of the fathers is still such that Chief Kiely said he doubted if he would let them attend any hearing of the prisoners without searching them for weapons.

Ross, Mattis, Linzer and Holland are all married, and have grown or growing children. Galbraith is a widower, with several grown sons and daughters.

The crime with which the men are charged is one of the most serious on the statute books. It is unbailable excepting before a Supreme Court judge, and those convicted of it are liable to twenty years imprisonment for each offense.

The quintet were arraigned before Justice Mosher this morning. He remanded them until tomorrow noon.

COUNTRY CLUB YEAR BOOK IS ISSUED

IT SHOWS THAT ORGANIZATION HAS MEMBERSHIP OF 767.

The year book of the Plainfield Country Club is out and shows an active membership of 372, non-resident 39, associate 106, junior associate 267 and 3 honorary members, a grand total of 767. The organization, which was founded in 1896 as the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, is in a flourishing condition.

In addition to the usual statistics of officers and by-laws the book contains the special rules for the golf, tennis and greep committees, and also Leighton Calkins' theory, tables of strokes and rules for handicapping, first introduced two seasons ago at the Plainfield Country Club.

Two of the golf committee rules have worked very well and have been adopted at other clubs. The one barring from the next competition players who fail to return a card in a stroke competition, whether the card is complete or not and whether or not the round is finished, has worked like magic in increasing the weekly handicap fields.

Another notably successful rule is that balls found by a player or his caddie shall belong to such player.

CHANGE IN BOROUGH'S VOTE FOR SENATOR

FRELINGHUYSEN'S MAJORITY OVER CHILDS WAS 497.

Through a mistake on the part of the Election Board of the Second district in the borough, the first published returns Wednesday morning, gave Joseph S. Frelinghuysen's majority over S. S. Childs, much below what it should have been. Frelinghuysen's majority for State Senator over Childs in North Plainfield was 497, whereas it was given as 356. The total vote was as follows: First district, Frelinghuysen, 370; Childs, 116; Second district, Frelinghuysen, 366; Childs, 123; totals, Frelinghuysen, 736; Childs, 239.

The vote in both districts was taken by machine, which bore the Citizens' nominees at the bottom of the columns. The Citizens had no nominee for Senator or for Assemblyman and the lever was pulled for these blank spaces by voters in the Second district 141 times. In adding up the totals, the Election Board credited this 141 to Childs when in reality they had just as much right to be given Frelinghuysen. The county board cancelled them entirely, as was properly done by the judges in the First district.

The vote for Assemblymen was also corrected to read as follows: First distict, Hoagland, 389; Durling, 94; Second district, Hoagland, 376; Durling, 107; majority for Hoagland, 564.

False Alarm in the Borough.

A false alarm of fire was turned in from box 132 in the borough at 1:15 this morning. Through some disarrangement in the mechanism it registered 143, located at Somerset street and Grandview avenue. The department proceeded to that point but finding no trace of a "shine" began an investigation that led them to box 132 at Manning and Westervelt avenues, which was found opened. There was no one in the vicinity who could tell who had pulled the hook and both the police and firemen are working on the case.

Beautiful Charity, Beautiful Land.

The pulpit of the First Presbyterian church will be occupied on Sunday, by Rev. Lewis Bond, who returned to Plainfield, last year, after a prolonged residence in European Turkey. With chalk in hand, Mr. Bond will give an interesting and instructive address on "A Beautiful Charity in a Beautiful Land."

Miss Gano's Party.

Miss Cora B. Gano entertained a few of her young friends last evening at her home in Grove street. Music, games and plenty of fun made the evening pass very pleasantly and quickly.

Week of Prayer.

Meetings in connection with the week of prayer for young men of all lands will be held at the building of the local association on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings of next week at 8 o'clock.

DAY NURSERY ASSURED

Kings' Daughters Approve Action of Executive Committee.

TO CARE FOR CHILDREN

Plans Outlined at Semi-annual Meeting and Addresses Made—Committee Appointed to Start the Work.

Plans for the establishment of a day nursery in this city under the auspices of the City Union, King's Daughters, as stated in The Daily Press a few days ago, were discussed at the semi-annual meeting of the Union held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, yesterday afternoon. The members heartily approved the idea, after Mrs. Charles A. Reed, the president, stated the resolution adopted at the executive committee meeting, that such a nursery be opened in this city.

Upon the request of Mrs. Reed, Mrs. A. E. Faber spoke on the resolution, telling of a day nursery at Orange after which it is proposed to conduct the one here. This provides for the care and feeding of the child and gives mothers, who are ill or who have to work out a chance to care for themselves.

Miss Holly, who is agent for the Charity Organized Aid Association and Miss Olive DeLany, the city nurse, both of whom visited the nursery at Orange, told of their trip and also of the need of such an institution in this city. They cited many cases under their own personal observation where it would be a great benefit to mothers. There the children could be properly taken care of, kept off the streets and well fed. Miss Holly said that it would cover the work test here for women, showing whether they actually want to help themselves. She said that in her experience she had found men who were satisfied to sit around, toast their feet and drink, while their wives were out at work. She also spoke in favor of the nursery because of the improved sanitary condition it would furnish for children. Miss Holly also referred to cases here that would be benefitted by the nursery.

Mrs. Reed then explained that the nursery would not be open on holidays or Sundays, and that the annual expense of such an institution would amount to about $1,500. This would include the lease of a house or a part of one, provisions, salary for matron and other incidental expenses. She said that while it would be under the auspices of the King's Daughters and they would contribute toward the expense, outsiders would also be expected to help in its support.

Remarks in favor of the nursery were made by Rev. L. R. Howard, Rev. J. W. Musson and Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney, a strong point being that it would keep children off the street. Mrs. Glenney said that she knew of cases where husbands and wives have an understanding that each is to do his and her share in making the living and children are left at home alone to care for themselves. She quoted Henry Ward Beecher's words that "If the poor had the sense of those who discuss their condition, they would not be where they are," and she added that she thought this to be true here.

Last year Orange cared for 5,200 children in its two nurseries. No pledges were made for their support, those in charge depending on contributions. A committee comprising Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney, Mrs. A. E. Faber, Miss Holly and Miss DeLany will meet on Thursday to prepare plans for starting the nursery.

COON KILLED DOG.

Mystery of the Disappearance of Overbaugh's Dog Solved.

A thoroughbred dog belonging to Herbert Overbaugh disappeared while out for a run in the South Plainfield swamp last week. The mystery of its disappearance was explained yesterday morning when its dead body was discovered outside a coon hole in a hollow log.

When the dog failed to come back over the swamp the day of the run Overbaugh decided it had strayed off, and almost every day thereafter, until the search ended yesterday, he had friends hunting for it.

The dog was undoubtedly killed by a coon. It was a lightweight beadle, and totally unequipped for battle with coons, which fight with the savageness and pertinacity of bulldogs. The coon that did the killing is believed to be an old veteran of the swamp, whose signs have been seen for years. Many fruitless attempts have been made to get him.

ANOTHER BOLD ROBBERY

Amazingly Nervy Crook Works In a Watchung Avenue House.

EARLY IN EVENING

Family at Home, House Lighted, and Swag Secured on First Floor—Police Didn't Make This Case Public.

There was a thief in town Wednesday afternoon who is a marvel for nerve. He turned a trick at a Watchung avenue house that compels the police to admire him as the coolest gentleman of his profession they ever had indirect dealings with. They don't expect ever to meet him, but they would like to, just to see what he looks like.

The residence robbed was 720 Watchung avenue. From incidents of the household the time of the crook's entrance and exit is fixed positively at between 5:50 and 6:10 o'clock. At that time there were three grown members of the family, two women and a young man, and two servants in the house. The family were upstairs and the servants were in the kitchen, leaving the first floor vacant. A bright light was burning in the front hall and another illuminated the library. The dining room, at the rear of the drawing romm, on the other side of the hall, was in darkness.

The crook opened the front door with a skeleton key, passed into the dining room and made directly for the sideboard. He opened a drawer in which some of the silver plate lay, scooped a bundle of it together and escaped through a side door. It looked as if he was alarmed into going sooner than he desired, because he didn't take all the valuables within reach. It is probable that he opened the side door before he did anything else, to have the shortest way out ready for the quick jump for freedom he knew must be made.

The crook worked as if he knew the house from top to bottom, but he probably made only a careful study of the rooms and doors from the outside. All the blinds were up and he could have acquired all the knowledge he exhibited in a survey from the street and lawn.

The robbery was reported to the police, but the latter did not make it public. They don't like to encourage other earnest workers in the profession by letting them know how easily such things can be done. Detective McCarthy sleuthed around the neighborhood yesterday, but the only thing he learned was that the man who did the trick "would make a name for himself if he would go into a legitimate business."

THE FAYS ARE WONDERS.

Most Remarkable Mystics Ever Seen in the City.

To see Mrs. Fay seated on the platform covered with a large white shroud with one hand extending from underneath and then pointing towards her audience and hear her call the names of prominent well-known citizens who are present and tell them precisely that which rests upon their minds and then correctly answering the questions, is indeed a marvelous proceeding.

You write a question on a slip of paper which you retain and Mrs. Fay, blindfolded and enshrouded in a sheet, with only a hand exposed, tells you the question and gives the answer. At least a hundred tests of this kind were answered last night.

Many of the most prominent citizens wer called and their questions answered by the clever and handsome little woman, Mrs. Fay. Quite a few persons of prominence locally did not write any questions but merely concentrated their thoughts on some subject, but with lightning rapidity did Mrs. Fay tell them just what was passing in their minds.

Mr. Jones Stays in Jail.

"Professor Conjunction" Jones, the local "ecaliptist" gentleman, was given one month in jail for chicken stealing by Judge Strong, at New Brunswick yesterday. He has already been behind the bars a month awaiting trial.

Will Canvass the Vote.

The Union County Board of Election and Registry will meet at the Court House, Elizabeth, Monday noon to canvass the county vote.

MISS SERRELL A BRIDE

Weds John Peake Reynolds, Jr., of Charlestown, South Carolina.

PRETTY HOME AFFAIR

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss Officiates—Large Assemblage of Guests Witness the Happy Event.

Miss Florence Ethel Serrell, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Serrell, of Myrtle avenue, the borough, and John Peake Reynolds, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Peake Reynolds, of Charleston, South Carolina, were married last night at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of a large number of guests from New York, Paris, Brooklyn, Elizabeth and this city. It was a chrysanthemum wedding and the home was lavishly decorated with these flowers and Southern smilax. In the drawing room the prevailing colors were green and white, in the library and dining room pink and in the reception hall yellow.

The bride wore a gown of white satin meteor, trimmed with princess lace. She also wore a veil which was caught up with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of bride roses and lilies-of-the-valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Anna Marguerite Serrell, who was gowned in pink crepe de chine, princess style. Her bouquet was of pink roses.

The best man was Charles M. Hopkins, of New York, and the ushers were Dr. Norman H. Probasco and Walter T. Serrell, the latter a brother of the bride.

While the Mendelssohn wedding march was being rendered by Weton's orchestra, of Elizabeth, the bridal party descended the stairway, passed through the reception hall to the drawing room. The ushers and maid-of-honor led the way, followed by the bride, accompanied by her father, who gave her away in marriage. In the drawing room the party met the groom and best man and the officiating clergyman, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church.

The Episcopal wedding service was followed, a ring being used in the service. After the ceremony a reception was held from 8 to 10, during which time the guests took occasion to shower their congratulations upon the bride and groom. A delightful programme of music was presented during the evening, and later Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds left for a wedding trip in the South. Upon their return they will reside in East Seventh street.

In the exchange of gifts among those of the bridal party, the groom's gift to the bride was a brooch of diamonds and pearls and to the best man and ushers he gave crescent of pearl stick pins. The bride also received a large number of gifts of great value and use, including furniture, cut glass, china, silver and goldware.

The bride is a most estimable young woman and a favorite in a large circle of acquaintances. She is an active member of the First Baptist church, where she has been prominent in many of the young people's affairs.

Mr. Reynolds is well-known here where he has visited many times. He is a mechanical engineer and is in the employ of the water department in New York city.

Notable Music Event at the First M. E. Church.

Miss Dolores Reedy, of New York, mezzo contralto, will assist J. Edmund Skiff at the complimentary song recital to be given at the First M. E. church on Thursday night, November 16. A delightful programme is assured. Prominent among the numbers will be selections by the modern song writers, Von Fielitz and Strauss. Miss Reedy is well-known here by many who have heard her sing in private and will be pleased with this opportunity to hear her in public. These women will serve as patronesses for the affair:

COAL DEALERS PLAN FOR A BLACKLIST

IF YOU BEAT THE COAL BARONS, YOU CAN'T GET THE BLACK DIAMONDS.

For the purpose of protecting themselves against bad debts, the local coal dealers' association has decided to take action at once. A meeting will be held tonight when plans will be discussed and put into effect.

The dealers are determined that their patrons who make a practice of running bills and not paying them, shall have no more coal until they settle past accounts. There is no doubt but that the dealers lose considerable money during the year and the practice has grown to such an extent that they declare something must be done. They have to pay cash for their coal to the wholesalers and claim that they cannot afford to carry so much money on their books.

Reed Intimates That Politics is Back of Councilmanic Police Committee Report.

MAKES AN OFFER

Will Agree to McCardell Taking No Part As Judge If Tyler and Bullock Will Do Likewise.

Charles A. Reed, who has been retained by Chief of Police Kiely in the police department probe, gave the following interview this afternoon:

"I have been retained by Chief Kiely as counsel, and desire to have the position which he assumes clearly understood, and for that reason will state a few of the facts.

"First. Just prior to the primary election, in which Messrs. Tyler and Bullock were personally interested, as the result meant to them political life or death, they raided Goff's place. They stated that for a long time previously, they had known that he was violating the law. Admitting that they had been possessed of this information for weeks, why did they choose that particular moment, just prior to the primary election, for the raid? As they had waited so long, why did they not wait a few days more, until the primary election had been held?

"Second. After the appointment of the Police Commission, these gentlemen were asked to assist that body in the performance of its duty by giving it such information as they possessed. Their reply was to the effect that they refused to recognize the Police Commission as having any legal existence. They waited until shortly before election, and until a time when rumors were persistent that their friends intended slashing the Republican candidate for Council. Then they published their so-called report to the Council in which they apparently preferred charges of the most serious character against the Chief of Police.

"Why did they choose that particular time for that report? It might have been opportunely made as a part of their reply to the request of the Police Commission for information. They might consistently have said to that Commission, 'You have no legal existence as a part of the City Government, but if you as individuals want to know the facts, here they are.' But they let that opportunity pass and waited almost until election. Having waited so long, why, again, did they not wait a little longer, until just after election instead of so shortly before?

"Chief Kiely's reply was to demand that the charges be formulated into such legal shape that he might plead to them and be tried and be dealt with as law and justice require. He did not know whether the Police Commission or the Common Council had the authority to try him. He does not know now. But he demanded that the charges be so framed that he could answer them, and at the proper time be tried before whatever body has jurisdiction. These gentlemen failed to comply with this seasonable request made by the Chief and even to this day no legal charges have been presented to which he could answer.

"Then the Police Commission called upon Messrs. Tyler and Bullock to put their charges in legal form. And what is their reply? They denied that they ever made any charges. They say 'The charges were made to us, not by us.' They go further and specifically decline to make any charges and give as a reason for their refusal, that if they did make charges, it would disqualify them to sit as judges, if Kiely comes to trial before the Council.

"They have said that Andrew McCardell is not fit to sit as judge, because, they say, he is prejudiced in Kiely's favor. And yet they refuse to sign the charges which they have published broadcast, because, forsooth, they want to sit as judges in a trial upon their own accusations.

"What Patrick Kiely wants is a square deal. Nothing more and nothing less. Whether the appointment of a Police Commission was politic or inpolitic; whether the law is constitutional or unconstitutional: These things are entirely aside from the question at issue in Kiely's case. That question is, his guilt or his innocence. And I want to say for him right now, that if the Supreme Court decides the Police Commission to be the legal tribunal, he is willing to waive his right to be tried by the entire Board, and willing to stand trial before three members of that Commission, other than McCardell. A Monkey's Tender Love Affair.

We are all more or less like monkeys when we are in love. But a monkey is more of a monkey than ever under such conditions. Very wonderful, too, is the way he makes love to his inamorata, and those who don't know how he acts and what he looks like will be thoroughly convinced if they look at some wonderful photographs of monkeys making love, which will appear in next Sunday's New York World. Other interesting features of a fine magazine will be an article on the purchasing power of a dollar in New York; another story by O. Henry, the story of a wonderful cyclone in the sun, and many other special things well illustrated.

Photograph by John Neagle.

The November number of "The Suburbanite" contains a fine picture showing the approach to Fanwood station on the New Jersey Central. It was taken by John Neagle, of this city, and is one of the best pictures yet appearing in this interesting magazine.

NEGRO FIEND ASSAULTS AND ROBS WOMAN

LAY IN WAIT UNTIL SHE WAS ALONE IN HOUSE.

Salem, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Belle Lippincott, of Quinton township, was assaulted, robbed and beaten with a club by a negro early Wednesday morning. Her condition is serious, but she is expected to recover. A sheriff's posse is searching for her assailant.

Mrs. Lippincott is housekeeper for James Robinson, a farmer near Quinton. A strange negro was seen near the farmhouse early Wednesday morning. After Mr. Robinson had driven away the negro entered the house and demanded that Mrs. Lippincott give him money.

The woman attempted to run into the yard, but was knocked down with a club. She regained her feet and ran out of the house. The negro followed, knocked her down again and beat and choked her until she was almost unconscious. He took her rings off her finger and attempted to assault her, but was frightened away by hearing a wagon approaching.

Mr. Robinson returned shortly afterward and notified Sheriff Johnson, who organized a posse and started in pursuit.

STRANGE ABSENCE OF MILLBURN GIRL

MOTHER SCOUTS THE IDEA THAT DAUGHTER WENT AWAY WITH ANYONE.

Mrs. Jacob Pittinger, of Millburn, reported to the police of that place last night that her daughter, Ethel Crowell, 16 years of age, had disappeared from her home. The girl left Monday afternoon to go to the store for her mother and a neighbor, and, meeting her little brother on the street, sent the articles by him with the word that she would be home soon. As she did not appear at supper time the mother became alarmed and a search was started, but no one could be found who had seen the girl. Inquiries at the homes of relatives in Newark and Elizabeth also produced the same result, and at last the police were notified. It has been ascertained that the girl was quite friendly with Frank Dunican, who also left town on Sunday morning, leaving a note saying that he was going to San Francisco to engage in business. The mother of the girl scouts the idea that her daughter could be with Dunican.

Dunican is married, about 45 years of age, but for a long time he has not been living with his wife. A year ago Mrs. Dunican compelled him to furnish bonds to contribute $4 a week toward her support, and this time will expire next week.

The girl had been a domestic in the employ of the Dunican family for a few months some time ago.

CLOSE TO THE PEOPLE.

Ye Editor Got His.—There will probably be more pumpkin pies made in Auxvasse this week than for any other period of the town's histtry. Wednesday morning Ed. Swon—big, fat, jolly Ed.—loaded a big two-horse wagon bed with sideboards on full of big, yellow pumpkins and distributed them at the homes of every inhabitant of the town, leaving three at a place. Pumpkin pie is mighty good, it makes the very richest food. Ed. is no dude when he aspires to do so much good. On behalf of the community we return thanks to Ed. for his liberal donation. May he always have a field full of the yellow fruit. —Auxvassse (Mo.) Review.

Choo-Choo Day in Florence.—The first time automobiles were ever seen on the streets of Florence was recently, when R. C. Flannigan and Dr. c-Indoe, of Norway, came here with their machines. "Dick" gave nearly every kid in town a ride before departing for Crystal Falls.—Florence (Wis.) Mining News.

Plainfield, N. J., November 10, 1905.

Apparently the Common Council's work has counted for naught so far as the city flag pole is concerned. Many moons ago, an appropriation was made for the repair of the flag staff. Nothing has been done. What is the reason?

Councilmen Tyler and Bullock declare they are in possession of testimony reflecting on Chief Kiely. The public say they want to hear it. If the chief is guilty he should be removed without delay, if not he deserves a vindication. The sooner judgment is rendered the better for all concerned.

Evidently the Public Service Corporation takes more interest in performing its duty than the Councilmanic street committee has shown. Every day, the trolley company's sprinkler is at work laying the dust. The city's water wagons, however, are in storage. Show what a real good councilman you are, Mr. Wilson. If you have never had an opportunity to make your mark in that body, now's your chance.

Mayor Buckle deserves credit for his generosity to the policemen. When he learned that they will be deprived of their pay for October until after the Supreme Court hands down its opinion in the police commission case he proved himself to be a friend indeed. Instructions were given by him to a local bank to allow the policemen to draw sums equivalent to their month's pay from his own personal account, and for this he should be commended.

CITY JOTTINGS.

—Co. K will hold a dance in the armory on Thursday night, November 23. It will be an invitation affair.

—A most interesting demonstration of the well-known Lion Brand Yarns will begin on Monday at Woodhull & Martin's. This demonstration will be given by the Mrs. Elliss, whose magazine articles on crocheting and knitting are so well known. An exhibition of new designs and stitches will be found interesting and instiructive. A cordial invitation is extended to all women interested in this beautiful accomplishment.

—I am looking for you. Do you want $25 cash? Much has been said for me; many bad things has been said against me. I will say a few words now: $25 will be paid to anyone who ever purchased a building lot and paid for it, and got a deed from any company that I was ever interested in that I cannot satisfy them they can get a guarantee title for said lot showing it to be free and clear of every incumbrance. This particularly applies to Lincoln property. Silas Dewey Drake.

TRINITY CONSISTORY WORK.

E. F. Sheppard and George Gayle Re-elected to Office.

The Consistory of Trinity Reformed church held its annual election of clerk to the Consistory and treasurer of the church last night. The past efficient services of Edgar F. Sheppard, the present clerk, were duly recognized and he was unanimously re-elected. George Gayle, for many years treasurer of the church, was again chosen to fill that position.

A committee comprising A. L. Force and M. F. Gano was appointed to audit Mr. Gayle's books for the past year. Rev. Dr. Schenck announced his standing committees for the ensuing year and considerable routine business was transacted by the Consistory before adjournment.

TO STOP BIRD SHOOTING.

Audubon Society of New Jersey Ready to Help Prosecution.

The Audubon Society of New Jersey may take action to stop the practice of shooting birds in Nutley indulged in by boys there, complaint of which was recently made to the Nutley Town Council. The society stands ready to furnish notices to be posted in the town prohibiting the promiscuous shooting and will go even further by prosecuting offenders before the proper officials.

The following letter regarding the matter has been received:

"I notice in the Newark Advertiser of September 28 a paragraph referring to bird shooting in the streets of Nutley. I would be very glad to have the names of some interested persons who would be willing to post warning notices and bring the matter of this violation of the law before the proper authorities. The State society will provide posters, leaflets, etc., and if some one will organize the mischief-doing boys into a bird protecting society much good will be done to the cause of humanity as well as to animal protection. Yours truly,

"MISS JULIA S. SCRIBNER,
"Secretary New Jersey Audubon Society.

Attended Banquet to Prince.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, was among the guests at the dinner given to Prince Louis of Battenberg by the British societies of New York at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. The banquet not only signalized the coming of the royal visitor to New York but commemorated the birthday of King Edward as well. The Plainfield clergyman had a few minutes' conversation with the prince.

Borough Young Man Missing.

The family and friends of Albert Cowling, a borough young man, are greatly worried over his protracted absence from home. He is a compositor by trade and it was said that he was working at Trenton, but inquiry failed to confirm it.

PRETTY WHITE GIRL ELOPES WITH NEGRO

PAIR MARRIED AND ARE NOW SPENDING THEIR HONEYMOON IN PHILADELPHIA.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 10.—Katie Obinger, an attractive nineteen-year-old white girl, and James Z. Jefferson, a negro medical student, eloped to Washington Wednesday and were married. They are now in Philadelphia on their honeymoon.

The girl is possessed of an excellent figure, is decidedly pretty, has regular features and is pleasant and intelligent.

Her home, on Stockton street, is nicely furnished, and her parents say they have used all the influence in their power to distract her attention from the negro.

The father of the girl is greatly enraged.

"Whether it be a day, a month, a year, or ten years, I will kill them both the moment I lay my eyes upon them," is his declaration.

All her ten brothers and sisters have declared their intention of leaving their home if the sister ever returns to it.

Fifteen Years Wed.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Bennett celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage on Monday evening, at their home in West Sixth street. After congratulations, refreshments were served and the evening was spent with music and dancing. There was a large number of friends present from Yonkers, New York, West Orange, Newark and Plainfield, and the couple received many gifts.

School Trustee Injured by Car.

School Trustee Frank McSorley, of Harrison, was run down and seriously injured by a southbound trolley car on Broad street, Newark, Wednesday night, in front of the City Hall. He was crossing the tracks behind a northbound car and did not see the vehicle which struck him until it was too late. He was taken to St. Barnabas Hospital in a police ambulance.

Song Sparrow Was Shot.

Nocolo Domenico, of Silver Lake, Belleville, was fined yesterday $22.50 by Justice of the Peace Cadmus for the alleged shooting of a song sparrow in Forest Hill. The arrest was made by Warden Hall, of Bloomfield. The fine was paid under protest by Postmaster Jeraldo Maioran, of Silver Lake.

PUMPKIN PIE SOCIAL NETTED THEM $200

BENEVOLENT BAND RAISED MONEY FOR NURSE FUND.

In their worthy efforts to raise funds to meet their pledge toward the support of the King's Daughters' city nurse, a most successful pumpkin pie sociable was held last night at the home of Mrs. DeWitt C. Ivins, on Watchung avenue, under the auspices of the Benevolent Band, King's Daughters. The net proceeds from the affair were $200.

In many respects the affair was unique. The large porch was enclosed and attractively decorated with jack-o'-lanterns, chrysanthemums, roses, autumn leaves and cornstalks. The house was also decorated in similar fashion, autumnal foliage being used with good effect.

During the evening there was an auction sale of useful and fancy articles of more or less value. These were wrapped in yellow paper, tied with green ribbon. F. H. Andrews and Evarts Tracy were the auctioneers and they succeeded in getting good prices for every article.

Mrs. F. S. Martin, as president of the band, had general supervision of the affair, and those in charge of the various tables were as follows: Fancy table, Mrs. G. H. Beaton; refreshments, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney and Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman; candy, Mrs. James E. Martine; cakes and pies, Mrs. E. B. Craft; welsh rarebit, Mrs. E. H. Booth. In the dining room coffee, cider and welsh rarebit and pumpkin pie were served.

Mrs. J. W. Stimpson received the prize for making the most unique pumpkin pie. It was made to represent a "Brownie." The hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Ivins in allowing their home to be used for the social was appreciated.

Endeavor Congress Plans Gift for Best Record.

The November congress meeting of the local union, Christian Endeavor, was held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall last night, and there was a discussion of the proposition of presenting a banner to the society making the best record. This will be given at the May meeting and will represent recognition of the best average per cent. of the number of testimonial meetings and of active members present and taking part.

The Endeavorers also agreed to help the United Society in its efforts to raise funds for the building of a Clarke memorial and permanent headquarters for the United Society. Each member is asked to contribute twenty-five cents, representing one cent for each year since the Christian Endeavor Society was first organized. A. H. Van Arsdale was elected chairman of the missionary committee.

Elks Have a New Home.

The Elks of Hackensack dedicated last night their handsome new home. Elks from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark, Poughkeepsie, Paterson, Haverstraw and other nearby cities were present. The Paterson and Jersey City delegations were accompanied by bands. Past Grand Secretary Arthur T. Moreland delivered the dedicatory address. Among the prominent visitors were Past Grand Exalted Rulers John Galvin, George P. Cronk and Joseph T. Fanning.

Dr. Hart Must Pay Miss Wieters.

Trenton, Nov. 10.—Special Master Carroll Robbins filed yesterday a report in the Court of Chancery on the adjustment of the litigation between Miss Wilhelmina C. Wieters and Dr. Israel Hart, of Pennington, in which Miss Wieters sought to have Dr. Hart make an accounting of a $15,000 legacy from her father, which she intrusted to the doctor to invest for her. Vice Chancellor Bergen holds that whatever losses have occurred in the investment of the estate were due to poor judgment shown by Dr. Hart, without questioning his honesty in the matter. He referred the matter to Special Master Robbins to ascertain how much Dr. Hart should pay back to Miss Wieters. After taking testimony Mr. Robbins decided that the amount due Miss Wieters from Dr. Hart is $9,692.

Object to Stand of Labor Journal.

Orange, Nov. 10.—Because campaign articles eulogistic of Everett Colby and the other candidates on the Republican ticket in Essex county were published in The Wage Earner, the official paper of the Federated Trades Council of the Oranges, an offshoot of the American Federation of Labor, that organization last night objected seriously to the partisan stand taken by the paper. All the candidates had been described at considerable length and their pictures published. Resolutions were adopted protesting against this and also declaring that in the future all discussion of a political nature shall be eliminated from the meetings of the council.

likes to feel so far as "looks" are concerned that he is "It." A soiled coat, worn and crumpled collar, ragged button holes and a generally run down and hung-in-the-garret-all-summer-look, certainly detracts the best of all overcoats and puts the man behind it in the undressed class. NOTICE!

"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C. W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

IN THE WORLD OF FASHION where custom-made clothes are supposed to be the proper caper, the appearance of the Watson-made suit always acts like an eye-opener. Men wonder how so much of the style, so perfect a fit and material so serviceable can all be united in one suit—at Watson prices.

But at Watson's we've learned the way and we see to it that every suit made by Watson craftsmen betrays the unusual ability of master tailors. Every Watson suit is hand-cut, and has the close fitting collar, the tailored shoulders and the finish which usually only go with custom-made clothes. The materials this season represent the latest and most popular weaves and colorings.

$10 to $25.

The same careful and distinctive methods elevate Watson-made outer garments to the same high plane. A Watson top coat will lend snap and go to the appearance of any man; Watson paddocks fairly lift up their voices to cry of style, and a Watson three-quarter length overcoat, while more conservative, is of the kind to make every beholder ask where it was obtained.

$10 to $40.

No one could blame you if you thought that clothing with all those virtues would necessarily be expensive; but, come in and learn better. Watson comes out strong in making weak prices.

KINGS DAUGHTERS INTERESTING REPORTS

VARIOUS CIRCLES REVIEW WORK FOR PAST SIX MONTHS.

Reports of the last half year's work were presented at the semi-annual meeting of the City Union, King's Daughters, held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, yesterday. Mrs. Charles A. Reed, the president, was in the chair, and after the opening exercises, Miss Phillips, treasurer, gave her report.

The receipts for the past six months were $1,362.36, including $150.24, contributed to the baby camp work through The Daily Press. The expenditures were $1,214.93, leaving a balance of $147.43. The expenses for running the baby camp during the summer amounted to about $800.

Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney, chairman of the nurse committee, reported sixteen new cases, several operations and 289 visits made by the city nurse. There were two deaths.

Mrs. Faber, chairman of the camp committee, gave a more detailed account of the work. While the camp was open, from June 26 to September, 170 children and 30 adults were cared for. She said that next year a supply of baby carriages, hammocks, oil stoves and swings would be needed and she asked those having such things to lay them aside until that time.

Then followed the reports from the various circles telling of the work during the past six months. The circles and those who reported for them are as follows:

Benevolent Band, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney; Charity Circle, Miss Bertha Whitney; Cheerful Workers, Miss Anna Most; Daughters of the Cross, Mrs. A. E. Faber; Whatsoever Circle, Trinity Reformed church, no report; Brightside Circle, Mrs. J. A. Powlison; Whatsoever Circle, Park Avenue Baptist church, no report; Golden Rule Circle, Mrs. Anna Most; Cup Bearers' Circle, no report; Silver Cross, Miss Phillips; Loyal Daughters, Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde.

In each case the reports were of an encouraging nature and showed that the members are doing good work. Every circle has pledged the same amount as last year for the coming year, and they are now planning for various affairs to raise the money.

After the meeting the members remained for a social time and tea was served.

Japanese Entertainment.

Under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., a supper and entertainment will be given in association hall, Tuesday night, November 21, and Miss Aimee Louise Emmons has been secured to provide a programme which will be entirely of a Japanese character. Fourteen young women and children, assisted by the Sagamore Mandolin Club and Miss Bessie Robeson, who will appear in her Japanese monologue, "Cherry Blossoms," will furnish the entertainment.

ROD AND GUN.

P. A. McVoy is spending the day hunting in nearby fields.

Clarence Thorn, of Park avenue, left for Pottersville this morning, to pursue the elusive cotton tail.

Charles Dennis, of Richmond street, went to the Flemington neighborhood for two days' shooting this morning.

Philip Jahn, of Scotch Plains, is one of the local gunners who started after game today. He will confine his pursuit to Bedminister vicinity.

William Feiring, the Park avenue barber, headed a party of gunners that went to Flemington vicinity last night to start after rabbits today. He was accompanied by Herbert Overbaugh and Frank Hand.

Al Calloway, who is the best wing shot in this section of the State, got eleven woodcock and four plover in the Passaic Valley this morning. Calloway shoots for market, and sold his birds as soon as he reached town.

"Spill" Welsh, Herbert Overbaugh, Frank Day and Gilbert Murray left for Hunterdon county yesterday for two days' hunting. They will shoot over a country that has not been traversed by gunners in years and is today practically a preserve. The land was owned by a man violently opposed to hunters, and none of them were allowed to cross his holdings. He died last year and his son has let down the bars to a few friends, of whom Overbaugh is one. The Plainfielders are certain of good bags.

ODD BITS OF NEWS.

Killed Chasing Cat Under Bed.—Charles Bowman, a thirteen months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Bowman, of Rolling, Wis., met death in a peculiar manner. In following a kitten which ran under a bed at the Bowman home, the child ran his head against a four-inch spike, which penetrated the brain.

Watch Running in a Cotton Bale—A. M. Thompson, of Greer County, Mo., cut into a bale of cotton a few days ago to get a sample, and the knife exposed a watch in the cotton. He knew that Oklahoma cotton grew silver and gold, but it was the first time he ever knew it to produce a silver watch. Later on it was found to belong to Herman Worth, one of the balers at the Sherman gin. He had not missed it until it was found in the bale of cotton as above stated. The watch was uninjured and still running.

Kittens Born in Transit.—Joseph Kline, a merchant at St. Michael's, Md., while opening a box of goods packed in excelsior, from New York, discovered a handsome cat and four pretty kittens, which were not yet old enough to have their eyes open. Mr. Kline says the box had probably been packed a week, and it is also probable the kittens were born during the journey from New York.

An Island of Wild Horses.—Sable Island lies about eighty miles to the eastward of Nova Scotia and consists of an accumulation of loose sand, forming a pair of ridges united at the two ends and enclosing a shallow lake. Tracts of grass are to be met with in places as well as pools of fresh water. These afford sustenance for large numbers of wild horses or ponies, descended, it is supposed, from stock cast ashore from a Spanish wreck early in the sixteenth century. Twenty-five years ago it was estimated that the ponies numbered from five to six hundred, but at present there are not quite two hundred, divided into five troops.

Highest in the World.—One of the most interesting railway trips in the world is that over the Oroyo Railway, which runs from Callao to the goldfields of Cerro de Paeco. It is considered one of the wonders in the Peruvian world. It is certainly the greatest feat of railway engineering in either hemisphere. Commencing in Callao, it ascends the narrow valley of the Rimac, rising nearly 5,000 feet in the first forty-six miles. Thence it goes through the intricate gorges of the Sierras till it tunnels the Andes at an altitude of 15,645 feet, the highest point in the world where a piston-rod is moved by steam. This astonishing elevation is reached in seventy-eight miles.

Pin Prick Kills at Ninety-nine.—After living over ninety-nine years without any serious illness, Mrs. Matilda Scott, of Bellville, Mifflin count, Pa., five months ago pricked her forehead with a pin. Cancer resulted and she died today. She was the mother of twelve children, and gave seven sons to the Union army in the Civil War. She was the second oldest woman in Central Pennsylvania, and would have reached one hundred next February.

Boasts of Twenty-two Bathless Years.—Because, as the plaintiff alleges, her husband has not bathed for twenty-two years, and, it is said, brags of the fact, Mrs. Phoebe Naumann, wife of a farmer in Marshalltown, Ia., filed a petition for divorce. She asks the custody of seven minor children and $8,000 alimony, or one-third of the defendant's property.

After Campaign Circular Author.

In the closing hours of the campaign in Jersey City two circulars were issued, direct appeals to religious bigotry. One was sent to Protestants and the other to Catholics, and both advocated the election of Mayor Fagan. Both campaign committees denounced the circulars, and the Democratic committee offered a reward of $1,000 for an exposure of the perpetrators. Mayor Fagan supplemented this offer yesterday with one of $500 for information establishing the identity of the authors of the letters and the persons responsible for their issuance.

other words, that McCardell shall not sit or vote on that trial.

"On the other hand, if the decision is to the affect that the Common Council is the legal tribunal, we demand that Messrs. Tyler and Bullock shall neither sit or vote on that trial, nor attempt to do either. Kiely does not want to be tried before men who are both accuser and judge. And I ask whether his demand is not reasonable and fair.

"We count an investigation as open as the day and as exhaustive and complete as possible. But we ask a trial before a fair and impartial tribunal and in that request, I believe that the citizens of Plainfield will heartily join."

WILL THE WINTER BE SEVERE, OR VERY MILD

PREDICTIONS A PLENTY, YOU CAN TAKE YOUR CHOICE.

According to the weather prophets who base their predictions on signs, omens and ancient lore the coming winter is going to be one of the most severe and long, mild and short winters we have had in many years. This may seem somewhat confusing, not to say foolish, at first glance, but you must bear in mind that this general prediction of the coming weather we are to be allotted from now until the ground hog comes out of his hole is based on a consensus of the prophecies of those esteemed as weather-wise in their respective spheres.

An old South Jersey hunter declares that the winter is going to be an unusually mild one from the fact that several flocks of wild geese were observed there lately and all flew high, and that is one of the surest signs, according to this authority, that the season is going to be mild. "Everything is lovely and the goose honks high," seems to be the text on which he bases his argument.

The winter is going to be a long and severe one is the prediction handed out by a Newark fisherman who has made a name for himself as a weather judge by his study of the habits of water fowl and fish. He looks forward to a bitter winter because the crabs of the waters hereabouts deserted their haunts unusually early and the muskrats have taken unusual care in the construction of their winter homes in the meadows. When the winter is to be an open one, says this prophet, the crabs linger in the waters until late in September, but this year they disappeared very early.

The muskrats do not take particular care in the building of their nests when they expect a soft winter. This year they have made their nests warm and strong and very thick.

Another water front prognosticator asserts that the winter is to be mild because the eels have so testified. When the first preliminary frost of the year sets in that opens the chestnut burrs and tinges the leaves on the trees, the elusive eels dig for a winter bed, and they dig deep, says this man. But this year they have not troubled themselves to go very far down in the mud to hibernate. He has gone spearing for them and has wound none of them deeper down in the mud than three feet. If it was going to be a hard, cold winter they would have gone down so far that the most skillful eel spearer could not reach them.

It is going too be a very mild and open winter, asseverates a woodland student. He bases his assertion on the fact that there has been a noticeable absence this autumn of the fiery colors in the leaves of the maple and other trees that take on that tinge at the end of summer. He says that the leaves failed to turn red on time, and no better sign is neded that the winter is going to be one when it won't be necessary to get a new overcoat.

Another woodland sign noted by this same prophet is that the squirrels have not laid in a very large supply of nuts for winter consumption. Still another one of his signs is that the ducks are not feathered as heavily as they are in a season preceding a severe winter.

The failure of a lot of birds to delay their departure for the South until weeks after the time when they usually make their southern journey is another sign to brace him up in his contention that the coming winter is going to be one when the man with a small supply of coal on hand need not worry.

On the other hand, an observant student of birds declares that the feathered tribe have told him by their actions that this is going to be a winter to try both man and beast. I have been down along the coast for several weeks, said this prophet, and I have noticed that the migratory birds, in their southward flights, have acted in an erratic manner. Instead of flying high or low as they usually do, according to the prevailing weather, and in a straight air line directly south, I noticed that they flew about in circles in about the middle distance. All of which is as plan as writing that the coming winter is going to be so variegated in its character that even the instincts of birds fail to tell them accurately what it is going to be. They are simply puzzled, and that explains their uncertain, whirling flight toward the warmer clime. If they were sure it was going to be a mild or a severe winter they would act according to habit and fly high or low, but always in a straight line.

The man who has just come from Maine says that the prevailing opinion in that section of the country on the coming state of the weather, based on the animal signs, is that it is going to be a mighty severe one. The fur of the deer and other animals of that section is of an unusually dark color this year, and this is regarded as an incontrovertible sign of a bleak winter. The coats of the bears are heavy and some of the other animals that have come under the observation of the woodsmen indicate that Nature has provided the animals with ample protection for a long and severe cold spell.

A Newarker who has recently taken apartments in a house where the owners are supposed to supply the heat declares that he has found a sure means of predicting the weather: If the janitor is a colored man who does not like to shovel coal, the coming winter is going to be an exceedingly severe one—on the tenants of the apartment house.—Newark Call.

THE FOUR AGES.

So Life Goes, Always Has Gone and Always Will Go.

Here are man's four views of time:

"You still have forty years to live," said the guardian spirit to the youth.

"It is a long, long time," the youth replied, "and I will do a great deal before it is past."

"You have thirty years yet to live," the guardian spirit said to the still young man.

"Well, that is quite awhile," was the reply. "Probably I cannot do all I had intended, but I will make quite a showing.'"

"You have twenty years to live," the spirit said to the middle aged man.

"Only twenty! Well, I suppose I will have to do the best I can in that length of time."

For the last time the guardian spirit appeared. "You yet have ten years left," he said to the rapidly aging man.

The man sighed. "But ten years," he whispered in reply. "And what can one do in those few days?"

And when the end had come the man looked backword and moaned, "I am leaving it nearly all undone!"

And so life goes, although youth will not believe it, and only old age fully realizes that it is so.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

SPECIAL TAX REPORT SENT TO GOVERNOR

RECOMMENDS TAXATION OF MAIN STEM R. R. PROPERTY AT RATE OF STATE.

Governor Stokes has in his hands the special report of the State Board for the Equalization of Taxes, provided for by joint resolution No. 5, passed by the last Legislature, on the question of the taxation of railroad property. The board met yesterday afternoon, passed upon the final draft of the document and then formally sent it to Edward W. Gray, private secretary of the Governor. The Governor was detained at his home in Millville and was not at the State House.

The Governor received the report after his return last evening. No hint of its contents was official made public. From a reliable source, however, it was learned that the report makes a definite recommendation for the taxation of main stem railroad property at the average tax rate of the State.

It is understood, also, that Charles C. Black, who, as the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1904, stood for the Democratic principle of the taxation of main stem property strictly at local rates for the use of the taxing districts, sent with the document a minority report, embodying his separte views on the question.

The adoption of a report standing for the taxation of main stem property at the average local rate followed the agreement by the board October 24 to this minute: "The board is of the opinion that such adjustment of valuation and rates of the railroad property known as main stem should be made as compared with other taxable property of this State, so as to produce equality of taxation."

LOST $100,000.

Philadelphia Messenger Boy Dropped Certificates in the Street.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10.—George Doherty, a special delivery messenger in the Philadelphia postoffice, lost last night a package containing $100,000 in foreign certificates, consigned to the Tradesmen's National Bank of this city, from Schumacher & Co., 25 Broad street, New York.

Doherty had received two other special delivery letters, the first to be left at Green's Hotel, and the second at 735 Sansom street. As he was about to make the Sansom street delivery he discovered the loss of the $100,000 package, and at once had taken, but could notdadtwrkg had taken, but could find no trace of the missing package.

The boy immediately reported his loss at the Federal building. He tells a plain story, and says he is positive he had the letter just before entering Green's Hotel. He has been suspended pending an investigation.

LOVES IN VAIN.

So Californian Said and Killed Himself in Hoboken.

Hoboken, Nev. 10.—After following a woman across the continent in a vain attempt to persuade her to marry him, only to see her board a steamer for Europe, Walter Herling, from Lindsay, Cal., committed suicide last night in a hotel here.

Mrs. A. Tilloch, a young German widow, arrived in this city from Bremen on October 19 on her way to Lindsay, Cal., to marry a man to whom she was engaged. On Sunday she returned and said she was on her way back to her home in Germany.

The same day Herling also arrived at the hotel. He was suffering from consumption, and Mrs. Tilloch had refused to marry him. Yesterday the widow sailed for Bremen, and last night Herling was found dead, having taken poison. He left a note saying that he had nothing to live for and inclosing $90 to pay his funeral expenses.

FERRY TAX QUESTION.

State Board to Meet at Hoboken Next Thursday.

Hoboken, Nev. 10.—Former Senator W. D. Edwards, counsel for the Hoboken Ferry Company, now owned by the Lackawanna Railroad, has been notified by the State Board of Equalization of Taxes that the board will meet there next Thursday, and that he must have ready then his case in the matter of the city's appeal from a valuation of $540,000 placed on its property by the State Board of Assessors. The city wants the valuation raised to $2,500,000.

Mr. Edwards was told that the board would make a decision in the case next Thursday.

As told before, the ferry property was assessed last year by the State Board of Taxation at $2,500,000. The local assessors last year raised the assessment on the ferry property to $4,000,000.

Violated Health Laws.

The Grand Jury, when it made a final report at Elizabeth Wednesday, presented a lengthy report concerning a violation of health laws at Springfiled, where, on Westfield avenue, hogpens have been permitted to exist much to the annoyance of residents and the detriment of health. There was a presentment against the Board of Health of Springfield, and an effort will be made to abolish the nuisance.

WRITING HISTORY OF TRENTON DIOCESE

REV. FATHER MILLER, OF THE BOROUGH, AIDING IN THE WORK.

Princeton, Nov. 10.—A history of the Trenton diocese of the Catholic Church, from the earliest times down to the present day, is being compiled by Rev. Walter Leahy, a Catholic clergyman of Princeton. Father Leahy has been gathering the data for over two years, and expects to have the record as complete as it is possible to make it, and ready to publish within another year.

Every available source of information has been drawn upon, and Father Leahy has visited personally a large number of the smaller and less-known parishes, and several deserted towns, like Pleasant Mills, once large and prosperous, but now desolate and in ruins. These facts were made not only to get the exact historical facts, but to get the spirit of the old places, so that he would be better fitted to write about them.

Beginning with the building of the first church in the territory now covered by the Trenton diocese, the history of each parish is given. But the story of the early history goes back much further even than that, and describes the early religious conditions in the colonies, including a chapter devoted to the Jesuits of New Jersey and their work. The early history of the churches is very closely related to that of the State, cities and towns in which they were located, and it has taken much time and labor to condense and state clearly the true history of each.

The history naturally divides itself into the periods of administration of the various bishops, thirteen in all, beginning with Bishop Carroll to the present Bishop McFaul. The history of the Trenton diocese proper commences with its establishment under Bishop O'Farrell in 1881. For a number of years prior to that time all South Jersey had been under the government of the bishop of Newark.

The present territory of the Trenton diocese consists of thirteen counties, including all of what was old "West Jersey," the line of demarcation running from Egg Harbor to Easton. The volume will also contain interesting pictures and biographies of the leading churchmen of this section. Father Miller, of Plainfield, is in charge of the biographical part of the work.

A volume published last year, entitled "The Catholic Church of New Jersey," written by Joseph M. Flynn, of Morristown, was a record mainly of the northern part of New Jersey, and Father Leahy's object is to make his work do for Southern Jersey what it did for the northern section.

PROF. AYRES' ARTICLES.

Champions Teachers' Pension in "State and Teacher."

"The State and the Teacher," published in New York, contains an interesting series of articles prepared by Samuel Ayers, A. M., M. D., formerly of this city, but for many years principal of public school No. 32, 357 West 35th street, New York. He is president of the Teachers' Mutual Benefit Association, of that city.

This association seeks to secure such legislation in every State in the Union as will enact laws that provide adequate retirement pay for the veteran teacher. The articles treat with the duty of the State to provide retirement pay for the teacher, the duty of the teacher, the association, the public school teachers' retirement fund and other facts. Mr. Ayers is one of the veteran teachers, and is recognized as an instructor of great ability.

GIRLS' SCHOOL OF ECONOMY

University of Nebraska Gives Instruction as to How to Spend Money.

A good many schools have departments where girls are taught domestic science in a more or less theoretical way, but it remains for Nebraska to establish at its state university a course in which young women may be instructed in the art of spending money to advantage. Every woman, of course, knows how to spend money in the sense of paying it out for something, but it is the belief of a good many men that she is so anxious to get rid of any funds she may have in her possession that she does not receive their value. It is to show her how to make her outlay wisely and judiciously that the new department is to be established.

It will require a fund of $3,000, and some cynical persons aver that this is to be used in furnishing a miniature department store, where lessons in bargains can be given. This is probably not true, but however the task is to be performed, whether with or without object lessons in the shape of actual goods, it is proposed to equip the girls with a knowledge of values in meats, groceries and dry goods, how to distinguish between cotton and wool fabrics; in short, to teach them that large share of the science of housekeeping which consists of judicious buying.

Possibly this art may be taught in schools. Perhaps the professors—these of them who are married men may be able to impart to the students the secret of the value of money, even if they have not been able properly to convince their wives that they (the professors) know all that is to be learned on the subject. It may be that girls in large numbers will flock to this school for the purpose of finding how to make a little money go a long way, but there is reason to suspect that this will not be the case, but that the majority will continue to follow the time-honored method of learning how to economize—namely, by marrying men of small incomes.

UNFORTUNATE OFFSPRING.

Dangers That Beset the Child That Has to Live at Hotels.

It is not, however, the material ills to existence which are the bane of the hotel child; it is the mental and spiritual attitude accompanying this life which is to be deprecated, writes Martha S. Bensley, in Everybody's. It destroys a democratic spirit through emphasizing the difference between the servant and the served; it exaggerates the power of money, fosters a spirit of dependence and unfits the pampered individual for any other kind of life; and, worst of all, in a child so brought up, there can be no understanding or love of home. There may be some future for the child who knows nothing of art—some function for the one to whom literature makes no appeal and who is not sensitive to music; but there is no place in the state for the man who has neither initiative, self-reliance, patriotism, nor love of home. He is a social menace, a disease. The community is better off without this satellite of the manager, parasite of the bell-boy, and source of supply for the waiter.

If there is one child in our community who is superfluous, it is the hotel child. As places for temporary occupation by homeless and childless adults, hotels are to be tolerated; but as residences for children they are without the possibility of excuse.

UNAPPRECIATED COURAGE.

Hiram Was Brave Enough, But His Father Thought He Was a Fool as Well.

In the Tennessee mountains lived a little hunter named Hiram Gates. Although small in size, Hiram was noted for his bravery for miles around in that section of the country where courage is a common asset. Once while hunting he tracked a bear to a small cave. Now a man hasn't one chance in a million fighting a bear in close quarters, but this fact didn't deter Hiram for a minute. Throwing down his gun he put his knife between his teeth and crawled into the dark hole after the animal.

By the greatest good fortune he succeeded in killing it, for the reason that the cave was so small that the bear couldn't turn around to defend himself. Otherwise there probably would have been a different story.

Hiram skinned the bear, and then went home, where he explained the manner of the killing to his father. The old man listened quietly until the tale came to an end, and then, in a high-pitched, quavering voice, said:

"Well, Hiram, I like a brave man as well as anybody, but you're a fool!"

Classes in England.

The reshuffling of the classes in England is the most curious feature of the moment. An "upper class" that no longer has land and the influence which property gives, no longer has the finest houses in town and the most luxurious establishments; that has lost its family portraits, art treasures, jewels and libraries, and that has nothing left but its titles, is much like a knife that has lost its blades.

A Question of Taste.

"I wouldn't marry that old man for his money."

"Well, you've got a poor opinion of my taste if you think I would marry him for love."—Houston Post.

OLD CURE FOR POISON IVY.

Simple Remedy Which Should Effectually Protect from the Disease Anything.

This is the season when the person who takes woods rambles is very likely to suffer for days thereafter with swollen wrists and itching hands, sometimes something resembling ivy poison, says Field and Stream. Poison oak and ivy are much like the copperhead snakes in the hills in that both seem to try hard to torture human beings with their poison, and will do so if they come too close, especially in the spring. A physician once told us that there was nothing that would cure ivy poison quickly, but that doctoring it and letting it alone took about equal time, so he advised washing the parts affected quite often and letting it take its course. Now, the cure consists in a very simple adherence to two things: Preventing the spreading of the poison and drying it up quickly. Its spread can only be prevented by washing frequently with hot water; its cure by anointing the affected parts with tincture grindelia, procurable in any drug store, as soon as the skin has been dried. Every camp outfit should contain a four-ounce bottle of grindelia. Its cure is very rapid, and it soon stops the almost unbearable itching by which ivy poison is first noticed. This remedy is a very old one, but it is not known as well as it should be.

Salmon in the Lakes.

A new era in Great lakes fishing was marked recently, when from the nets of Camash, Smith & Co., of Waukegan, was taken a ten-pound fresh water salmon. Several years ago the United States government planted a number of young salmon in lake Michigan. The fish were not caught later, but it was thought that the waters of the lake were not favorable to their growth. This year, however, they began to show up, and at Waukegan 25 or 30 have been taken ranging from three to five pounds. These have been replaced by the big one has been hatched and sent to Washington will be made in Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Resource.

The Good Fairy called her godchild and showed her a golden box.

"Take this box," she said, "and lock it carefully in the safe. It contains good advice."

"My mistress," replied the assistant, "why should we lock up good advice? No one will ever take it."—Puck.

Dressed to Kill.

Nero was not satisfied with the slaughter he was causing in the arena. "This is too tame," he said; "I'll have to get an automobile." Then he donned a pair of goggles and a rubber coat and announced to the Roman senate that he was dressed to kill.—Brooklyn Life.

German Publications.

In Germany last year 28,378 books were published. Of this number only 3,954 volumes were ranked as "belles lettres." Fiction was included under this head. The output is not so astonishing as it seems, for pamphlets and university leaflets are reckoned as books in the list.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

FOR THE KITCHEN.

Soup from Baked Bones—Soup is just as good made from baked bones as from fresh ones.

Soups and Stews—Never allow a cake of fat to remain on the top of soups and stews. It makes them turn sour more quickly than they otherwise would.

Storing Fruit—It is absolutely essential that a room in which fruit is to be stored should be perfectly dry, and is so constructed that it maintains an equal temperature at all times, otherwise the fruit will not keep.

To Keep Carrots—Carrot and turnips will keep for weeks, if not for months, if placed in layers in a box of sand.

In Laying a Cloth—In laying a cloth the greatest care should be taken that the tablecloth is exactly in the center, otherwise the whole effect is spoiled.

Pudding Sauce—The scrapings of a jam-pot (about one tablespoonful), if heated, will ,with the addition of two teaspoonsful of hot water and the same of lemon juice, make an excellent sauce for a boiled pudding.

FUR-LINED GARMENTS.

Among cloakmakers it is said that for this winter the fur-lined garment will take precedence. This view is being backed up by heavy purchases by retailers, and all that is needed to make a record for the fur-lined coat is a moderate volume of reorders. Capes in light colors have become strong sellers. On separate coats in semi-fitted and tailored styles retailers are doing a fair business, and are calling for more goods. The coverts and black coats are in the lead. Empire coats are decided favorites in the high grade lines and are being ordered by the trade in all sections. Broadcloth in all shades is being used extensively, both for suits and coats.

As the season develops a larger share of business is being done on raincoats in the box coat style. This is a novelty of this season and is creating a favorable impression on buyers. Princess suits, which give the best results in the short coat variety, are selling for the medium priced trade. The fitted Eton jacket used in combination with this style of suit makes the complete garment especially adapted to winter wear. In sleeve effects no radical styles are being taken heavily. Those of moderate dimensions are most in favor.

HER MISTAKE.

There is one young woman in this city whose benevolent disposition received a severe shock last Sunday evening. She was at church and sat directly behind a tall, well dressed stranger with a raveling hanging in his collar.

Being one of those generous hearted, whole souled girls who grow up to be motherly old ladies, a friend of everybody in town, she thought how glad she would be in some kind hearted girl would do as much for her father were he to go to church with a raveling hanging down his back. So when the audience rose for the first hymn she concluded to pick it off.

Carefully raising her hand she gave a little twitch, but it was longer than she supposed, and a foot or more appeared. Setting her teeth she gave a pull and about a yard of that horrible thread hung down his back. This was getting embarrassing, but, determined, she gave it another yank and discovered that she was unraveling his undershirt.

Her discomfiture was so painful that chloroform would not have relieved her sufferings nor a pint of powder hidden her blushes when the gentleman turned with an inquiring look to see what was tickling his neck.—Kentucky Herald.

WRINKLE HABIT.

No one admires it.

It comes with age.

But worry helps it along.

So does excitment or anger.

The best preventive is to keep cool.

It won't hurt to steam the face once a week with hot cloths.

Nor to massage once in a while with a good skin food.

It's a good thing, too, to compose your face into a pleasant expression before you go to sleep.

It is very necessary, also, that you eat the right foods.

And, of course, fresh air and cleanliness and a brisk nightly massage will keep the furrows away.

But when they do come, don't acquire any more than necessary by fretting about it.

The wrinkle habit that comes with age ought to be accepted philosophically. Forget it.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

CAKE RECIPES.

Tea Cakes.

Two and one-half cups of flour, two teaspoons cream tartar, one egg (not beaten), half cup sugar, two teaspoons melted butter, one cup milk with one teaspoon soda dissolved in it, a little salt; beat all together; bake in gem pans and eat with hot butter.

Chocolate Cake.

One-half cup of butter, one cup sugar, one-half cup of milk, two cups flour, two eggs, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cinnamon; mix this all together, then take one-half cup milk, two-thirds cup of sugar, two squares of chocolate, one teaspoon vanilla; put in a dish and set in hot water until chocolate is dissolved; then break yolks of two eggs and add to the chocolate mixture; then mix with the above and bake in a moderate oven. Use a boiled frosting made with one cup of sugar and whites of the two eggs.

Rich Coffee Cake.

One-half cup of butter, one cup sugar, two tablespoons molasses, one-half cup strong coffee, one tablespoon brandy, two eggs, two cups flour, one-half teaspoon salt, two level teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-quarter teaspoon cloves, one-quarter teaspoon nutmeg, one-half cup raisins (stoned), one-third cup currants, two tablespoons citron, cut fine; cream the butter, add gradually the sugar, then the molasses, eggs, fruit and coffee; sift together thoroughly the flour, salt, baking powder, cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and add to the mixture; bake in a cake pan fifty minutes.

MEDITATIONS OF A SPINSTER.

The successfully dodged kiss is the one that isn't really wanted.

A man hates to think of his son getting married and getting into all the trouble he did.

Women may at last learn to play cards now that they can make money at it.

It must be awfully nice to be rich enough to marry for love with impunity.

Most white lies have black linings. —Philadelphia Telegraph.

BRIDGE BID REJECTED.

Perth Amboy Finds It Does Not Agree With Specifications.

Perth Amboy, Nov. 10.—The Perth Amboy City Council last night rejected the bid of Sandford & Harris for the construction of the city's part of the approach to the Amboy bridge across the Raritan. It was the only bid received, and an examination showed that it did not conform to the specifications of City Engineer Forrest L. Smith. The plans call for a planked trestle thirty-six feet wide on the easterly side of the extension of Sheridan street. Sandford & Harris bid on a structure on the westerly side of the street, and their plans would make necessary a sharp bend in the approach at a height from the ground of nearly thirty feet.

Charles A. Bloomfield, who is fighting against the completion of the bridge during the term of th present Board of Freeholders, last night informed John Pfeiffer, alderman-at-large, that he has information that the government is about to order removed 750 feet of the present structure. He urged that no contract be awarded at this time for the Perth Amboy work. The council had already decided that it could not give Sandford & Harris the bid under the circumstances. New bids will be advertised for at once.

New York's and New Jersey's Population.

The announcement of the census totals for the State of New York reveals the fact that the rate of growth in that commonwealth during the past five years was considerably below that of New Jersey. From 1900 to 1905 the population of New York increased eleven per cent., while that of New Jersey went up fourteen per cent. It was expected that the ratio of increase would be larger here than in the Empire State, but the percentage is greater than even the most sanguine Jerseymen anticipated.

But the most surprising fact about the census figures just announced is that the growth of the city of New York has been nearly equalled, proportionately, by Newark. The increase shown in the metropolis was 16.8 per cent., while Newark's percentage was 15.1. When all the conditions are considered, this is astounding. The rush of people to New York in the past five years has been pronounced phenomenal. The big city has drawn to its recruits from abroad. But while it has been doing so Newark has been keeping up with the pace of its giant neighbor, or at least falling behind only imperceptibly. And it is further to be expected that this city will greatly increase its ratio of growth in the next five years, the reasons for such prediction having been given by the News recently. If, therefore, New York city maintains the same rate of growth as in the past five years, Newark will make a better showing, by comparison, when the figures of the Federal census of 1910 are made public.—Newark News.

AMUSEMENTS.

There is no young and successful actor of the day who brings as much enthusiasm to the practice of his art as Thomas Jefferson—none who shows his youth so convincingly—none who can create a laugh or coax a tear so easily and gracefully. It behooves those members of the new generation who are not yet acquainted with the wonderful art of this player, who have not yet heard his Rip Van Winkle laugh or toast "you or your family," to avail themselves of the opportunity which is now offered and learn the value and cheeriness of clean cut, wholesome, happy comedy, and discern the secret of the smile and power of this popular actor. He will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night in "Rip Van Winkle."

Walter Fessler is a theatrical manager of wide experience, and the author of a number of successful plays. He knows what the public wants, and consequently caters to his patrons, which accounts for his success both as a playwright and manager. He gives the public what they demand and in his latest production, "The Life That Kills," de delivers the goods, all silk and a yard wide. It will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

There seemed to be some doubt from the Knockers' camp when Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger announced the starring tour of McIntyre and Heath; the calamity howlers predicting that the American theatregoing public would not stand for comedians in blackface in first class theatres. This theory, however, was quickly dispelled by the tremendous, in fact, unprecedented success of "The Ham Tree," McIntyre and Heath's vehicle in New York. This is quite interesting, inasmuch as the leading comedy role and prima donna part of "Simple Simon Simple," the new Nixon & Zimmerman musical extravaganza, to be seen here at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night, are also of the burnt cork variety. Little Jerry Sullivan as the pickaninny Mose, and Bertie Dale as the pickaninny Mammy are both genuine novelties in the fun producing line.

"Bankers and Brokers," the musical play in which B. E. Forrester will present the well known dialect comedians, Yorke and Adams, this season, will be a new departure in the way of musical comedy. It combines good, healthy fun, lively pretty girls, handsome costumes and graceful dancing into an effective entertainment, further enhanced with elaborate scenery and dazzling effects. Unlike the average so-called musical comedy, "Bankers and Brokers" has a well defined plot, there are a series of skilfully devised stage pictures and the chorus possesses more than the customary amount of good looks. Yorke and Adams, as two Hebrew-Americans, who are desirous of butting into Wall street, have exceptional opportunities to display their infectious humor and wholesome comedy. The comedy will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, November 17.

Edward R. Salter's "Ikey and Abey," the latest success in the musical comedy world, comes to the New Plainfield theatre Monday night, abounding in bright and catchy comedy specialties, new and taking songs, smart dances and sparkling musical gems. The company has been selected with especial care, and it is claimed that the production outclasses any of the musical comedies presented here this season. The costuming is new and costly and every attention to detail is complete.

Charles E. Blaney will present his latest and best melodrama, "The Curse of Drink," at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday night, November 18. The play is said to be an exceedingly novel treatment of the temperance theme and is filled with features and incidents never used in a drama of this kind before. Scenic effects have been made an important part of the production. These include a railroad scene which shows a full size locomotive running at full speed, the advent of which offers an opportunity for a rescue in which a young fireman saves his sweetheart from what seems certain death on the rails. It is a picture of great realism.

"The Unwritten Law," a play for the people, will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre on Tuesday night, November 14. If a supposed friend entered your home and attempted to poison the mind of your wife against you, and tried to lead her to believe you were false to her, what would you do? Fight? You bet you would. No need to wait for the action of the law; you would take it in your own hands and no jury would condemn any man who thus protected the honor of his home. Many cases have there been of this character, and this forms the motive of "The Unwritten Law." Mark E. Swan, the author of the play, has woven a powerful story of heart interest and one that will appeal to every man, woman and child who witnesses it. Nothing stronger has been written and the play will live, for it is founded on a law implanted in the breasts of human beings and teaches a moral that will linger in the minds of the auditor.

TROLLEY COMPANIES MULCTED FOR $20,000

LOST MANY DAMAGE SUITS DURING LAST COURT TERM.

The jury in the case of Charles Arny, of Elizabeth, against the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway Company, which was tried Saturday in the Circuit Court, returned a verdict in favor of Arny, awarding him $1,800.

Arny, who was represented by Lawyer J. A. Kiernan, sued to recover for having been ejected from a trolley car on July 8 last, because, as he claimed, he refused to pay double fare demanded by the conductor. The conductor and motorman in ejecting Arny used such force that he was bruised somewhat and his clothing torn.

This judgment is the fourth which has been rendered against the Public Service trolley companies at the present term of court, making a total of $13,225.

In addition to these cases the trolley companies have prevented four cases from coming to trial by settling with the plaintiffs, and it is probable that the cases thus settled, together with the $13,225, will reach a total in damages of at least $20,000. The trolley companies have won two cases during the term, and there are still nine cases on the court calendar against them to be tried.

The largest verdict found against the Public Service this term was that obtained by Christian H. Von Rhein, who was injured by being run down by a car while driving along the Boulevard on his way to Newark.

The case of Benjamin F. Stott, of Elizabeth, against the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway Company, which was tried in the Circuit Court, ended in a verdict for the company.

Scott, who was represented by Lawyer J. A. Kiernan, sued to recover damages for injuries received more than a year ago while a passenger on a special car which was being run from Elizabeth to Plainfield, carrying members of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, who were on their way to Plainfield to institute a new lodge of the order.

While the car on which Stott was a passenger was rounding a curve at Roselle it was rammed by another car.

GOLD TEETH HER UNDOING.

Hoboken Detective Arrests Woman "Wanted" by Kansas Police.

Hoboken, Nov. 10.—"Three gold teeth, very prominent," mumbled Detective-Sergeant Weinthal as he paced up and down a railway platform in this city last night. "Three gold——"

"What's the matter?" demanded a friend, who heard the muttering.

"Never mind," said the sleuth, waving the questioner away. "Three gold teeth, very—oh, I'll know her all right."

The local police had received a telegram from Kansas City, Kan., asking for the arrest of Minnie Cogswell, who would arrive on a train from Chicago. She was described as being thirty-five years old and "having three gold teeth, very prominent." The dispatch said she was wanted for the larceny of $114 from Joseph Parmenta, of Paola, Kan. Detective-Sergeant Weinthal was waiting when the train arrived. Anxiously he scanned the passengers who alighted. Two car lengths away a woman opened her mouth in speaking to a porter.

"Three gold—very—," said Weinthal, and he went forward and tapped her on the shoulder. She admitted her identity and was locked up. She denied she had stolen the money and said it was given to her by Parmenta.

HIS CONDITION SERIOUS.

Summit Man, Shot and Beaten, May Not Recover.

Summit, Nov. 10.—Antonio Gonnette, about twenty-seven years old, who was shot and so seriously wounded Tuesday that his life is despaired of, is still in a dangerous condition. A cousin, Samuel Riola, was visiting him at his home, 77 Springfield avenue, and with two or three other men they were examining a new revolver.

Believing that all the bullets had been removed from the weapon, Riola was revolving the chambers while the weapon was pointed toward Gonnette. Suddenly it exploded and a bullet was embedded in Gonnette's abdomen.

It was clearly an accident, but Riola, fearing trouble, left after the shooting. Chief Brown learned of his whereabouts last night and friends have promised to surrender him. Gonnette is at the Orange Memorial Hospital.

At the Orange Memorial Hospital Gonnette was operated upon last night, but the bullet, which has lodged somewhere in the thoracic cavity or the upper part of the abdomen, could not be recovered. His condition is very serious and he may die. The man who, it is said, did the shooting, visited the hospital last night and expressed great sympathy for the wounded man. The two men seemed to be on the best of terms.

FUSION IS ROUTED IN WASHINGTON, N. J.

INDEPENDENTS BLAME VOTING MACHINES FOR THEIR DEFEAT.

Washington, N. J., Nov. 10.—There is a difference of opinion in Washington in regard to the cause of the defeat of the Independent party. The victorious ticket for municipal offices was a fusion of Democrats and Republicans. The Independents blame the voting machines for their defeat, claiming the voters were afraid to cut the ticket for fear of spoiling their vote. They, therefore, voted straight tickets. It was expected that many Independents, being more anxious about the borough election, would not vote for county offices, there not being any on the Independent ticket. There were 932 votes cast out of registry of 1,046.

The highest vote for any county office was that for State Senator. The combined votes of Johnston Cornish (Dem.), Winthrop Rutehreford (Rep.), and Albert Buell (Pro.) was 816, showing that 116 voters did not register a choice for that office. There was also a difference of seventy-two in the total vote for Senator and Mayor. The difference between the other county offices and that cast for borough officials was more marked, Johnston Cornish apparently receiving many votes when his running mates were ignored. The fact that Mayor Petty ran behind his ticket is explained by his friends as being a fault of the voting machines.

The successful Mayoralty candidate had his name on both the Republican and Democratic tickets. The Republican ticket was on the top row of the machine, with the Democratic beneath. Next in order was the Socialist, and the Prohibitionists were fouth. The Independent ticket was at the bottom of the machine. It is claimed by Mayor Petty's friends that many voters pushed the pointers up from Dr. Smith's name and those of his running mates on the municipal ticket, with the intention of voting for Mayor Petty and the Independent ticket, but instead they either pushed the pointers down on the next ticket, the Democratic, or else struck the Prohibition or Socialist pointer and lost a tally for the Independent ticket. It is claimed that under the old ballot reform law the fusion ticket would have been swamped. Scores of voters declared, after voting, that they did not know how they had voted.

On the freeholder question the proposition to change the large board for three commissioners was carried by a vote of 86 to 60. Most of the voters forgot to vote on the proposition until they were outside the curtain. The vote for Johnston Cornish for Senator was complimentary. He received 374 plurality over Winthrop Rutherford, when his friends were only claiming 300 at the most. The vote in Washington township was as follows: Cornish, 186; Rutherford, 52; Firth (Dem.) for Assembly, 173; Mingle (Rep.), 65; Kerr (Dem.) for sheriff, 184; Merrick (Rep.), 56; Hoagland (Dem.) for county clerk, 183; Pursel (Rep.) 58. The proposition to change the freeholder system was defeated by a vote of 133 to 23 i nthe township.

BOY LOST $100,000 PACKAGE.

Foreign Certificates for Bank Dropped in Street.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10.—George Doherty, a special delivery messenger in the Philadelphia postoffice, lost, Wednesday night, a package containing $100,000 in foreign certificates, consigned to the Tradesmen's National Bank, of this city, from Schumacher & Co., 25 Broad street, New York.

Doherty had received two other special delivery letters, the first to be left at Green's Hotel, and the second at 735 Sansom street. As he was about to make the Sansom street delivery he discovered the loss of the $100,000 package, and at once retraced his steps over the route he had taken, but could find no trace of the missing package.

The boy immediately reported his loss at the Federal Building. He tells a plain story, and says he is positive he had the letter just before entering Green's Hotel. He has been suspended pending an investigation.

LONDON'S NEW LORD MAYOR.

London, Nov. 10.—Alderman Walter Vaughan Morgan was inaugurated Lord Mayor of London yesterday, succeeding Sir John Pound, with all the time-honored ceremonies.

The new lord mayor went in state through the city streets to the law courts, where he took the oath of office. The procession, in which the various associations of the city took part, was imposing, and the route was lined by immense crowds of people.

Among the floats was one typifying Peace, which was draped with immense American flags, a tribute to President Roosevelt's success in ending the war in the Far East.

COURT BATTLE FOR $60,000,000 ESTATE

MRS. WEIGHTMAN-WALKER DENIES INFLUENCING FATHER IN ANSWER FILED

Philadelphia, Nov. 10—Mrs. Anna Weightman-Walker, sole legatee under the will of William Weightman, late multi-millionaire chemist, has filed an answer in the Orphans' Court to the petition of Charles D'Invilliers, that the will be set aside.

Mr. D'Invilliers is the guardian of Martha Rogers Weightman, who is the daughter of Mrs. Jones-Wister by the latter's first husband, Dr. William Weightman, Jr., a son of the testator. Mr. Weightman's will devised his entire estate, valued at $60,000,000, to his only living child, Mrs. Weightman-Walker.

The petition of Mr. D'Invilliers charged that Mrs. Weightman-Walker exercised undue influence over her father and that he was not of testamentary capacity when the document was executed. The petition asks that the estate be divided into three equal parts, Mrs. Weightman-Walker to receive one-third and the remaining two-thirds to go to the heirs of the testator's sons. In her answer Mrs. Weightman-Walker says:

"On or about August 1, 1895, the decedent did execute a last will and testament, and, so far as my knowledge and information goes, it is the last will and testament of the said William Weightman, and I have no knowledge or information as to any other instrument or pretended instrument affecting or varying its terms."

Mrs. Walker also denied having unduly influenced her father.

BONAPARTE TO BAR FIGHTING.

Secretary of Navy to Take Drastic Action.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Secretary Bonaparte has before him the report of Superintendent Sands of th Naval Academy, on the death of Midshipman Branch, of New York, and will take drastic action.

The secretary will do everything in his power to break up the practise of fighting at the academy. He considers this practice a relic of barbarianism handed down from old English days.

It is expected that Midshipman Meriweather, who fought Branch, will be dismissed, and probably every one who had any part in the fight.

SHE TOLD THE VERY TRUTH

The woman had just come back from California, where she had been for a year. She was giving all her friends the glowing accounts people always do give of that reputed land of milk and honey. She said it was lovely, and she had had a splendid time, and she wouldn't have come East for many moons yet, only that the head of the house had been writing rather discontentedly of late, and she thought a year's leave of absence was all a devoted wife ought to ask.

"But California's the place to go," she said; "oh, yes, there's no doubt about that."

But by the bye the girl who thinks of going out there and living in a tent for a year or so got her in a corner and began to ask some leading questions, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

"Now, tell me the exact truth," entreated this latter young person, "because I'm not going to give up a paying job and squander all my savings to go to California unless it is the earthly paradise people say it is. Did you really like the climate?"

"Well, not so much," admitted the woman. "In San Francisco and thereabouts it was horribly wet and foggy—as muggy as a London fog, a good deal of the time."

"Hum! Must have been depressing," said the girl, making mental notes.

"It was, a little," acknowledged the woman.

"Rain much?"

"Very little. Down around San Diego they hadn't had any rain for three years."

"Rather dusty, wasn't it?"

"I should say!" exclaimed the woman. "Everything bare and pinched. Not a speck of green anywhere down there. I must say I was terribly disappointed in much of the scenery."

"Living cheap, I suppose?" suggested the girl. "Oranges and that sort of thing for almost nothing?"

"Well, no, I can't say so. We never paid a cent less than thirty-five cents a dozen—and we used a good many, because in most places we didn't like the water. Sometimes we could n't get them at all."

"I suppose," said the girl, "it was for the same reason that we get cream here in town, while our country cousins drink skim milk. We were probably buying oranges right here in Philadelphia for less than that last winter."

"I'll tell you something," said the woman in a confidential whisper. "The land is cursed with fleas. You can't shake them off. They set you nearly crazy. If you are so unlucky as to take one into the theatre with you, you can't sit still ten minutes. I never endured such misery. It may have been a bad season. Maybe, too, you can get acclimated to the little pests. It was true of every place in California I visited."

"Well," said the girl, "much obliged. I guess you've saved me about five hundred dollars. All my life I've heard of California as a garden spot, where the skies are always blue and the land green and flowered, and the trees breaking down with fruit which is to be had for the picking. Nobody ever told me anything about desolation and dust, and London fogs, and fruit famines and fleas. You're the first person who's ever told me the real truth about it. I guess I'll stay home, where the land is green and pleasant, where oranges are cheap, and where we don't have fleas in the theatre, anyhow."

And the girl went straight to tell her chum that that California trip was off.

POSSE AFTER A NEGRO.

Hunting for the Colored Man Who Attacked Woman and Beat Her.

Salem, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Belle Lippincott, forty-five years of age, housekeeper for James Robinson, of Quinton Township, was badly, though not fatally, injured by an attack in the shed at her home yesterday by a negro. The negro entered the shed and asked for the man of the house. To the reply that he was inside the negro said the woman did not tell the truth and demanded her money. When she started to run he felled her with a club.

Mrs. Lippincott regained her feet and ran to the yard, where she was again attacked and choked and beaten until insensible. The negro then disappeared and as yet has not been apprehended. Sheriff Johnson and a posse are searching the surrounding country. Mrs. Lippincott failed to recognize her assailant.

POLICE ACT UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Decision Rendered by Justice Dixon in Supreme Court at Trenton This Morning.

IT IS NOT FINAL

Those Interested Have Recourse to the Court of Errors and Appeal and Writ May Be Filed.

The act under which the new police-board was appointed by Mayor Buckle was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court at Trenton this morning.

The decision was rendered by Justice Dixon, in the test case brought about by the appointment of a commission in Bayonne. It is based on the ground, among others, that the law tends to legislate in and interfere with the internal affairs of municipalities, which, the court holds, should not be done.

At the same time as the Bayonne case came up for action, the court was considering the appeal of the same character filed by Peter Egenolf and others, on behalf of the Elizabeth opponents of the act. Justice Dixon dismissed the action because Egenolf and the others sued as individuals, on the ground that its issuance to individuals in such cases was not the "appropriate function of a writ of certiorari." At the same time, the ruling continued, the questions involved were the same as in the Bayonne case, and although the action, of itself, was thrown out, the ruling in the Bayonne case applied to the points of law that came up in the Egenolf proceedings, and took the same course in the matters involved.

This decision, while a heavy and probably a finishing blow to the police act, is not absolutely final. Recourse to the Court of Errors and Appeal, on a writ of error, is still open to those who are interested in having the act sustained. It is said on excellent authority that the Elizabeth officials have perfected arrangements for moving a writ of error, but up to noon today no notice of such action had been given. Among the lawyers gathered about the court it appeared to be the general impression, however, that no writ would be sued for, because Justice Dixon is perhaps the most eminent and best posted constitutional authority on the Supreme Court bench.

Unless a stay is granted in connection with an application for a writ of error, the decision throws the newly appointed police board out of power. A writ of itself does not operate as a stay, according to a well-posted lawyer with whom a Daily Press reporter spoke regarding the decision this morning.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh heard the decision rendered. He spoke of it and its effects to a Daily Press reporter after his return to Plainfield at noon.

"The decision puts the police situation in this city back exactly to where it was before Mayor Buckle appointed the commission," he said. "And I do not think that any attempt to carry the matter to the Court of Errors and Appeals will be made. Judge Dixon is considered to be the ablest jurist on the bench of New Jersey, and a reversal of his opinion is scarcely to be looked for.

"Before the Mayor appointed the commission," continued Mr. Marsh, "I advised him that the act under which he proceeded would in all probability be declared unconstitutional on the grounds that Judge Dixon cited in his decision this morning."

Messrs. McCardell and Marshall, both members of the commission appointed by Mayor Buckle, were asked to give their opinion on the verdict, but declined to be interviewed.

MADDENED RUNAWAY DASHES IN SIDEWALK

YOUNG WOMEN OCCUPANTS OF RIG MIRACALOUSLY ESCAPE INJURY.

In a brief but thrilling runaway which occurred on East Second street at 10 o'clock this morning, Miss Marion Westcott, daughter of Dr. F. C. Westcott, of Fanwood, and Miss Cook, of Scotch Plains, and almost miraculous escapes from serious injury if not death.

They were driving in Dr. Westcott's runabout, Miss Westcott holding the reins, when at East Second and Washington streets the horse took fright at something and bolted. The young woman pluckily clung to the lines, but the animal got the bit between its teeth and she was helpless. By the time the runaway reached Park avenue it was going at terrific speed, with both occupants of the vehicle sitting speechless, but doing what they could to bring the maddened horse to a stop.

Owing to the materials for the Trust Company building in the street and a big truck standing at that point, the way ahead of them was completely blocked, and the animal swung against the curb near the theatre. The wagon turned completely over, with Miss Westcott beneath it, while Miss Cook was hurled across the sidewalk, striking against a building. Patrolman O'Keefe, who was almost immediately on the scene, assisted them to Schreiner's drug store, where it was found they were practically unhurt. Miss Westcott had a gash across the forehead and a few bruises, while Miss Cook had several severe contusions.

The horse tore itself loose from the runabout, but was soon caught, practically uninjured. The vehicle was badly wrecked.

MUSICAL SEASON OPENING.

Joseph McIntyre to Give a Series of Concerts at the Casino.

Joseph McIntyre, who appeared here with the Richard Arnold Sextette last year, will give a series of chamber concerts at the Casino. The first will be given on December 7.

It is hardly necessary to say anything of Mr. McIntyre's standing as an artist to the musically-wise of Plainfield. Both here and abroad he is admitted to be a thorough musician in all that the term means.

Mr. McIntyre will be assisted by the world famous cellist, Vladimir Dubinsky, of Moscow, first cellist in Walter Damrosches' New York Symphonie Orchestra and Henry Burck, first violin and concert master for Victor Herbert's New York Orchestra. The vocal soloist for the first concert will be Glen Hall, New York's young tenor. Gwilym Miles, the Welsh baritone, has been engaged for the second cencert in January.

The success of the concerts is certain judging by the interest and support with which the proposition has been met by all the musically and socially prominent people of the city, and it is hoped that Mr. McIntyre will meet with enough enthusiasm that he may continue to expend his musical energies and talent in upbuilding the musical life of Plainfield.

Fractured Leg by Fall.

While attempting to reach a clothesline from the porch at her home, at 810 West Fifth street, Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Anna Vieweg, mother of Fred Vieweg, fell off the porch and fractured the ankle bone of her left leg. She was assisted to the house and the ambulance was summoned and the injured woman was taken to the hospital, where the broken bone was set. Although Mrs. Vieweg is well advanced in years, her condition is considered favorable and the physcian in charge believes that the fracture will mend in a few weeks.

Crippled Actor Doing Well.

Paul Barnett, the actor who broke his right leg in a fall on the stage of the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, is doing nicely at Muhlenberg Hospital. The break is about four inches above the ankle, but is one that will mend without crippling him. His wife, who is an actress, reached the city yesterday afternoon. The company of which she is a member is appearing at Newark this week.

DR. REED ON Y. M. C. A.

College President Speaks For the Association at First M. E. Church.

IS FOUNDED ON FAITH

Its Work Among Men of All Classes—Advice to Young Men at Y. M. C. A. Weekly Meeting.

Rev. Dr. George E. Reed, president of Dickinson College, spoke at the morning service of the First M. E. church yesterday in support of the work of the Y. M. C. A. The service was devoted to the interests of the association's work, and a special collection for its benefit was taken up. The offering amounted to $50.

Dr. Reed paid a high tribute to the labors of the Y. M. C. A. in winning young men to Christianity. He emphasized this feature of its work, the most salient in its make up, very strongly, calling attention to the unqualified faith in the efficacy of the word of God, that is the fundamental basis of its existence.

He sketched the history of the association and told of the work it was doing among all classes of men. He referred to the foothold it had gotten in the college world, and how it was reaching, through that, to the hearts and the minds of the educated classes. Speaking of its activity among the laboring classes, he dwelt on the work it was doing for the betterment of the railroad men, whose everyday heroism in the service of commerce and travel Dr. Reed vividly pictured. He called attention to the fact that 10,000 railroad workers die every year in the discharge of their duty, and that fully 100,000 bear the marks of wounds gained in service during the twelvemonth.

G. M. Rittenhouse and President J. W. Gavett, of the Y. M. C. A., spoke on the needs of the association. It was stated that the Y. M. C. A. here needed $3,000 over and above what it received in dues and rentals each year.

Dr. Reed spoke again in the interest of the association at the regular 4 o'clock meeting at Y. M. C. A. Hall. To mark Dr. Reed's presence at the meeting there was special music by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, under the leadership of Conductor M. A. Korff. The attendance was large.

In the course of his address Dr. Reed advised young men to cling to the Christian belief of their fathers. He had no patience, he said, with those who advised the young man of today to doubt everything except that which he had figured out to be the truth for himself. In everything but religion, he said, all men were willing to accept statements of truth, as such, on the authority of those who had thought out and decided the questions involved, and he could not see why men should not approach religious beliefs in the same way. Young men should embrace and cling to the religion taught them by their fathers. After all, he held, the greatest proof of the truth of Christian faith lay in the pure and godly lives led by the mothers and fathers who believed in and practiced it.

Prayer and faith in Christ, he declared, comprised the greatest heritage a parent could hand down to his children. The young man who started out in life without the memory of prayers and Christian life in his home was terribly handicapped for the struggle in which he must engage.

SPECIAL MEETINGS STARTED.

First of the Series at Monroe Avenue Church Attended by Large Gathering

The first of the series of special meetings to be held at the Monroe Avenue church took place last evening with a large gathering present. Rev. Mr. Mooney was in charge and gave an excellent discourse, his remarks arousing intense interest.

For the remainder of this week, many of the best known clergymen in this city have been secured to assume charge. Tonight the pulpit will be occupied by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie and tomorrow night by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss. The public is cordially invited to attend.

KNIGHTS AT SERVICE

Watchung Council, K. of C. Holds Annual Solemn Vespers.

AT ST. MARY'S CHURCH

Sermon to Members Delivered by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Stafford, President of Seton Hall College.

Before a gathering that filled St. Mary's church to its capacity last night, Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus, conducted its annual solemn vesper service. It was attended in addition by members of the order from Newark, Elizabeth and other places.

The service was in charge of Rev. Father Bogan, rector of St. Mary's, and he was assisted by Rt. Rev. Monsignor John A. Stafford, president of Seton Hall College, who preached the sermon; Rev. Father Westman, of Cranford; Rev. Father Dunphy, of Dunellen, and Rev. Fathers Delehanty and Frederici, of this city. The Knights took their places in the forward part of the church at the beginning of the service, marching in behind the members of the fourth degree in uniform.

Monsignor Stafford's sermon was a masterly discourse and dealt with the chivalry of the Knights and their allegiance to the church as well as the ritual of their organization. He cited instances of the great good for religion accomplished by bodies of men of this kind in ancient days, as well as at the present time, and directly addressing the Knights, he told them that though they were not called upon as were the knights of old to put on an armor of mail, to wield a sword to protect womanhood, and to defend the church, her liberties and her rights, they are called upon to be practical exponents of that faith which glowed in the heart of him under whose banner they are enrolled, when with hymns of praise and thanksgiving he planted the cross, the symbol of faith, on the then virgin soil of the newly discovered world.

The musical features of the service were elaborate and were in charge of an augmented choir. The solo parts were effectively taken by Miss Anna Daley, Miss Elizabeth Day, Albert Matthews and Joseph A. O'Keefe. The benediction was pronounced by Father Bogan.

CAPTURED STOLEN RIG.

Man Who Had It Taken in Custody by Dunellen Constable.

A horse and buggy belonging to F. J. Toole, of Hoboken, and stolen from him last Thursday night, was found at Taylor's Hotel Friday night in possession of a man who gave his name as William Merriman, who stopped at hotel over night. The rig was tracked to Staten Island, where all trace was lost.

Soon after the man with the rig arrived at Taylor's Hotel, Mr. Taylor received a circular letter describing the horse and buggy. It tallied with the one at the hotel. Constable Blaine was notified and early Saturday morning Merriman was arrested, the Hoboken authorities notified and Detective Fallon of that city went to Dunellen, secured the prisoner and took him to Hoboken. The horse and wagon were secured today.

Memory Poor; Cut Unavenged.

Paoli Fusco came into the police station last night with a four inch cut on the back of his head and a story of ill usage at the hands of Luigi Fusco, Salvator Soldo and Tony Maranda. Paoli said they were having a pleasant little time at Soldo's home, St. Mary's avenue, when the others grew peevish and fell on him with knives and things. Patrolman Higgins rounded up the trio. Paoli's cut was sewed up by Dr. Pittis. When the quartette were arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning Fusco suffered from a lapse of memory. He couldn't remember enough about the cutting to warrant proceedings and the complaint was thrown out.

Did Burglars Operate?

S. K. Campbell, superintendent of the gas department of the P. S. C., telephoned to police headquarters late last night that he had discovered a stepladder up against the outside of his house and some burnt matches inside. He guessed burglars had been around, but wasn't sure, because he couldn't tell whether or not anything was missing. He said he'd know more about it when his wife, who is away from home, came back. The police are awaiting the definite information.

Sprinklers Were Out.

The street sprinkling carts made their appearance in the business section of the city today noon. Inquiry at the usual places failed to show upon whose authority they were called out, but it is understood that Mayor Buckle gave the orders.

NEARING CENTURY MARK

Jerusalem Lodge Celebrated Its Eighty-Eighth Anniversary Saturday.

HIGH MASONS PRESENT

State Heads of All Masonic Branches Among the Guests — A Banquet to 200 Marks the Observance.

Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., celebrated its eighty-eighth anniversary Saturday night. Masons of high degree, from many parts of the State, gathered to join in the celebration. It was in more respects than one a very notable Masonic gethering.

Among the two hundred members of the order present were the highest of the high in New Jersey—Grand Master Benjamin F. Wakefield, of Passaic; Grand Commander Jacob Kirkner, head of the Knights Templar, of this city, and Robert Shirrefs, of Elizabeth, head of the Ancient and Accepted Order of the Scotish Rite.

One among the eminent members of the fraternity gave the brethren of Jerusalem Lodge a peculiar and unexpected pleasure by attending. That one was Dr. Henry Cannon, of Elizabeth, senior past grand master of the State and a past master of Jerusalem Lodge. Dr. Cannon is eight-four years old. His attendance at Jerusalem's celebration marked his first appearance at a meeting of a subordinate lodge in something like fifteen years. He had sent word that he would be unable to be present, and his appearance was a great surprise. He was accorded a greeting that must have made him feel amply repaid for the journey. Dr. Cannon is the oldest living member of Jerusalem Lodge. He was in the master's chair fifty years ago, and at that time conducted the Masonic service at the burial of John Allen, the first master.

Among the other State officials present were Deputy Grand Master Walter Chandler, of Elizabeth; Deputy Grand Secretary W. D. Rutan, of Newark; Grand Marshal C. P. Russ, of Elizabeth; Junior Grand Stewart L. A. Burritt, of Bayonne; District Deputy Grand Master W. D. Wolfskeil, of Elizabeth; Past Masters H. C. Cadmus and T. B. Townley, of Elizabeth; F. R. Wyncoop, of Anchor Lodge, this city; J. M. Rowland, E. H. Casterline and C. T. Holt, of Bound Brook; Nathan Armstrong and U. G. Terrill, of Rahway, and E. C. Wise, of Somerville.

All of the eminent visitors spoke. Dr. Cannon's speech was in a reminiscent vein and highly entertaining. It was greeted with enthusiastic and prolonged applause. Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons, pastor of Grace church, who is a member of Portland Lodge, No. 1, the oldest lodge in the Maine jurisdiction, also spoke.

D. Stewart Pope, the organist, played and the lodge's banjo club rendered several selections. The celebration closed with an elaborate banquet in the banquet hall. Covers were laid for two hundred. The dinner favors were miniature aluminum trowels.

Jerusalem is the second oldest lodge in New Jersey Masonry. It was chartered in 1817, on December 27. Its number then was 40, which was changed to the present one in 1853.

TALK ON BULGARIA.

Rev. Lewis Bond, a Missionary, Tells of Land of Brigands.

Rev. Lewis Bond, who for twenty-two years was a missionary in Bulgaria, gave an instructive talk at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning, relating some of his experiences as a missionary. He told of the people of that country, their mode of living, and of the difficulty of reaching them with the gospel of Christ. Mr. Bond said that he lived among the brigands at different times and that on several occasions he narrowly escaped with his life.

Mr. Bond said, however, that Christianity is working a wonderful change among the people, even though it is so difficult to reach them. Mr. Bond used a map of the country to illustrate his talk. He will not return to Bulgaria, but with his wife will soon go to Philadelphia to live with their daughter, Mrs. Kennedy.

EMINENT COUNSEL DISAGREES ON COUNTRY CLUB ISSUE

Griggs And Parsons do Not Concur With Hornblower and Lindabury Regarding Constitution

SAY IT IS BINDING

Later Opinion Holds That Instrument Is a Compact Among Members—It Effects Sunday Golf Proposition.

Exactly opposite to the opinion given by William R. Horpblower, of New York, and R. V. Lindabury, of Newark, that a two-thirds vote provided for in the constitution of the Plainfield Country Club to amend that instrument is unnecessary, is the opinion just given by equally eminent counsel. Former Attorney General of the United States John W. Griggs and John E. Parsons, a recognized authority on the law of partnerships and corporations, declare that "the constitution became a compact between the members of the club participating in its adoption, and that each member upon being admitted to the club became a party to the same compact by accepting membership." In other words, these distinguished lawyers hold that a two-thirds vote is necessary to change the constitution.

All this is material to the issue, which is that the constitution of the club be changed in order to introduce Sunday golf. It will be remembered that the last attempt to bring about the innovation failed, the advocates of the scheme not polling the necessary two-thirds, although a majority of the members clearly favor the proposition. After the defeat there was talk of forming a new organization, where golf could be played seven days in the week. Cooler heads, however, carried the day, and it was arranged to consult eminent lawyers to see whether there was no way to introduce the innovation.

Hope came when Messrs. Lindabury and Hornblower gave their opinion, but its rays have lessened since the opinion of Messrs. Parsons and Griggs shines out in contrast. Those who have been instrumental in the fight against Sunday golf and who obtained the last opinion are George A. Chapman, James W. De Graff, Edward H. Ladd, Henry A. McGee, William D. Murray, Charles W. McCutchen, D. H. Rowland and William B. Wadsworth.

Following are the opinions given by Messrs. Griggs and Parsons:

New York, November 1, 1905.

William D. Murray, Esq.,
New York.

Dear Sir:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of October 17, with which you enclose a copy of the articles of association, constitution, and by-laws of the Plainfield Country Club, with minutes of the special meeting held on July 1, 1896, at which action was taken to incorporate the club, and the minutes of the meeting at which the constitution was adopted. You further advise me that in 1901, the club purchased and improved a valuable tract of land in Middlesex county, and subsequently made an issue of bonds secured by a mortgage upon the said land, which bonds were purchased by the members of the club and others, some of whom at least first examined the constitution and took notice that it contained a provision requiring a two-thirds vote of the members in order to amend it. The language of the constitution referred to is as follows:

"This constitution may be amended by a two-thirds vote of the members present at any annual meeting, or at a special meeting called for that purpose."

You submit for my opinoin the question whether this constitution can be amended by a majority vote of the members of the club, notwithstanding the provisions above quoted.

The Plainfield Country Club was incorporated under an "An Act to incorporate Boat Clubs and other Associations for the promotion of athletic exercises," approved April 24, 1876 (1 General Statutes of New Jersey, p. 88). The method of this incorporation pointed out by the first section of the act is that, there being an association of persons for the encouragement and practice of boating, etc., or other moral and healthful physical exercise, they may at a regular meeting of such association, by a majority of votes, appoint not less than three nor more than nine trustees, and that thereupon the association is constituted a body corporate in law by such name as they shall assume, it being made a duty of the trustees of the association to immediately certify such corporate name under their hands, and file such certificate in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas of the county in which the association has holden its meeting. It will thus be perceived that the method of incorporation does not require and is not calculated for the expression of the special provisions relating to objects of the association, the number of directors, the rights and privileges of members and other matters which are usually contained in the certificate of incorporation of companies formed under the General Corporation Laws. Section 4 of the Act provides that such incorporation is authorized to make, adopt, use and from time to time amend such general form of constitution, and such by-laws for their government as to them shall seem right and proper.

The first query suggested is as to what is meant by a constitution for an association of this kind, and how and to what extent, if any, does it differ from by-laws?

I do not think that in the case of corporations of this kind, the constitution referred to in the statute means the same thing as is conveyed by the term "by-laws." I think the object and purpose of the statute are to have the asso-

MAYOR ADMINISTERS THE OATH OF OFFICE

COUNCILMEN, COLLECTOR, FREEHOLDER AND OTHERS ARE SWORN IN.

All of the newly-elected city officials, with the exception of Councilman Charles C. Randolph, and one or two minor officers, such as justice of the peace and constable, were sworn in Saturday afternoon and night by Mayor James F. Buckle at his office on North avenue. Councilman Randolph was out of town, but as for the others who failed to appear, no excuse is given, except in the case of Constable Peter V. Weaver, who is detained at home with injuries received in a trolley accident.

There were no incidents of special note while the Mayor was performing his duties, and the work of swearing in the officers-elect was short and simple.

The officers sworn in were:

Councilmen W. L. Gloak, Daniel F. Ginna, George P. Mellick, Francis L. Montgomery, Henry D. Hibbard, Leslie M. Daniel, Charles C. Randolph; Tax Collector John W. Murray, Jr., and Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur, together with the justice of the peace and constables.

REV. MR. SHOTT TO BE INSTALLED TONIGHT

PROGRAMME FOR THE SERVICES AT LYONS' FARMS.

Several well known Baptist divines will take part in the installation of Rev. Gideon M. Shott as pastor of the Lyons Farms Baptist church, to be held tonight. There will be a special programme of music and after a prayer by Rev. C. F. Stanley, pastor of the Fifth Baptist church, Newark, Rev. Dr. T. E. Vassar, of Elizabeth, will speak on "Old Memories."

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, will then deliver the installation sermon, to be followed by a vocal solo. The charge to the church will be delivered by Rev. W. G. Fennell, pastor of the South Baptist church, Newark, and the hand of fellowship will be given by Rev. T. E. Vassar, Jr., pastor of the Holmdel Baptist church, Holmdel, N. J., followed by the installation prayer by Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

After an anthem by the choir, Rev. W. B. Greenway, pastor of the Elizabeth Avenue Presbyterian church, Newark, will give interdenominational greetins, and Rev. Frank Fletcher, of New Market, and others will extend personal greetings, followed by closing exercises.

Rev. Mr. Shott was pastor of the Baptist church, Scotch Plains, for some time, and his aggressive work was fruitful. The church to which he has been called is one of the oldest Baptist churches in the State. It was organized April 16, 1769, and the edifice was erected in 1872. The parsonage was built in 1897. It is expected that a number of Baptists from this city and vicinity will attend the installation service.

HER DEATH ACCIDENTAL.

Mrs. Abraham B. Rosell Died from Overdose of Chloral.

The death of Mrs. Abraham B. Rosell at her home in Denville Friday, as told of in Saturday's Daily Press, was due to an accident, and not from natural causes. She had been feeling unwell, and upon the advice of her physician had been taking chloral. In pouring out a dose before retiring Thursday night, she took about eight times as much as she was instructed to by Dr. George H. Foster, of Rockaway. She was found dead in bed by her husband Friday morning, and the facts were brought out at the coroner's inquest.

Mrs. Rosell was in her thirty-third year and with her husband left Plainfield last spring to take possession of the hotel at Denville. Mr. Rosell had conducted what is now the Hotel Iroquois for several years. The funeral was held at Denville this morning and the interment is to be at Jersey City.

Baptist Home Reception.

The harvest home reception will be held at the Baptist Home for the Aged at Newark, tomorrow. It is expected that a number from the local Baptist churches will attend.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The investors who bought the Mahlon Vail place have announced that the tract is to be known hereafter as Edgerton Park. A corps of surveyors have been at work platting it into building lots, which will be sold as cheaply as such things can be bought hereabouts; loans for the building of houses are said to be easy of negotiation with the company. The tract contains 140 acres, which makes something of a showing when sliced up. Reports that a big factory is to be erected on the tract next to the Lehigh—naturally—persist.

George Wiegand, George Wyckoff and a third member of their party shot 39 rabbits and two plump English pheasants in one day's hunting about North Branch Friday. Wiegand was compelled to come home by business Saturday, but the others stayed over until Sunday. Wiegand and Wyckoff shot the pheasants.

There was a large attendance at both special meetings, in the Presbyterian and Methodist churches yesterday afternoon. A big crowd attended the service in the Presbyterian church at night.

Street sprinkling is an improvement the town needs very much and should be started next season. During the day yesterday when the wind was blowing clouds of dust were whirling around towns to the discomfort of everyone who was out.

The Plains bowlers go to Elizabeth tonight to roll a game with the Elizabeth A. C. team on their alleys. The locals are up against one of the strongest teams in the State but hope to make a good showing, if not win the game.

There is still some game left, but to hear the stories told by local hunters one would think the cotton tail race had been wiped out.

FALL ADVISE FOR THE POULTRY MAN

POINTERS ON WHAT TO DO WITH CHICKENS IN PREPARATION FOR WINTER.

It is the custom with poultry raisers to cull out all undesirable fowls at this season and to arrange for the number to be kept over. To do this intelligently the owners should have been observant enough to know the characteristics of each fowl, lest in order to make room for the younger birds or pullets, older hens be sacrificed which would have been most profitable.

One of the undesirable qualities in hens is a desire to brood after laying a few eggs. This is caused generally by too much fat, and is most common in the Asiatic breeds.

Those that are ill-formed—as these characteristics descend to progeny—should be discarded, and also all really old hens, but remember a hen is not to be set aside as useless as long as she furnishes her quota of eggs, even if she be 8 years old. Many will be found to lay as well at 5 or 6 years as at 2.

Hens that are through moulting now will make good winter layers, and it is safe to say that if poultry do not finish moulting by the time cold weather sets in they will be likely to postpone laying until spring, probably, but such will prove good early spring layers and will continue laying all summer, which will be full compensation for the winter inactivity, provided food and room can be spared.

As with the late moulting ones, so with the late pullets; they will not lay until spring, so if room is scarce, discard them. Pullets hatched in March will moult in November or possibly in December, just at the time when eggs are bringing a good price, and there will be no eggs from such until the feather-renewing process is over, so the best plan with them is to dispose of them. Those that are hatched in April will be the pullets to depend on for eggs during the winter.

The Leghorns lay perhaps the earliest of the breeds commonly grown. Some lay at five months. Some poultry raisers give food containing oils, such as linseed meal, mixed with ground food, as oats, wheat, etc., to hasten the moulting. Poultry should be well cared for during this critical process; should be housed in dry quarters and fed well. Some lose their plumage so gradually that the change can scarcely be detected, while others become almost denuded of feathers in a short time.

Such demand extra care.

Do not at this time feed egg-producing food, but only such as is needed to keep up the system during this drain upon it. Some of the hens will probably not lay now, and before giving up, try a change of food. If grail has been their diet, give crushed bone and meat scraps, and corn soaked in lime water and afterward dried. Give a feed of corn thus prepared only two or three times a week.

If you have old ducks to dispose of, pen several together, as they will thrive better if not isolated, as also do chickens. Feed corn meal wet with either milk or water; vegetables and chopped clover at noon and grain at night. Keep a troughful of pure water always at hand. They will be in a marketable condition in ten days or a fortnight.

Now is the time for turkey owners who have turned their flocks adrift to care for themselves, to begin to gather in their scattered flocks, and as the buyer will soon be abroad in the land, it will be best to give some grain twice a day.

Some confine broods before selling, and fatten. This confinement should not last long. Place charcoal within reach, or else mix it in soft food. Change their food, or it will pall, and they will lose flesh.

The unusually wet summer decimated many flocks. Some were wholly destroyed, succumbing to the heat and humid atmosphere, so the coming turkey crop will not be a large one; the outlook is favorable to flock owners, and good prices are expected. Now is the time to engage to consumers, concludes A. C. McPherson, in the Country Gentleman, by engaging beforehand quite a gain may be made over prices paid by middlemen.

THOSE WE LOVE BEST.

They say the world is round, and yet
I often think it square;
So many little hurts we get
From corners here and there.
But one great truth in life I've found,
While journeying to the West:
The only folks who really wound
Are those who love the best.

The man you thoroughly despise
Can rouse your wrath, 'tis true;
Annoyance in your heart will rise
At things mere strangers do;
But those are only passing ills,
This rule all lives will prove:
The rankling wound which aches and thrills
Is dealt by hands we love.

The choicest garb, the sweetest grace
Are oft to strangers shown;
The careless mien, the frowning face
Are given to our own.
We flatter those we scarcely know;
We please the fleeting guest;
And deal full many a thoughtless blow
To those who love us best.

Love does not grow on every tree,
Nor true hearts yearly bloom.
Alas for those who only see
This cut across the tomb.
But, soon or late, the fact grows plain
To all through sorrow's test:
The only folks who give us pain
Are those we love the best.

We have been writing eye sermons in this space for many months. Thousands have read them with profit, and thousands who have fully believed all the logical reasonings made and realized the dire consequences of neglect of vision, yet have put off coming here for no other reason than that they were "too busy."
Now just make up your mind this time that you won't procrastinate any longer, and that you will have the condition of your eyes inquired into forthwith. You'll never regret the resolution you made or forget what a blessing perfect sight is. No charges for examinations, you know.

COURT MUST DECIDE FRANCHISE QUESTION

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF ACT PASSED BY LEGISLATURE IN 1876 ATTACKED.

George L. Record, corporation counsel of Jersey City, appearing as counsel for the Mayor and aldermen of Jersey City before the main division of the Supreme Court Friday at the State House, in an ejectment proceedings against the North Jersey Street Railway Company, raised a novel point touching the question of the granting of limited franchise to public utility companies.

Jersey City is attempting to eject the street railway company from Montgomery street on the ground that its twenty-five-year charter, secured by special legislation, expired in 1884. In 1894 the North Jersey Street Railway Company leased its property and franchise to the Consolidated Traction Company. The road is now being operated by the Public Service Corporation.

The defendant contends that its franchise was extended under an act passed by the Legislature in 1876, providing that any corporation created by virtue of the laws of this State might have its corporate existence extended for any period not exceeding fifty years by filing an amended certificate to its charter to that effect. On this ground, it is claimed, that the franchise was extant in 1894 and still exists.

The argument was heard Friday by Chief Justice Gummere and Justices Hendrickson and Pitney sitting as the main court. Mr. Record attacked the act of 1876 and held it to be altogether nugatory on the ground that it conflicts with the State constitution as amended in 1875. The last clause of paragraph 7 of article 4 of the constitution says: "The Legislature shall pass no special act conferring corporate powers, but it shall pass general laws under which corporations may be organized and corporate powers of every nature obtained, subject, nevertheless, to repeal or alteration at the will of the Legislature."

In his argument Mr. Record maintained that at the first session after the adoption of this amendment, the Legislature, while obeying, as to many classes of corporate powers, the constitutional mandate to pass general laws, yielded to the desire of those interested to preserve official powers about to expire and disregarded the constitutional prohibition against special laws conferring powers by passing the act referred to.

Becoming insistent in his argument, Mr. Record said: "To hold that the act of 1897 is constitutional is an absurdity, because it beats the constitution and evades the fundamental law of the land. There is now a popular demand for limited franchises. Everett Colby contends that no franchise should be granted for a longer time than twenty-five years. Suppose Senator Colby should come to Trenton next winter and get a law to that effect on the statute book. Then suppose we hold that the act of 1875 is general and not special and therefore constitutional, what happens?

"A company is formed to operate a street railroad and is duly incorporated, subject to the new law limiting franchises to twenty-five years. A railway cannot be laid or maintained in a public highway except with legislative permission. We submit, therefore, that with the expiration of the charter cited any railway laid under it would thereafter be an illegal encroachment upon the highway.

"But this corporation, as its charter is about to expire, comes to the Secretary of State under the act of 1876 and under the read seal of the State gets its charter extended for fifty years, and therefore defeats the very purpose of the limited franchise legislation. We claim such a view of the situation is an absurdity. You cannot perpetuate special privileges in nay such manner. To say anything else would be vicious."

The defendants claimed that the act referred to is not an act conferring corporate powers, but aim simply to enlarge the time for which corporate existence may continue. They hold, also, that as the act is one conferring corporate powers it is not a special but a general law. Their last argument was that the plaintiff is estopped to deny the corporate existence for corporate powers of the defendant company on the ground that for nearly twenty years Jersey City has dealt with the company and its successors continuously upon the basis of the continuance of its corporate powers.

In answer to this last point the plaintiffs argued that they tried hard enough, without avail, to get the attorney general af the State some time ago to test the question of quo wrannto proceedings. Because the attorney general refused to do what was claimed to be his plain duty, Mr. Record insisted, should not leave the plaintiffs without remedy. Former Judge Gilbert Collins was associated with Mr. Record in the case.

The counsel for the defendant were R. V. Lindabery, Sherrad Depue, Frank Bergen and William D. Edwards.

The court gave counsel ten days in which to file briefs and took ten days additionhl in which to decide the case.

Plainfield, N. J., November 13, 1905.

Given a permit by some one of the city officials, a lightning calculator, with a book to sell, set up a stand at Second street and Park avenue Saturday night and soon had a crowd about him that blocked the roadway completely. For more than an hour he solved arithmetical problems and sold a little volume that instructed the unitiated how to do it as easily as he did—a performance that made old Plainfielders think of the days when Laing's Hall was the "op'ry house" and fakirs of all kinds with a wagon and flaming torch sold medicine and collar buttons from very corner in the store district. In view of the fact that Mayor Buckle's recent action in denying Edward Nugent permission to address the workmen of Pond's shop in South Second street at noon time is still fresh in the minds of the people, the question was asked a thousand times Saturday night, "Which is the more dangerous to traffic—a small gathering of men on a thoroughfare a mile from the business district, or this solid mass of humanity extending from curb to curb in the very heart of town and directly below fire headquarters?" It may have been an odious comparison, but nevertheless the blockade was too noticeable to permit of anything else. The police saw the gathering, yet made no attempt to make a passageway, and so the crowd remained—a menace to itself and a refutation to Mayor Buckle's defense that he "didn't want Edward Nugent to hold a meeting in the street because it might interfere with traffic." When Dr. Jenkins was the city's chief executive he placed a ban on these street corner fakirs and none had been seen in town for a long time. The return of the custom after election and Edward Nugent's turndown is food for thought.

PERSONAL.

John Honan, who has spent two years in the West, has returned to his home on West Fourth street.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Bauer and son Kenneth, of Somerville, spent yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Van Dyke, of East Fifth street.

Among the patronesses of the floral fete to be given at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, November 17 and 18, for the benefit of the American Female Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless, is Miss Laura Worthington, daughter of Mrs. Louise Worthington, of New York, formerly of this place.

Funeral of Mrs. Callahan.

The funeral of Mrs. Michael Callahan, of East Third street, was held from St. Mary's church this morning before a large gathering of friends. The mass was conducted by Rev. Father Delehanty and two solos were sung by Frank Powers, of the choir of St. Francis' church, Metuchen. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the pall bearers being John Finley, John Ryan, Edward Connors, John Day, Hugh McDonough and James Mottley.

Miss Powelson's Engagement.

Miss Mary L. Van Eps invited a few friends to the home of Mrs. J. C. Van Dyke, of East Fifth street, Saturday night, when formal announcement was made of the engagement of her niece, Miss Mary Louise Van Eps Powelson, of Somerville, to Theoodore G. Rowe, of Newark. Games were played and vocal and instrumental music was rendered. The affair concluded with the serving of refreshments.

ciation define in a formal instrument, which in its nature is fundamental and more or less permanent, the objects of the association, the rights, privileges and duties of members, the method in which new members may be admitted, and other kindred provisions of a nature pertaining to the main substantial features of the association. To give the words of the statute the other construction, and to make the constitution nothing more than a code of by-laws, would be to convict the statute of tautology and violate the principle that a meaning must be attached, if possible, to all the words and expressions used by the lawmaker. Similar language, providing for the adoption of a constitution and by-laws, is found in other corporation acts of New Jersey, such as the Act for the Incorporation of Bar Associations, the Act for the Incorporation of Benefit and Charitable Associations, the Act for the Incorporation of Societies for training young women, and the Act for the Incorporation of Colleges of Pharmacy. The analogy is undoubtedly that of the form of government common to the States, where there is a constitution embodying the fundamental principles and conditions of the organizations, with a provision for the adoption of laws which must be subject to the provisions of the constitution itself.

My opinion is that when a corporation under this act, in the manner pointed out by the statute, adopts a constitution that instrument then becomes a compact between the members of the association participating in its adoption, and that each new member on being admitted to the association becomes a party to the same compact by accepting membership. This compact is one which can only be changed by the consent of all the members, or in the manner pointed out by the constitution itself. To hold that such a constitution containing a provision that it can be amended only by a two-thirds vote of the members present at any annual meeting, can, nevertheless, be altered by a majority vote of the members present at any annual meeting, is to practically forbid the association, at the time of its formation or subsequently, to adopt any provision that cannot be overthrown by a majority vote of the members present at any meeting. If the constitution provides that it can be amended only at an annual meeting, that also would be invalid, and the will of the majority, if it be so potent would be adequate to amend the constitution at any meeting. In the same way, provisions relative to the number of votes necessary to admit new members, fix dues, regulate the corporation's property, change the purpose for which the corporation is formed, change its location, and all such important, vital matters could not be insured against, but would always be subject to the capricious act of a majority of the members present at any meeting. I cannot believe that such is the law. I do not believe that by-laws are subject to such uncertain fate as this. Certainly, it would be a matter of astonishment to most of the incorporated social clubs to be told that all such provisions as those inserted in the constitution for the protection of the members, and assented to by each and every member, are subject to alteration and repeal whenever a majority vote of the members present at any meeting may so declare.

That such is not the law, is, I think, well established by the decisions of courts whose judgment is persuasive. In Bear vs. Heasley, 98 Mich., 276 (1893), where the controversy arose in a religious society, the Supreme Court of Michigan held, that the relation between the members of a voluntary religious society is one of contract, and that the constitution adopted by the society constitutes the terms of such contract, which is binding upon all. It further specifically held, that an amendment to the constitution to be valid must be adopted in accordance with the provisions of the constitution in force at the time of its adoption. In this case, an article of the constitution provided that there should be no alteration of the constitution unless by request of two-thirds of the whole society, and it was held that this was binding as a contract upon all the members.

To the same effect are Hochreiter's Appeal, 93, Penna., 479; Pullman vs. Bartling, 22 Neb., 375, and State vs. Swift, 69 Ind., 505.

In State vs. Foraker, 46 Ohio, 477, substantially the same doctrine is applied to action taken to amend the State Constitution.

It has been held in New Jersey that the certificate of incorporation of a company organized under the General Corporation Act, together with the by-laws adopted at the time and as a part of its organization, constitute a contract between the stockholders which cannot be altered even by legislative authority, unless with the consent of all the stockholders, or in the manner provided in the certificate and by-laws (Lowenthal vs. Rubber Company, 52 N. J. Eq., 440). A similar view is held in the Court of Appeals of New York (Kent vs. Quicksilver Mining Company, 78 N. Y., 159).

I cannot understand why the principle of these decisions should not apply to corporations formed under the act respecting athletic associations. The rights of members in a social club, the rules for the admission of new members, the number of members that may be admitted, and the management and control of the corporation's property, all these partake of the nature of vested rights as much as the right of a stockholder to have preferred dividends; and the compact between the members, made either at the time of the organization or by accepting the constitution on being admitted to membership, is one which ought to be preserved and secured as a vested right.

The only case that I have found that intimates any doctrine contrary to the one that I have above adopted is that of Richards vs. Union Congregational Society, 58 N. H., 187. But the expression in the opinion of the Court there was obiter dictum, and, in my judgment, is not conformable to the better learning, nor consonant with ordinary justice or good understanding.

I advise you, therefore, that the constitution of the Plainfield Country Club can be amended only in the manner now provided in the constitution, namely, by a two-thirds vote of the members present at any annual meeting, or at a special meeting called for that purpose.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) JOHN W. GRIGGS.

The Plainfield Country Club consists of a number of gentlemen who, in 1896, came together as an incorporated association under the terms of an instrument which they saw fit to call a constitution, and of others who, upon the invitation extended by the constitution, have become members of the club, and while such have paid the dues which the rules of the club require.

The provisions of the constitution are reasonable in themselves; there seems to be no suggestion to the contrary; and it contains a specific provision for its amendment.

Instruments of the kind very often provide that, for ordinary business, a quorum, at a meeting of the members, may consist of a small proportion of the entire number. At such a meeting, unless there is something to the contrary, a majority vote controls. This vote may represent the wishes of a very small minority of the entire number. The question presented seems to be whether members cannot depend upon the protection which is furnished by a constitution unanimously adopted at the beginning, and which in effect has been approved by every person subsequently becoming a member. I think that were no property or pecuniary interest concerned, the question ought to answer itself; that the members ought to be able to rely upon the binding force of the compact into which they have entered and that they can successfully do so.

Here, however, is the added consideration that the club is possessed of valuable property, and that it is dependent for its maintenance upon dues paid by members. How the club shall be managed, whether in accordance with or in violation of its constitution, is a subject which materially affects the pecuniary interest of the club and its members. Action to which a large number of members are hostile may lead to their withdrawal, and possibly bring the club (the same is true of any club) to the point of bankruptcy. And if the club is not maintained, and maintained suitably, they may easily result the sacrifice of its property. My opinion is that whether the constitution consists merely of an agreement which was originally made by the members among themselves and which has been subsequently adopted by new members, or whether it be regarded as a contract upon the faith of which property has been acquired and is held, the members ought to be, and are, held to its terms.

(Signed) JNO. E. PARSONS.

GOLF SEASON DRAWS NEAR TO ITS CLOSE

IN ONE MORE WEEK THE LINKS WILL BE DESERTED.

On Saturday there was the semi-final play for the Thomas R. Van Boskerck consolation and club cups. For the former cup G. F. Earl beat H. C. Munger 1 up, and Henry D. Hibbard beat W. D. Riggs 6 up and 5 to play. For the club cup E. A. Cruikshank beat Stuart H. Patterson 5 up and 3 to play, and J. J. Blackmore won from C. W. Abbott by default.

Next Saturday there will be the final play for these cups. G. F. Earl will meet Henry D. Hibbard for the consolation trophy, while E. A. Cruikshank will meet J. J. Blackmore for the club trophy.

Another event on Saturday was a mixed foursome, a private competition arranged by a few members of the club. Miss Maud Van Boskerck and W. L. Glenney were the winners with a score of 87, 4—83. Miss Martha Robert and C. B. Morgan finished second with a score of 96, 10—86.

While the active season will close next Saturday, the course will be kept open as long as the weather will permit, and the members will be able to play for several weeks, unless bad weather should affect the course to any great extent. The week social features at the clubhouse will probably be continued for the present.

ALIS III WINS GAME AND LAURELS IN BROOKLYN

DEFEATS OLDER AND HEAVIER TEAM 5 TO 0, BEFORE BIG CROWD.

Matched against a much older team and outweighed from fifteen to twenty pounds to a man, the Alis III. football team of this city won a well fought contest from the Atlas A. C., of Brooklyn, on Saturday afternoon. The score was 5 to 0.

The game was played on the Parade Grounds, at Prospect Park, Brooklyn. Fully fifteen hundred people viewed the contest from the sidelines, among whom were many Plainfielders.

Neither side scored in the first half. The Plainfield team received the wick off and worked its way steadily up the field. When close to their opponents' goal line they were held for downs, but soon recovered the ball by good defensive work. Captain Phillips tried a drop kick from the field, but the goal was missed by a narrow margin. Near the end of the half, when Atlas held the ball, one of their backs made a sensational run and would have scored but for Roy Phillips, who downed him at the twenty yard line. Atlas made two first downs, but Alis III. took a brace and held them the third time on their two yard line. There remained but five second to play, so Percy Phillips downed the ball as soon as he received it, and time was then called.

Atlas received the kick off in the second half, but Alis soon obtained the ball by strong defensive work against their heavy opponents. Plainfield's backs then hammered Atlas' line for repeated gains, and finally Bentley was pushed through tackle for a touchdown. Captain Phillips failed to kick the goal.

Atlas received the next kick off, and heavy line work netted them many gains. Alis held them in the center of the field, and took the ball, but time was soon called and the game ended.

Alis III. played an excellent game on the offensive, against a noticeably older and heavier team. Ralph Taylor's punting was a feature as was also Eckert's work at ground gaining. The Plainfield team did not make a fumble during the whole game.

Alis III. lined up as follows: Roy Phillips, left end; Bentley, left tackle; T. Miller, left guard; Bogart, center; H. Douglass, right guard; Eckert, right tackle; J. Manning, right end; P. Phillips, quarterback; E. Taylor, left halfback; R. Taylor, fullback; Weir, right halfback.

Time of halves—25 and 25 minutes.

MISS A. L. BORSUM ENGAGED.

Announcement Made at Heart Party Saturday.

An event of interest in society circles was a heart party given Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Borsum, of Woodland avenue, when announcement was made of the engagement of their youngest daughter, Miss Anna Louise Borsum, to Dr. William Boydston North, son of Dr. and Mrs. John North, of Toledo, Ohio.

The home was attractively decorated with pink flowers, while the prevailing colors in the dining room were pink and white. There were twenty-five guests from this city and out of town. The afternoon was spent in playing hearts. The first prize was won by Miss Delaney, of Newark, the second by Miss Pfefferle, of Hoboken, while Miss Lillian Seitz, of Newark, received the consolation prize. After the play refreshments were served.

Miss Borsum is well known in the younger society set and is a favorite in a large circle of acquaintances. Dr. North is a graduate of the University of Michigan, class '05, and is a member of Theta Delta Chi. He belongs to one of the oldest and most prominent families of Toledo. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Helen Wells, of Westerly, R. I., has been visiting friends in this city.

Miss Clara Long, of Park avenue, has been visiting her cousin at Somerville.

MOB WAITED FOR THEM.

Roundabout Way to Train Saved Men Accused by Girls of Violence.

Richard Mattis, William Ross, Thomas Holland, colored, and Peter Linzer, four of the five men charged by young girls, who were held for the Grand Jury Saturday morning, were taken to Elizabeth in the afternoon. A small mob of men and boys hung about police headquarters as the officers prepared to take the prisoners away, and fear of violence haunted the station house force.

It was decided that too much risk lay in starting the quartette for jail from the North avenue depot, and they were bundled into the patrol wagon for a swift dash to the Netherwood station. The galloping horse left the crowd behind, and the move defeated whatever plans for assault that might have been fomenting in its mind. The journey to the county jail was without incident. The prisoners were in a state of funk, especially Holland, the negro. They didn't appear easy until the county jail door shut on them.

Aged John Galbraith, the fifth man of the quintette, who denies his guilt, will be heard before Justice Mosher Wednesday afternoon. He will be defended by Walter L. Hetfield, Sr.

AMUSEMENTS.

Edward R. Salter's new musical comedy entitled "Ikey and Abey" will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. It is replete with pretty girls, catchy songs and new and up-to-date music. Novel specialties are to be introduced never before seen in this city.

"The Unwritten Law" will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night, and is written around a celebrated case, and in full of intense heart interest. It is a powerful comedy drama from the pen of Mark E. Swan, and is the best of this young author's writings. Miss Amy Hamlin, who plays the wronged wife, is an emotional actress of rare abaility and is supported by such capable artists as J. Drumier, Selma Romaine, F. Cooke, R. Lothian, C. J. Toole, Thomas Ryan, Miss Atheling, Miss Marie D. Davis, Miss Gail Leighton, Miss Daisy Darling and others.

Simon and Mose, those inseparable companions of the Sunday comic supplements, known from the East to the West coast, have been dramatized, and will be seen in the flesh on the boards of the New Plainfield theatre on Thursday night. "Simple Simon Simple" was produced last summer by the Nixon & Zimmerman Operas Company at Philadelphia and achieved instant success. The book is from the pens of Charles H. Brown and Otis F. Wood and its lively sallies and witty speeches evoke rounds of applause, while the ludicrous business devised by these clever authors never fails to rouse Simon's audiences to peals of laughter. "Simple Simon Simple" is splendidly staged and brilliantly acted; the music is colorful without being trashy, and the piece clean and sane to a marked degree.

"Bankers and Brokers," the rollicking comedy which will hold the boards at the New Plainfield theatre, Friday night, is said to be as bright and attractive as the lithographs which herald its appearance at this cozy theatre. It is one of those clever devices of humorous complications which keeps the audience in continuous roars of laughter and the busy people on the stage do not lose a single moment in contributing good clean fund. The comedy serves to introduce Yorke and Adams in their drolleries and they are supported by a big company of sterling merit, including James J. Collins, Rita Redmond, Bert Thayer, Anna Wilkes, Floyd Buckley, Mamie Lafferty, Eddie Barto and E. Berry.

The biggest melodramaitic attraction of the season will be Charles E. Balney's dramatic production, "The Curse of Drink," which will be the offering at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday night. To a certain extent the theme of the play is the temperance question, but Mr. Blaney has treated the subject in such a new and novel manner that the story cannot be considered an old one. As is usual in the Blaney productions, there are many new and original features and incidents. The play is beautifully staged and has a competent company.

FOUNDED INCURABLES HOME.

Work of Dean Rodman's Brother in the Bronx.

In a recent issue of the Bronx Borough Record and Times there appears an interesting article referring to the anniversary exercises held at the Home for Incurables at Fordham, N. Y., which institution was founded by Rev. Washington Rodman, brother of Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church, during the winter of 1865, and is now one of the most prominent charitable organizations in this part of the country.

The idea originated with Mr. Rodman in 1865, and was the outgrowth of his observations during the Civil War and in the hospitals and homes of his city. He discovered that there was a large number of deserving persons afflicted with incurable diseases of so burdensome a character that they could not be cared for by their relatives or friends in their own homes, even though they might be in fairly good circumstances, and it was his idea to establish a home where their sufferings could be alleviated. This was done and today a handsome and thoroughly equipped building stands as a monument to Mr. Rodman.

At the anniversary exercises, Hon. James L. Wells, a prominent citizen of New York, made an address in which he referred enthusiastically to Mr. Rodman's noble efforts and his sterling Christian character which made it possible to erect such an institution. While Mr. Rodman conceived the idea and plan originally, he interested many wealthy and influential people in the project and this led to the erection of the present fine building at Fordham.

Luncheon for Prospective Bride.

Mrs. A. McClean Parker, of West Seventh street, gave a luncheon of twenty-four covers at the Plainfield Country Club on Friday, in honor of her sister-in-law, Miss Gertrude Van Cortlandt Parker, of Perth Amboy, who is to be married on December 27, to Dr. Francis E. DuBois, of New York city.

—Residents of the Fourth ward who some time ago petitioned the Board of Education for a new school in the West End, are beginning to wonder what has become of the matter.

YOUR HAT

May Be a Stylish One, But It Makes Trouble.

A man usually buys a hat that's "in style," but the modern hat for men has lots to answer for.

Baldheads are growing more numerous every day. Hats make excellent breeding places for the parasitic germs which sap the life from the roots of the hair.

When your hair begins to fall out and your scalp is full of Dandruff it is a sure sign that these countless germs are busily at work.

There is but one way to overcome the trouble and kill the germs—that way is to apply Newbro's Herpicide to the scalp—it will kill the germs and healthy hair is sure to result.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

WHAT WOMEN SHOULD KNOW.

"When the French woman has put in a part of her day upon her house she spends the remainder upon herself. She does not consider time wasted which is devoted to the preservation of her own good looks; in fact, were she to take her choice, she would much prefer to make herself beautiful rather than to expend her energies upon her dwelling.

"'I must be beautiful, for I am the great attraction in my home,' said a French woman to the caller, 'and then, when I am charming, I can look to my house and see that it is in order.'

"This is the French woman's idea in everything. She must perfect herself, then comes her house. The ideal French woman will breakfast on a roll, see the wheels of her domestic machinery are running properly; then she will go to her hairdresser. Here she will spend an hour, and on special days she will remain two and three hours.

"The time is devoted to the washing of her hair and the scenting of it. Then she has it brushed until it is glossy, and dried in the air, until it is very fragrant. Sometimes—it is said with regret—that she tints it. And there are pretty stories told of a French woman who gave her husband unmitigated joy by coming home in the afternoon with her hair changed to a bright red. This the American man would hardly appreciate, but there is a happy medium which the American woman would do well to strike.

"In times of domestic upset, such as house cleaning and moving, the French woman proceeds on her way as usual. She does not allow a domestic upheaval to interfere with her beauty plans. She keeps herself just as beautiful as ever, even though the drays are at the door and the movers in her boudoir. She has a way of attending to her good looks under the most trying circumstances."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

An old housewife says that if bacon is soaked in water a few minutes before frying this will prevent the fat from running. She also says that carrots should always be cut in slices and never in cubes, as the darker outside part is richer in flavor than the center, and if cut in cubes some of the cubes will be lacking in flavor in consequence.

Flannels should be washed in warm suds that has a little ammonia added to it. They should be rubbed between the hands, not on a board, and dipped up and down in the suds until they are free from dirt. Squeeze them with the hands until as much water as possible is removed, and rinse them in water of the same temperature as that in which they were washed. Wring out again, hang them in the shade and press them out on the wrong side while they are still damp.

Cucumbers must be cut at the thick end; the thin end will be found to have a bitter taste.

Covering meat lightly with nice dry bran and hanging it in a good current of air is a good way of keeping it in warm weather.

If new boots or shoes won't polish, rub over half a lemon and leave till thoroughly dry. Repeat this once or twice is necessary.

Flowers with stems full of sap last longer if the stems are slightly slit before putting them in water. Change the water of all flowers every day if you would have them last long.

ABOUT BRACELETS.

They are once more modish.

The short sleeve is responsible.

They are not worn in pairs, as they used to be.

Five or six on one arm is the fancy of the faddish.

On the other arm is only one, or perhaps none.

This single one is always most rare and expensive.

The whole collection must harmonize, although different.

Flexible link bracelets set with semi-precious stones are most popular.

A favorite design is of filigree gold, studded with jewels.

Egyptian, Moorish and Italian designs are reproduced for the most gorgeous.

A new wrinkle is a couple of bracelets that may be linked together to form a necklace.

Sometimes the gold circlet is clasped outside the lace undersleeve.

You won't go wrong if you make her birthday or bridal present a handsome bracelet. — Philadelphia Bulletin.

THANKSGIVING DESSERTS.

The mince pie, which by no means may be omitted, may be slightly heated and then sent blazing to the table by pouring a little brandy over and lighting it. This is better than putting liquor into the pies. A cold sweet to follow may be this very easy one: Boil a cup of sugar with a cup of water till it threads, then beat it slowly into the stiff whites of three eggs, and when cold fold this into a pint of whipped cream. Flavor, put into a small pail or mould, pack in ice and salt five hours, and serve in small glasses. A few macaroons, crumbed into powder, may be put in if you choose, as they are really an improvement.—Harper's Bazar.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

"And no it must be! Not a man, not a musket, can we spare. It may be the very crisis of the war, and I should be false to my trust if I did not hold myself and every soldier to the duty of the hour. Let the dead bury their dead. I cannot rob a regiment of its leader at such a time."

And the two men, the sorely grieving colonel, the sorely-tried commander-in-chief, look one instant into each other's swimming eyes. There is a soldier salute—but utter silence, and the colonel turns away.

"You don't need me here," gulps presently a moment later. "I am going to see if I can help the colonel. There's no use with him. I'll come to you later—at Willard's."

And so it happens that, riding at the rear of the column to catch the division, Benton passes a carriage at the outskirts of Georgetown, preceded by a trooper of his who spurs as a friend to clear the patrols of the provost guard to the end that the vehicle, with its solitary brace of troopers, moves no convention. With rein he, an aide-de-camp, on crutches, has to account for himself every mile he goes. "Some belated general," thinks he as, once clear of the streets, he spurs swiftly up the Rockville pike. Just as the pallid light is creeping into the eastward sky Benton reins in at the challenge of a sentry and the sight of a tented field. Behind him, in the lower ground, feebly glow the night lights of Georgetown. Beyond them lies the great, straggling city. Here, close at hand, a sentry paces slowly by the roadway, recognizes the aide-de-camp at once and bids him advance. A dim light burns in a nearby wall tent. "Yes, sir, the colonel got back soon after three," is the answer to his question, as, swinging out of saddle, Benton throws the reins over a fence post and scratches at the tent flap.

"'Tis I, colonel—only Benton. I stopped to see——"

But the tent flap is thrown back from within and a voice bids him enter. "I've been writing to—my poor motherless babies," chokes the colonel, and then at last breaks down, bows his humbled head upon his arm on the rude camp table that shakes with the sobs wrung from an almost bursting heart. Who can picture, much less soothe, a grief like this? Benton has seen him time and again, ever alert, ready, vigorous on the march, cheery and cordial in all manner of wind and weather, inspiring, commanding, magnificent in battle, God-like, almost, in his superb dominion over men. But it is the strong and soldierly and virile that love the deepest and that suffer most when robbed of the heart's idol and delight. "The bravest are the tenderest. The loving are the daring." And in wordless sympathy Benton can only lay his hand upon the massive shoulder while the teardrops well from his own brimming eyes.

And then there are voices, low and deep, without the tent and then a footfall close at hand, and a tall, dark form, enveloped in a cloak, looms between them and the gathering dawn, and Benton, staring and only half credulous, stammers the question, "Who is it?" Then both men stand erect and face the newcomer at the first sound of his deep yet trembling voice.

"It is I—Abraham Lincoln." (Can it ever be written save in reverence?) "I—I have come to you because—all night long since you left—I could think of nothing else. I have not slept. I have been pacing the floor until I could stand it no longer. You came to me last night in your sorrow, and I—treated you like a dog. Forgive me, colonel. Take her back to your children, and when you have laid her away and comforted them—then return to us. Go, sir—it is my order," and, wringing the soldier's hands, the president turns again to the cares and trials, the cruel anxieties of another day, but the deep-lined face, uplifted to the glory of the dawn, shines transfigured with a radiance indescribable—with who can say what infinite cheer and comfort and blessing from on high.

CHAPTER XIX.

KILLED IN FRONT OF THE GUNS.

"How are the mighty fallen!" at least in point of numbers. Still under the leadership of sharp-eyed, sharp-tongued Gibbon, the brigade has trudged away to South mountain, feeling not a little cocky in its new name. Manfully again has it grasped the hot end of the poker, being sent into the very jaws of Turner's gap with Colquitt and his Georgians directly confronting it, and Evans raking the doubled line from the hill on the right. Again does the Seventh catch it hard from the flank, losing more than a third of its men. Again do the Black Hats sail in with their accustomed saucy vim and vigor, tieing the Hoosiers in the total of losses. Again are the big "Napoleons," the pets of battery "B," lugged into line, side by side with the "Foot," and mightily do they bellow and roar in this resounding amphitheater—the eastward slope of the ridge. It is the second fierce fight in which these powerful guns, manned by picked men from the brigade, take their share of hard knocks with the four battalions; but a fiercer fight is yet to follow—only three days away—one which welds the battery still more firmly to its supports. On the far right flank, in front of Sharpsburg, across the sleepy Antietam, it comes in for its hardest pounding of all the stirring campaign.

But by this time, mid September, as Lee's daring, determined followers halt on the heights of the old Maryland town, with the Potomac encircling them from northwest to south, the winding Antietam protecting their front, how cruelly are they, too, reduced in numbers! Our old opponents, the "Stonewalls," in their entire array can barely muster 500 men. Regiments are commanded by captains, companies by sergeants, and as it is with Jackson so it is with Longstreet, whose brigades, like those of Kemper and Pickett, are cut to shreds, while some battalions are reduced to the front of a platoon. Yet these are the fellows, less than 40,000 all told, who, backed up to the great river, with all their trains and all their wounded to care for, still confidently look to Lee and serenely face McClellan, whose force in men and guns is more than twice their own.

Doubleday it is who now takes the lead and, crossing the Antietam on the afternoon of the 16th, bears down from the extreme flank upon the silent, waiting foe.

First in column as it circles the front, the old division moves in to the morning attack at the right of Hooker's embattled line, and right of the line of the old division is the doubled rank of the old—the Iron—brigade. It is the dawn of a dreadful day.

In a grove toward the Potomac, backed by a ridge, Stuart's restless horsemen and Pelham's ready guns are lurking, hidden from our view. So are the crouching guardians of the groves and fields to the south. Again is the great organizer shoving his infantry in to the attack of an army in position, over ground unsearched by cavalry, though cavalry are with him in abundance, eager to be of service, but he knows not how to use them. East of the big cornfield, to their left front as they march, is still another grove, the east wood, and in long, thin line, at right angles to the pike, stretching through the woods, through the cornfield, silently awaiting their coming foe, are aligned the very men they fought so savagely at sunset of that August evening barely three weeks back.

And, just as before, not a man of the hostile line is seen when the guns begin the battle. Off to the left front, near the east wood, a southern battery spies the blue battalions issuing from the skirt of the northward wood nearly a mile away, dressed on their waving colors, the skirmishers trotting well out to the front. Then loud bellow the guns and shriek the shells as line upon line, brigade upon brigade, Hooker sends his new command, the new-born First corps, in to its bloody baptism. The confederate flank is covered by Stuart and his dashing horse batteries, and there is abundant room and more than abundant need for similar troops between Doubleday's right and the river, but not so much as a squadron rides where it may be of such infinite service. McClellan holds his horses east of the dividing stream, for again, as on the peninsula, are his forces thus bestowed.

NEW TAX PLANS FOR THE RAILROADS

BOARD OF TAX EQUALIZATION SUBMITS LEGISLATIVE REPORT TO GOVERNOR

Governor Stokes Friday made public the report of the State Board of Equalization of Taxes on the joint resolution of the last Legislature calling for the investigation of the taxing of railroad property.

While the main report is signed by all the members of the Board, Charles C. Black, who was the Democratic candidate for governor on the equal taxation platform, suggests the taxation of main stem railroad property at a uniform local tax rate in each taxing district and the taxing of railroad and canal franchises at a rate to be determined, based upon the needs of the State, the business done in the State by the companies taxed and the benefits of the companies to the State.

The gist of the report follows:

"We recommend that the State Board of Assessors be directed to make a new assessment of what is known as the main stem of all the railroad property in the State, at its true value, and that upon the valuation so ascertained, a tax for State purposes be made and levied at the average tax rate of the State, such average tax rate to be ascertained by summing the total number of taxing districts in the State and dividing the sum of all the tax rates thereby, and that thereafter that be done each year; and that this rate take the place of the one-half of one per centum rate now in force, to be assessed and payable as of the time of other taxes, subject to the provision of payment by installments as now provided by law.

"We are mindful of the advantage of making no unnecessary change in the system of taxation now in vogue upon this class of property, which has stood the test of judicial investigation. Machinery is already provided to place before this board any complaints, so that inequalities of assessments can be remedied. We therefore believe that if this method is pursued, railroad property will be bearing its just share of the public burden. More cannot be asked of it, and less ought not to be expected. If any means can be devised to settle this vexed question, everybody would be relieved, but as the Governor has well quoted: 'No question is settled until it is settled right.'"

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

This is a very busy season at Woodhull & Martin's store, where the firm is showing a large and desirable stock of goods, including furniture, housefurnishings, dress goods, men's furnishings, carpets, window shades, draperies and, in fact, everything to be found in a first class store of this kind.

An Exceptional Location.

By virtue of its extreme healthfulness and by reason of its accessibility to two great cities, Lakewood has become the most popular winter resort within its distance from the Metropolis. It is only sixty miles from New York and seventy from Philadelphia, distances covered by the express trains in less than an hour and a half's time, making it virtually a residential suburb of both cities. This fact alone is enough to insure a future greatness rivalling the historic old-world resorts. There is a modern colony of beautiful residences, luxurious hotels, and romantic Queen Anne cottages, all equipped with every modern convenience for contributing to the physical comfort and social well-being of the sojourners in their delightful retreat. The soil is porous sand and gravel which renders the air very dry and clear. There is absolutely no swamps nor malaria, and the warm air scented with the balsamic fragrance of the surrounding forest is exceptionally refreshing after the trying conditions in a great city. Nothing is lacking to make Lakewood as ideal a spot for a winter home as it is for a brief vacation. The Lakewood booklet, recently published by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, is replete with information concerning this unique resort, and may be had by writing to C. M. Burt, G. P. A., New Jersey Central, 143 Liberty street, New York city.

Neaf Apgar, who recently returned from a successful trip during which he took part in several prize shoots, left yesterday on another extended trip.

P.H.S. DEFEATS PREP. SCHOOL IN HOT GAME

LOCAL TEAM OVERCOMES OPPONENTS BY TRICK PLAYS.

A victory of science over weight resulted for the first time this season when the Plainfield High School eleven, journeying to New Brunswick, fifty strong, defeated the supposed strong football team of the Rutgers Preparatory School by a score of 12 to 11, on Nelson field, the scene of so many famous gridiron as well as baseball contests between these rival schools.

The school boys had not defeated the preparatory school for a number of years in football, nor had they much of an idea of doing so in this year's game, but, encouraged by the prophesy of Mrs. Fay, the interpreter of the future, on Friday evening, when she said, in answer to one of the questions submitted to her at the Casino, that Plainfield High School would be victorious by a close margin, the local team showed much grit and won the annual contest.

The game started promptly at 3:45, Rutgers winning the toss and choosing the north goal. At the start of the game statistics showed the average of the local team to be about 145 pounds to that of their opponents' 175 pound average. Freeman, of P. H. S., kicked off to Nichols, of Rutgers, who ran back the ball for twenty yards to his own 40 yard line. Rutgers started in at once to try the High School line but it held for four successive times, and the ball changed hands. High School then tried Rutgers' line, but when it proved a stone-wall, Freeman kicked a beautiful twisting punt to Rutgers' five-yard line, Lyall, of Prep. School, going back to receive it, but it was too much for him and he fumbled it. Flanders, of P. H. S., was on the pigskin which was behind the goal-line, like a flash, scoring the first points for his team. He also kicked a beautiful goal. This was a surprise to the Rutgers contingent, who besought their team earnestly to forge ahead.

Rutgers kicked off to Douglass, of P. H. S., who ran back to mid-field. But, when P. H. S. tried Rutgers' line, they lost in three attempts, solely because they were outweighed. Freeman punted to Rutgers' twenty-yard line, and by sheer strength and weight the Preparatory School boys broke through the High School forwards successively for long gains, finally pushing Black through for a touchdown. Nichols kicked an easy goal.

Rutgers then kicked to P. H. S., who ran back to mid-field. Time for the first half was soon called with the ball in P. H. S. possession, the score being, Prep. School, 6; P. H. S., 6.

After five minutes' intermission, the second half was begun, Cox, the big 220 pound tackle of Rutgers, kicking to Mahaffey, of P. H. S., who went in for this half only, and he ran back thirty yards, amidst the enthusiastic cheering of his fellow-spectators. Here a new plan of play was started by the local team, tricks being used altogether, which had been devised by Coach Best at the previous day's practice. Long runs around the ends by Lyness, Douglass, Freeman, Loizeaux and Mahaffey soon brought the ball to Rutgers' five yard line, where Mahaffey pulled Douglass through for a touchdown outside of tackle. Freeman punted out beautifully to Douglass, and Flanders kicked a neat goal, placing the locals ahead again.

Freeman then kicked off to Rutgers, who again pushed the ball along by their weight, Cox going over for a touchdown, the score now standing: P. H. S., 12; Rutgers, 11.

Rutgers kicked to P. H. S. and the ball was run back to the visitors' forty yard line. On the next play, on a delayed pass, Jones, the little end on High School, circled the opponents' end for thirty-five yards with the interference of Mahaffey alone, he finally being brought down by Lyall, the only one between him and a touchdown. It was getting dark fast now and but three minutes remained to be played. High School held the ball on Prep. School's 20-yard line, and it was going fastly down the field, when by mutual agreements of Captains Douglass and Voorhees, it was decided to call the game on account of darkness, P. H. S. winning by a score of 12 to 11, for the first time in several years. The result of the contest means much to the local team especially since they were outweighed 20 pounds man to man. Near the close of the game, Osgood, of P. H. S., who opposed Cox, Prep. School's big man, was laid out with a wrenched ankle, but no serious results are anticipated. This was the only accident of the game.

Toward the close of the contest, Rutgers, seeing the likelihood of their defeat, resorted several times to unmanly tactics, this being especially true in the case of Cox, who used his fists, when he had an opportunity.

During the first half the best work for the locals was done by Freeman, Flanders, Douglass, Martin and Loizeaux, while Douglass, Lyness, Mahaffey and Jones excelled in the second period of play. For Rutgers, Black, Cox and Nichols did the best work.

The High School contingent came home by trolley in a body and paraded through town, cheering, at night.

ST. JOSEPH'S FAIR OPENS

Good First Night Crowd in Attendance Indicates Success.

PRETTY DECORATIONS

Various Societies in Charge of the Different Tables—Programme to Be Changed Regularly.

With a good sized initial attendance the annual fair and bazaar of St. Joseph's church parish began in Saengerbund Hall last night. It is to continue for the remainder of the week and from the spirit manifested by the workers and their friends it will prove unusually successful.

Much care has been exercised in decorating the big hall and it presents a prettier appearance than ever before. The tables have been carefully arranged and small colored electric bulbs and bunting have been freely used. The stage has also been draped and is graced with floral effects.

The different tables are named in honor of the church societies and are presided over as follows: Holy Name table, Mrs. R. H. McCullough, Mrs. J. A. Blatz, Mrs. R. A. Boyce, Mrs. A. R. Seals, Mrs. Hegeman, Mrs. C. McDonough, Mrs. T. J. Gough, Mrs. Robert McCormick, Mrs. Meaney and Miss Alice McDonough; Rosary Society, Mrs. A. E. Kenney, Mrs. A. A. Cannon, Mrs. J. E. Bailey, Mrs. H. Berkhan, Mrs. Matthews, Miss E. Gavin and Miss Ellen Rafferty; Children of Mary table, the Misses Agnes Fitzgerald, Mary Jacot, Justina Smith, Miss Ageny, assisted by the entire society. The refreshment booth is in charge of James Hurley, the cane rack, Robert McCormick; fish pond, William H. Daley; candy booth, Miss May Berkhan and others. Arthur A. Cannon is treasurer in the office, and Thomas Meaney and C. McDonough are at the door.

The programme for the week includes a night change of programme by New York and local talent and the different nights have been portioned as follows: Monday, St. Joseph's night; Tuesday, Hibernian and Rosary societies of the city and borough; Wednesday, Children of Mary societies; Thursday, Knights of Columbus; many councils from nearby cities having promised to attend; Friday, Holy Name Society; Saturday, open.

CORIELL WILL REFIRE TOMORROW MORNING

SHERIFF-ELECT LAWRENCE TOOK OATH OF OFFICE TODAY.

The office of sheriff of Union county will be formally turned over to Dr. William H. Lawrence, of Summit, tomorrow morning. Benjamin A. Vail, judge of the Court of Common Pleas, administered the oath of office today.

Like the office of Governor of New Jersey, the office of sheriff has but one term, the candidate not being eligible to succeed himself. This, however, does not bar a sheriff from running for office to cusseed some one else, after an interregnum of one or more terms. Mr. Coriell was elected in 1902 against Charles H. Moore, the Democratic candidate.

No provision is made by law for a sheriff to hold office until his successor is elected and qualified, but his office terminates on the week following the election at which a sheriff is voted for. In case of a tie vote or the incapacity of the sheriff-elect, or his death in the meantime, one of the coroners assumes the office of sheriff and holds it until a sheriff is appointed by the Governor, and such one would hold office until the next year.

Sheriff Coriell has not decided upon the business he will take up after vacating the office, and probably will not do so at once, but he doubtless will take up business in this city.

His service as sheriff has won the commendation of both parties, and he retires from the office with the good wishes of every one. During his term he has happily been free from the undesirable duty of performing as executioner, although once or twice there was a prospect that he might have to officiate, as his predecessor, William T. Kirk, did.

The gift of a handsome gold watch to Mr. Coriell a week ago Tuesday was a partial expression of good will from many friends and attaches of the office.

Sheriff Lawrence filed a bond for $20,000, there being four sureties, of $5,000 each.

SCADUTO IS ON TRIAL FOR HIS LIFE TODAY

FISH PEDDLER WHO KILLED RIVAL FACES JURY IN COUNTY COURT.

The case of Luigi Scaduto, charged with the murder of Lorenzo Fousch, a fellow Italian fish peddler in this city early last summer, was called in the Union County Court this morning. The accused is represented by John P. Owens, Esq., of this city, and W. R. Wilson, Esq., of Elizabeth.

Chief Kiely and Sergeant Frederickson were among the witnesses called this morning and they told of the capture of Scaduto. John Viddo, also of this city, was a witness. The trial will last throughout the day and tomorrow.

Scaduto and Fousch were rival fish peddlers, one having had a territory here for a long time. The other fellow got into this territory and early in the day the two men met and quarreled about the intrusion. Later they met again on North avenue, near Berckman street, and as the result of a quarrel, Fousch was stabbed by Scaduto and was later found dead in the road. Scaduto was arrested during the afternoon while he was attempting to board a passenger train at Fanwood. A young lad living near the Italian quarters in Netherwood put Sergeant Frederickson on the trial of Scaduto and his arrest followed.

An entertainment consisting of moving pictures, illustrated songs and stereopticon views will be given in Reform Hall on Thursday evening. Admission will be free. Tickets can be secured at Schreiner's pharmacy.

STANBERY IS INDICTED?

True Bills Said to be Found Against Him and Harrison For Manslaughter

IN MIDDLESEX COURT

Grand Jury Returned Six Bills and Two of Number Relate to Auto Accident in Which One Life Was Lost.

The Middlesex county Grand Jury completed its labors for the term today and handed in six indictments, two of which, it is said on good authority, are against William R. Stanbery and Oscar Harrison, for manslaughter. These two were principals in the auto accident case at Dunellen, in which Mrs. William A. Westphal received injuries that resulted in her death. The jury's deliberations were not made public, but as is frequently the case, the hint was given out that both men had been adjudged equally guilty and would have to stand trial.

All of the six cases will be heard at the next session of court, to be presided over by Justice Fort. In all probability this will not be until four weeks from today.

The Stanbery case has now dragged along for several months, partly due to the fact that the Middlesex county authorities were waiting for the result of Harrison's suit against Stanbery for damages. This was tried at Dunellen three times before a verdict was reached in Harrison's favor, the jury holding Stanbery to blame. The whole facts were then presented to the Grand Jury and the report today that both men had been indicted caused no little surprise.

Following their adjournment, the jurymen enjoyed the usual banquet.

SUNDAY GOLF FRIENDS ARE TO TRY AGAIN

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO CHANGE COUNTRY CLUB'S CONSTITUTION.

The advocates of Sunday golf members of the Plainfield Country Club not being daunted by their previous defeats, are now planning to bring the question up in a different form by meeting the present provisions of the club's constitution, which calls for a two-thirds vote to permit Sunday playing on the club course.

The members of the club have within the past few days received cards from advocates of Sunday playing, asking them to attend a meeting to be held before December 1, and vote for a proposition to change the constitution so that a majority instead of a two-thirds vote may be necessary to adopt or defeat the resolution to open the course on Sunday.

In connection with this new move, those favoring Sunday golf are busily engaged in doing missionary work, and they will undoubtedly do all in their power to secure enough votes to change the constitution of the club. That they will be opposed in this action is not to be doubted. Those opposed to Sunday playing will not allow such a change to be made without strong opposition. This latest action is due to the recent opinions given by eminent lawyers as to whether a two-thirds or majority vote is necessary to adopt a resolution.

BELATED ANNOUNCEMENT.

Miss Boylan Married in Georgia Last Month.

Miss Susie C. Boylan, a former well known resident of the borough and daughter of Jerry Boylan, of Regent street, was married on Tuesday evening, October 31, at the home of her uncle, C. W. Tappan, of White Plains, Ga., to J. Howard Griffin, of North Adams, Mass. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. J. H. Kilpatrick, of White Plains, and the bridesmaids were Miss Ella Rae Boylan and Miss Rachael Tappan. A large number of guests were in attendance.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and later Mr. and Mrs. Griffin left for their new home at North Adams, where the groom is engaged in the mercantile business. They stopped off at several points of interest and also visited local relatives for a short time. For the past two years Mrs. Griffin has been teaching in the Jacob Tome Institute of Maryland, where she is held in high esteem as well as at White Plains, where she is widely acquainted.

BRIDGE CONTRACT LET

Freeholders At Last Arrange For New Structure on West End Avenue.

ACCEPTED BID $7,300

Work to Be Done by William Farrier and Will Be Rushed Rapidly Toward Completion.

The bid of William Farrier for the construction of the West End avenue bridge over Green brook was accepted at a meeting of the joint committee from the Union and Somerset county Boards of Freeholders, held at the Hotel Iroquois yesterday afternoon. Mr. Farrier's bid was $7,300, and he contracts for the entire work. There were seven other bids, all higher than that of Mr. Farrier. It is expected that the work will be started soon and rushed rapidly toward completion.

The plan submitted by Mr. Farrier and accepted calls for a concrete arch structure, with three twenty-foot spans. The bridge will be of the boulevard type, with parapet walls on either side. It is to be sixty feet wide and sixty-six feet long.

After the bid was accepted the freeholders gave the bridge committee the power to make any desirable changes. The idea in doing this was that some thought a two-arch span would be preferable to three, and if this could be built for the same money as the three-arch bridge it would be an advantage. A conference will be held with Mr. Farrier to see what can be done along this line. Those who have favored the bridge are much pleased that a decision was reached yesterday, for efforts have been made for over a year to secure a structure, and when the syndicate began improving the west end of the borough the freeholders got busy, and after frequent meetings finally decided to receive bids and plans for a bridge to be built for not more than $7,500, the amount originally appropriated by the members from both counties.

William Farrier submitted three bids, as follows:

Concrete arch, three twenty-foot spans, $7,300; concrete beam, two thirty-foot spans, $7,350; one sixty-foot span, $11,285. The other bids received were as follows:

S. B. Opdyke, Jr., concrete arch, two spans, $7,970 and $7,499, the difference in price being according to height; Dean, Schweirs & Sutton Company, concrete arch, $10,766; Owego Bridge Company, iron beam, $9,800; W. T. Kirk Company, iron beam, $9,489; Middlesex Contracting Company, concrete arch, two thirty-foot spans, $7,900; one sixty-foot span, $14,500; Richards & Gaston, concrete arch, two spans, $7,950.

Some of these plans called for twelve and others for fourteen feet from the bed of the brook to the roadbed of the bridge, but the twelve foot plan was adopted. This will necessitate the raising of the roadway on either side of the bridge about four feet and will bring it on its proper level.

The style of bridge decided upon can be built in far less time than one of iron and if the weather remains favorable it is believed that it can be completed within two months. No action was taken looking to a disposition of the present bridge on West End avenue, but the freeholders may decide to locate it at some point along the stream.

After the matter was decided yesterday, Director Logan suggested that Freeholder Richard Hoagland sign the contracts for the new structure as director, as the bridge would probably not be completed during his time in office. This indicated that Freeholder Logan has been decided upon as the new director of the board for the coming year.

HOAGLAND DIRECTOR?

Almost Certainty That Somerset Freeholders Will Elect Him.

In the re-organization of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, for next year, it is almost a certainty that Freeholder Richard Hoagland, of Hillsboro, will be the new director, to succeed Director William Logan, the present official.

Mr. Logan has been a member of the board for thirteen years, and during that time of service has been director for many years. On election day, Peter Smith, Republican, of Bound Brook, was elected over Freeholder Logan, by a majority of seven, making the incoming board stand six to five Republican. This will be the first time in several years that the board has been Republican. Those members who do not remain in the board next year, will retire on December 31.

Mrs. Nathaniel Wildes, of Baltimore, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Rowland Cox, of West Seventh street.

Y. M. C. A. WOMEN HOLD THEIR ANNUAL MEETING

MRS. HENRY M. MAXSON RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF AUXILIARY.

Officers were elected, reports presented and ways and means discussed at the annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. held at association hall yesterday afternoon. The reports showed that the auxiliary has an active and associate membership of 259, the largest of any similar organization in the State, also one of the youngest, and during the past year $1,400 was raised, which is the largest reported by any other auxiliary in the State.

All the money was disbursed, chiefly for the needs of the Y. M. C. A., while $15 was contributed to State work. Many repairs were made at the local association during the year, such as painting and equipping the kitchen with various things.

Regarding the supper and Japanese entertainment to be held at the association building on Tuesday, November 21, it was decided to give up the supper and just have the entertainment. Miss Aimee Emmons will have charge of this.

There were reports from Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. George B. Rittenhouse, Mrs. Leroy Gates and Dr. Martha Stillman, delegates to the auxiliary conference held at Camden on Friday.

In the election of officers for the coming year these were chosen: President, Mrs. Henry M. Maxson; vice-presidents, Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. Walter H. Freeman, Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry; secretary, Miss Edith Little; treasurer, Mrs. Harry C. Runyon. The president will appoint her committees within a few days.

PEARY'S COLLEAGUE TOLD OF DASH FOR NORTH POLE

SECRETARY BRIDGMAN THE SPEAKER AT THE MEN'S CLUB MEETING.

An illustrated lecture of unusual interest was that given before the Men's Club of the First Baptist church last night by Secretary Bridgman, who was a colleague with Commander Peary on two expeditions to the North Pole. The speaker displayed some of the finest and most valuable views of the northern regions yet shown and he vividly described the exciting trips in quest of more knowledge concerning the farthest northern point.

Mr. Bridgman explained the methods employed in sending ships through the immense ice floes, it generally being necessary to wait for the right kind of winds to break up the huge formations so that the vessels could proceed.

Probably his description of the Esquimaux, of their loyalty to those in the expedition party and how faithful they were when hardships were the most severe. Mr. Bridgman said that it was the difficulty of maintaining a sufficient supply of provisions that made the trip to the North Pole so difficult, and not the weather conditions of that region.

The speaker paid a great tribute to Commander Peary, telling of his great work along scientific lines, and he declared that he was successful in locating the furthermost northern point known. He expressed great confidence in Commander Peary's ability to succeed in his plans.

Mr. Bridgman also displayed many interesting views showing individuals and groups of natives in the arctic region, and telling how they live. Concerning this he said that they eat and sleep when they feel like it and do just as they please, living a life of perfect ease. He gave deserving tribute to several natives who performed heroic work on the arctic trips. He also explained the great value of the Esquimau dogs, showing how impossible it would be to travel very far without these animals.

Mr. Bridgman talked for nearly two hours, and when he concluded a hearty vote of thanks was given him by the club.

Supreme Court Decisions.

The Supreme Court yesterday refused the Pennsylvania Railroad's application for a new trial in the action brought against it by Walter Smalley, of this city, for damages. His rig was demolished by a train at Rahway some time ago and he secured a verdict against the road. The court also gave a verdict in the suit of the People's National Bank, of New Brunswick, against Louisa Schepflin, of Dunellen, to recover on a promissory note for $3,866.57. The judge in the court below gave a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount. Yesterday rule for a new trial was made absolute.

CALLED TO HOLY CROSS

Rev. George A. Warner to Minister to Episcopalians in North Plainfield.

CURATE AT ORANGE

Something About the Career of the Clergyman Who Is Rev. W. Montgomery Downey's Successor.

Announcement has been made that Rev. George A. Warner, the popular young curate of Grace Episcopal church, Orange, had accepted a call to succeed Rev. W. Montgomery Downey as rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, the borough. He has been assistant at Grace church two years and is greatly liked by all the parishioners, who presented him with a handsome painting Sunday. He expects to come to Plainfield in Advent.

Mr. Warner was born at Crown Point on Lake Champlain in 1873, and is a son of Dr. Warner, a well-known physician there. He received his education principally in New York, and graduated from the General Theological Semniary in 1900. Mr. Warner was trained for a business career, but at all times having a wish to become a minister, he accepted the first opportunity of entering a ministerial career. His first charge was to become assistant pastor of Grace church, in Broadway, New York. He was also head master of the choir. He resigned to take a trip abroad, and upon his return took charge of St. Mark's church, Hussick Falls, N. Y. There was a debt of $4,000 on the church when he took charge, but by strenuous labor Mr. Warner soon had the edifice free from all debt.

Failing health compelled Mr. Warner to resign this charge after fourteen months' service, and his next position was the assistant rectorship of Grace church, Orange, under the Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, and he has continued there since. When a call was extended to the Rev. Charles Wakley to become rector of Grace church Mr. Warner resigned to leave the way clear for Mr. Wakley's acceptance.

Other seven calls have been received by Mr. Warner since his resignation, including two from the west. To all of these due consideration was given, but Mr. Warner finally decided to accept the offer from the Plainfield church.

FREEHOLDERS INSPECT.

Look Over Bridge Work Ordered by Park Club.

After the freeholders from Union and Somerset counties adjourned their meeting held at the Hotel Iroquois, yesterday, when the West End avenue bridge matter was settled, the Somerset county members visited the Washington avenue bridge for the purpose of inspecting some work done there within the past few months by the Park Club. It is contended that the Park Club has encroached on the stream in building a log wall in front of its property, and it was for the purpose of ascertaining the true facts that the inspection was made.

Afterward the Union county committee visited the bridge and inspected the work for its own benefit. The matter will probably be reported upon at the next regular meeting of each board and future action decided upon.

JOHN BRENNAN WEDS.

Takes Miss Nora Tracy, of Highland Falls, As His Bride.

John Francis Brennan, formerly of Co. K, but now located at West Point, and Miss Nora Tracy, of Highland Falls, N. Y., were married by Father Miller at St. Joseph's church, on Sunday. Mrs. J. D. Frazer, of the borough, sister of the groom, was matron-of-honor, and Mr. Frazer was best man. After spending a few days here, the couple will go to Washington for a short visit.

The groom is a veteran of the Spanish-American War, serving on the cruiser Brooklyn. About a year ago he re-enlisted in the regular army and is now stationed at West Point.

Completing Sewage Disposal Work.

Richards & Gaston, the contractors, having charge of the work of improvements at the sewage disposal works, will complete their contract by January 1, within the time limit. The work now being done includes the installation of additional sewage beds and other appurtenances for the successful operation of the system. When finished it will be possible for the city to make many additional sewer connections.

—The mechanical drawing class of the Y. M. C. A. educational department held its first session yesterday.

POLICE MATTERS BEFORE COMMON COUNCIL TONIGHT

The opinion of Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh relative to the Supreme Court decision on the police bill and instrustions therewith will undoubtedly be received at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council tonight. As in other city matters, the Common Council will follow Mr. Marsh's advice.

It is now the opinion of those well posted that the councilmanic police committee will take up the matters relative to Chief Kiely and the police department. As there yet remains six weeks before the present Common Council retires, considerable work can be accomplished in that time toward investigating police department matters, and it is predicted that some interesting developments may be looked for between now and January 1.

If Mr. Marsh communicates with the Common Council tonight, Mr. Tyler, who is chairman of the police board, will probably be prepared to take some action tending to expedite the investigation of alleged irregularities in the police department, which Chief Kiely and his counsel, Senator Reed, have asked for.

With these matters before the Common Council tonight's session will be a most important one, for while the police commission is not now in authority, the members will watch with more than ordinary interest the proceedings of the police committee.

CONSUMERS' QUEER WHIMS

Purchasers of Commodities Have Some Singular and Senseless Notions.

There is no use trying to make people eat anything that does not conform to their ideas of what viands should be. A government pamphlet on "Consumers' Fancies," emanating from the omniscient department of agriculture and credited to George K. Holmes chief of the division of foreign markets in the bureau of statistics, eloquently enforces this lesson. Here are rapidly run over most of the commoner whims relating to the appearance of articles for the table. Thus brown eggs sell for a higher price than pure white ones in Boston, while New York and San Francisco prefer the white; butter colored to suit Chicago's taste would be too pale for that of Washington, and not nearly dark enough for New Orleans. And, in a long list of the most familiar articles the consumer demands a color or appearances which is not only no indication of quality, but is actually absent in the pure natural product.

Catsup made from tomatoes is not a vivid red, and must be made so, in very many cases by dyeing. Cider as it drips from the modern mill is almost colorless, but the buyer, remembering that the old-time cider and vinegar were brown, demands that the new wear the same color. The maker meets the demand with caramel. Whisky is in similar case. As it comes from the still it is white, and the darker color results only after it has been stored in a charred barrel. This tone can be given to white or undercolored whisky by means of burnt sugar. Prunes are dipped in glycerine and logwood, walnuts bleached with sulphite, because people believe that they ought to look as nature intended they should. Obviously, the refusal of the public to buy the "real thing" just as it comes is the greatest imaginable incentive to adulteration and fraud.

WHEN THE DAY WAS WARM.

Pretty Girl Came Near Telling How Hot It Was and Young Man Helped.

It was on one of those hot days lately. The cashier of a big downtown office felt very hot and testy in her iron cage. She is a very pretty girl, relates the Chicago Record-Herald, with fluffy brown hair, which was being blown about in a most tantalizing manner by an electric fan near by.

A jauntily dressed young fellow stepped to the window to pay a bill. He had a handsome, mischievous face, and one could easily judge that he saw the funny side of life. The cashier handed him a receipt, and as he folded it he said confidingly to the pretty cashier: "This is a very hot day."

"Oh, yes, it is hotter than ——," and before she could supply a strong enough superlative with which to climax her sentence, the young man said: "You are right, I thought so, too." Then with a hearty ha, ha, ha!" he was gone.

The girl straightened up in her chair and mused with rising indignation. "What did he mean? Did the brute think I would have mentioned that infernal region? Oh, well, it is almost as hot as there, I guess." And she settled down in her chair again and sighed complacently as she deftly tucked a stray lock of hair back to its proper position.

Little-Known Earl.

The twelfth earl of Derby is unknown to the readers of the ordinary history book. Lovers of art know him vaguely as the peer who married the pretty and popular actress Eliza Farren, whom the young Lawrence painted so brilliantly. But the earl had his revenge when all the world and his wife flocked to Epsom to see the race for the derby stakes. For that race, in its institution in 1780, was named after the jovial young peer who was one of the leading patrons of the Georgian turf.—London Chronicle.

The 33 Russian grand dukes own 350 castles and palaces in Russia and abroad and support an army of about 20,000 servants. One-fortieth of the best lands in European Russia belongs to these grand dukes. Of the 33 six, it is stated, have so little education that they can hardly read and write.

Poor Looker.

"Seen Edwin's new horse?" asked one villager of another.

"I have," was the reply.

"Well, what does it look like?" asked the questioner.

"Well, it looks," said the other man, slowly, "as if Edwin had taken it for an old debt."—Tit-Bits.

BAMBERGER'S

THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE

MARKET & HALSEY STS.

Our Fifth Floor Toy Bazaar is now open

Christmasland—the sparkling, scintilating Empire where King Plaything reigns in all his glory. A marvelous, romantic, rollicking show toward which the toy buying organization of the Bamberger store has devoted its best energies for nearly a year.

See that cunning little doll over there—sweet and sprightly, fresh from the other side. And that wonderful mechanical auto with its reckless chaffeur and tooting horn. The scenic railway with its real elevator and a hook and ladder truck that is so precise in its work that we are almost led to believe that human hands man it.

Musical toys that are really musical.

Doll furniture in endless array.

The newest games in quantities that will astound you. Hill climbing toys that ascend the steepest incline—why we might go on and tell of the marvelous things all day.

Come and see them for yourself—bring the little ones. Every one is cordially invited.

Special Attractions

The mechanical village. The most unique and interesting store attraction ever planned. A village with its workshops, church, flour mill, residences, railroad yards, lake and bay. A constantly moving, ever changing panorama in which young and old will be immensely pleased. An attraction that children will go into ecstacies over and one that every person should see.—Fifth Floor, Toy Bazaar.

THE MAN BEHIND THE OVERCOAT

likes to feel so far as "looks" are concerned that he is "It." A soiled coat, worn and crumpled collar, ragged button holes and a generally run down and hung-in-the-garret-all-summer-look, certainly detracts the best of all overcoats and puts the man behind it in the undressed class. THE GROWTH OF LONDON.

Not Very Different from That of Many of Our American Cities.

The suburban builder has certain fixed ideas and notions. To deal with, says the London Spectator, he greatly dislikes a tree. A well-grown tree is too large for him; so long as it is left standing it makes it impossible for him to utilize every square inch of the ground he has acquired on which to build houses. His first step, therefore, in dealing with the large pieces of ground which come into the market from time to time in a growing neighborhood, and which originally formed the park or woods of what was once a single country estate, is to cut down the trees. The older and grander trees perhaps cannot be removed merely with an ax and a spade; these he just blasts out of the ground.

Next, everything must be like everything else. All the roads must be of the same width and run in uniform directions; each house must resemble its neighbor as far as possible except that here is a certain latitude allowed in the pattern picked out in yellow bricks on the background of red; or there may be several different styles in white wooden balconies. Each garden, again, must measure so much by so much; there must be so many feet in front of the house and so many behind; and after the garden is measured out, it has to be inclosed with a wooden fence, of which the black kind is the worst. One by one the square black boardings announcing that "this eligible residence is to be let or sold" disappear as the newly married city clerk and his bride come into occupation; scarcely a year has gone by since the first brickload was driven into the corner of the hay field, and another hideous addition has been made to the London suburbs.

PAID BY THE GOVERNMENT.

Interesting Particulars Concerning Salaries of Senators and Representatives.

The salaries of officials of the United States government have been increased several times since its foundation, and necessarily, for the relative value of money has declined. For instance, in 1789, the salaries of senators and representatives were fixed at six dollars a day and six dollars for every 29 miles of travel. In 1795 these sums were increased to seven dollars each. In 1816 the salary was made $1,500 per annum. In 1818 it was raised to eight dollars a day and eight dollars for every 20 miles of travel. In 1856 the pay was put at $3,000 and mileage as before, and in 1866 the salary was raised to $5,000 and of the speaker to $8,000, as these are now.

The salary grab act of 1873, which increased the pay to $7,500 for senators and representatives, aroused an indignant protest, not because of the increase in itself, but because the raise was made retroactive only in the case of congress, and that feature was concealed under a raise of salary of the president from $25,000 to $50,000 a year, and of the chief justice from $8,500 to $10,500, and of the vice president, cabinet officers and associate justices from $8,000 to $10,000, none of them retroactive. This salary grab act was repealed the next year, and all the salaries, except those of the president and justices reverted to the old standard.

These salaries should be now increased moderately, and the bill for that purpose introduced into the last congress ought to be passed; but no increase which would justify extravagant expenditures commensurate with those of many very rich men is suggested, nor would it be defensible.

SWIMMING POOL REMEDIES.

How the Boy with His Head Full if Water Was Suddenly Relieved.

"Golly, my head's full of water," said a boy at the public bath as he stood on the side of the pool and pounded his temples with his open hands.

"Put a rock on your ear," yelled a country lad who was treading water in the middle of the pool. "That'll draw out the water."

The city youth tried a piece of brick that was lying in the corner of a dressing room, but it did no good. Recipes for drawing out the water were hurled from all parts of the room.

"Here, I'll show you how to get it out, said a boy who had been making spectacular dives and was therefore competent to prescribe. "Here, now stand on your right leg and put your left foot on your right knee. Now hold your nose in your left hand and your left ear with your right hand. Shut your eyes and hop."

The boy with the water in his ears followed directions and began to hop dangerously near the side of the pool. The boy who was trying to cure the patient suddenly pushed the hopping boy into the pool. He fell sprawling and hit the water with a big splash.

He came to the surface smiling. "It's out," he said, "but it's a bum way to get rid of the water."

ANOTHER SUBWAY FROM NEWARK TO NEW YORK

PENNSYLVANIA RAILWAY INTERESTS WILL BUILD LINE TO RIVAL P. S. C.

Direct travel from Newark to New York will soon be possible by a Pennsylvania Railroad line, as well as the Public Service Corporation trolley. Closely following the announcement by the Public Service Corporation of the practical completion of its plans for a high-speed trolley line to connect the centre of Newark with the heart of the business section of Manhattan, the rival syndicate, through the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company, of which William G. McAdoo is president, and which is one of the constituents of the Pennsylvania-Belmont group, has let the public into its plans to connect Newark and Manhattan by a high-speed passenger railroad.

Like the plan of President Thomas W. McCarter, which involves subways through Newark and Jersey City and a tunnel under the Passaic, the plans of the Hudson and Manhattan provide for subways and tunnels. They propose to cover even a larger section of Newark than is contemplated in the Public Service Corporation plans. Entrance to Manhattan is to be had by the use of the tunnels under the Hudson controlled by Mr. McAdoo and the Pennsylvania interests.

Public information regarding the latest project has been the filing of a certificate with the Secretary of State of New Jersey, by the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company, announcing the abandonment of a portion of a route previously certified to, and the substitution of the plans for the Newark and Jersey City subway route. With the certificate an incorporation fee of $16,000 was deposited.

The entire distance of the line within the cities of Newark and Jersey City will be underground, with access from the surface at convenient points.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, a musicale will be given in the church Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society, of the First Presbyterian church, will hold its weekly meetings on Wednesday afternoon, instead of Sunday, in the future.

The Sunshine Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet in the church parlors tomorrow afternoon and consider the subject of "Japan."

The Boys' Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The subject will be "Korea." Mite boxes will be given out at this time.

"Medical Missions," home and foreign, will be the topic of the Christion Endeavor Society meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church on Friday night. Miss Elizabeth VanWinkle will be the leader.

The half-yearly meeting of Friends of Plainfield and Shrewsbury will be held at the Watchung avenue meeting-house Thursday, Friday and Saturday. There will also be delegates from Friends meetings east of the Ohio river.

Mrs. Louise Seymour Houghton will give a talk on Syria at the regular meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, in the chapel of the church this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

CHURCH SOCIABLE.

The first concern is to find a leader for the committees who will select the women who are to work on them, arrange for their meetings, listen, approve, criticise and suggest; one who has ideas, ability, ingenuity, and, above all, the gracious tact which deals judicious praise and gentle restraint, and smooths out the little snarls which are bound to arise. Given such a leader, she must call together all the women of the church who are willing to help her, and decide where each one can best work. Some can receive guests gracefully, but cannot make salad; some can decorate booths, but cannot lay a table; some can play or sing or recite, but must be especially asked to take part; most important of all, the women who have undiscovered gifts must be hunted out and made to do what they can.

Of course, it is easier for a few women to do all the work—easier for the leader and for the committees—but this is one of the things to forget. The more women who actually help, the more families are reached and interested, and a church sociable is primarily to bring people together.—Harper's Bazar.

Plainfield, N. J., November 14, 1904.

Although Mayor Fagan has repeatedly shown his dislike for bosses, he was quietly married on Sunday night.

And now Senator-elect Frelinghuysen announces that he will wed on Thanksgiving day. Just as soon as a man strikes luck——; well congratulations.

Bernard Shaw's boast that the book from which the play was dramatized goes freely through the mails here and abroad shows the need for fumigation of all mail matter.

When B. Frank Coriell retires tomorrow morning as sheriff of Union county he can have the satisfaction of knowing that he has conducted the affairs of his office in a straightforward, business-like manner. The duties of a sheriff are far from pleasant in many instances, but Mr. Coriell has discharged them in a way that made for him few, if any, enemies, and that is saying a good deal. As far as his successor, Dr. Lawrence, is concerned, all that can be said is that we have the utmost confidence that he will prove an efficient and honest officeholder.

Now that the Supreme Court has decided that the police commission act is unconstitutional, thereby restoring the Councilmanic police committee to power, no time should be lost in the investigation of the allegations made in the special report filed with the Common Council. This report contains statements damaging to the reputation of Chief Kiely and derogatory to the proper conduct of affairs in the police department. If the allegations are untrue, a stain has been cast on the name of the city by its authors; if true, there is no room in the city government for the official head of the police department. In their much discussed report, Councilmen Tyler and Bullock set forth the various rumors that reached them as members of the police board and declare that they were about to conduct an investigation when frustrated, for the time being, by Mayor Buckle's action in appointing a police commission. The Mayor's commission is no more, hence there is nothing to prevent the regular committee from going ahead with its probe. It is absurd to say that the Chief will not get a fair and square hearing before the Councilmanic board. The argument that it would be a case of an accused man being judged by his accusers is absurd. Both Tyler and Bullock say that the evidence has come to them, but even if they went out for it, their course would be nothing unusual. Chief Kiely has retained able counsel to defend him and with the hearing being public, he will be sure to get "a square deal." On with the investigation!

HIGH SCHOOL FIVE WON FROM BUSINESS MEN

FIRST TEAM DEFEATED RAHWAY; BOTH VICTORIES GAME EASILY.

The Y. M. C. A. first team and the P. H. S. five won their respective halves of a double basketball bill at Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night. The first team defeated the Rahway Y. M. C. A. 16 to 2, and High School defeated the Business Men 38 to 18. Both winning teams showed marked superiority over the losers.

The first team had a slow time in the first half, but waked things up in the second half. They ran away from Rahway in that half, scoring sixteen points to Rahway's two.

Rahway played a rough game. She deserved to lose on every showing. Smith, Scull and Leary played noticeably well and cleanly.

Line up and summary:

Y. M. C. A.	Rahway.
Smith	Miller
Thompson	Gibbons
forwards.
Scull	Trembly
center.
Leary	Balan
Letson, Utzinger	Clark
guards.

Goals from field—Smith, 3; Thompson, 3; Scull, 3; Leary, Letson and Utzinger; Miller, Gibbons, Clark. Goals from foul—Scull, 2; Leary, 2; Gibbons, Trembly, 2.

High School reduced the Business Men completely. The school team was fast and accurate in team work and passing, and shot goals with remarkable precision. In the second half the boys played rings around the captains of industry and made them look like undrilled recruities. Smith and Collier played brilliantly. Smith shot his goals with remarkable cleanness. In his five field goals the ball did not touch the rim of the basket, shooting through the opening as cleanly as Phil is wont to slam a baseball over the pan when the slamming season is open.

The Business Men were slow in passing and rocky in shooting. They need practice.

Line up and summary:

P. H. S.	Business Men.
Doane	Spicer
Smith	Doane, Heicker
forwards.
Collier	Browning, Bock
center.
Line, Caldwell	Clark
Freeman	Miner
guards.

Goals from field—Doane, Smith, 5; Collier, 5; Caldwell, 5; Freeman; Spicer, 6; Doane, Heicker, Clark. Goals from foul—Doane, Smith.

BANDMASTER MUST PAY.

Supreme Court Sustains Verdict for Breach of Promise.

Trenton, Nov. 14.—The Supreme Court gave yesterday a decision sustaining the $10,000 verdict for breach of promise recovered by Gaetanino Lonbari against Vessella, the Italian bandmaster, at Atlantic City.

The Court holds that the case was legally tried and the verdict of the jury was supported by the evidence and is not excessive. Vessella was engaged to the complainant in Italy. He came to this country and married Miss Edna Egan, of Cincinnati, while in Atlantic City. His former fiancee followed him and brought the suit.

IDES ON STATEN ISLAND.

Thought He Stole a Boat and Rowed Across the Kills.

The authorities of Rahway are inclined to believe that Frank Ides, who escaped Saturday from the New Jersey Reformatory there, is now on Staten Island. Word was received yesterday at the institution that a rowboat was stolen from the coal piers at Port Reading during Sunday night and that it was found on the Staten Island shore yesterday morning.

It is thought probable the boat was taken by Ides. Thomas Giblin, who was shot by a guard while trying to escape with Ides, is doing well.

In Darkest New Jersey.

Weller is seventy-two years old and had not been in Newton for fifty years. He can neither read nor write and has only seen one locomotive and that at a distance of half a mile.

Will Use Electric Power.

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—The Pennsylvania Railroad management has decided to go ahead with the plan to equip with electric power the old West Jersey and Seashore Railroad to Atlantic City and some of the local suburban lines out of Camden. It is expected actual work of installing the electric system will begin early next spring.

COURT HITS DENTISTS.

Judge Swayze Draws the Lines More Strictly.

Yesterday was opinion day in the Supreme Court, and upwards of fifty cases were decided. One of great importance was setting aside the verdict of acquittal of Dr. J. Lee Terry, Trenton, on the charge of practicing dentistry without taking out a State license.

The State Board of Registration and Examination in dentistry made the charge against Dr. Terry and the State Law Department was prosecutor.

In his opinion, setting aside the acquittal in the District Court, Trenton, Justice Swayze said:

"The judge that charged that if the jury found that the defendant was doing so as a student of a regular dentist, the verdict should be for the defendant.

"I think this charge erroneous. There was evidence that the defendant was not an assistant, but rather the principal; and that the dental operations he performed were performed independently and on his own supervision of the alleged preceptors."

This is the first blow to breaking up a practice of dentists coming into New Jersey and avoiding the law.

Mayor Fagan Weds.

It was announced yesterday that Mayor Mark M. Fagan, of Jersey City, had been married quietly Sunday night. His bride was Miss Mary Grimes. The ceremony took place in St. Bridget's Roman Catholic church, Father John F. Ryan officiating. The ceremony was witnessed by near relatives and friends.

Fighter Fined.

Thomas Burgin, twenty-six years old, colored, and Edward Britton, twenty-one years old, white, were arrested last night by Patrolman Kelly, for fighting. Burgin was the aggressor and Judge Runyon fined him $5 in the city court this morning. Sentence was suspended on Britton.

TEACHERS IN JERSEY WILL RAISE $100,000

GOVERNOR SAYS SUM WOULD INSURE PERMANENCY OF FUND.

After much publicity of the unbusinesslike condition of affairs of the Teachers' Retirement Fund of New Jersey, the teachers have taken the advice of Governor Stokes and are arranging to raise $100,000 by January 1 next.

The Governor told the members of the Board of Directors some time ago that permanency of the fund demanded more money than was coming in.

This amount, he said, would insure its permanency, and at once the teachers planned bazaars that the fund might be put on a business basis and permanency secured.

To this end fairs have been arranged in Trenton, Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken, Union Hill, West Hoboken, Bayonne, New Brunswick and Camden.

In the northern part of the State the mayors of cities have been made honorary vice presidents, and it is believed that these efforts will bring about the situation of permanency that the Governor advised. The teachers believe that they can realize the $100,000.

ANNIE OAKLEY LOSES.

Hoboken Observer Need Not Pay $3,000 Damages.

In an opinion by Justice Reed the Supreme Court yesterday set aside the verdict for $3,000 damages gotten in the Hudson County Circuit Court by Annie Oakley, the famous rifle shot, against the Hoboken Observer for alleged damages resulting from the Observer printing a story sent out from Chicago headed "Downfall of a famous woman sharpshooter. Annie Oakley, a victim of drugs, sent to jail."

Miss Oakley brought suit claiming damages for sickness resulting from the publication of this story and for loss of earning power. She was to have gone on the road as an expert rifle shot at $150 a week and she claimed that the mental worry destroyed her ability to shoot thus rendering her contract void. The jury gave her a verdict for $3,000 damages.

The Supreme Court in its opinion today lays down the rule that "In an action for libel of slander damages cannot be assessed for physical sickness alleged to have been caused by the libel slander." And in comment Judge Reed says: "In the present case the damages resulting from physical sickness which the jury was permitted to consider did not stop with a mere compensation for such physical pain and expenses for medical treatment. * * * I am of the opinion that damages for loss of earnings so resulting, as well as for physical distress, are too remote."

In dismissing the assessment of damages the court notes that the plaintiff admitted on trial absence of actual malice.

SENATOR-ELECT TO WED.

Colonel Frelinghuysen Will Take Bride on Thanksgiving Day Eve.

Cards have been issued for the wedding of Colonel Joseph Sherman Frelinghuysen, Senator-elect for Somerset county, to Miss Emily Macy Brewster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Frank Brewster, of Rochester, N. Y. The ceremony will take place in Rochester, at St. Luke's church, at 11:30 o'clock in the morning of November 29.

Since he became the personal aide of Governor Edward C. Stokes and extended his acquaintance in that way, he has grown to be one of the most popular men in State affairs, by reason of the power he possesses of combining genial sociability with business ability.

VOTING DEVICES A TARGET.

Defeated Candidate Will Contest His Opponent's Election.

Whitfield R. Gillen, of Dover, the defeated Democratic candidate for sheriff of Morris county, has retained Reed & Salmon, of Morristown, and will contest the election of the Republican candidate, George Shaw, on the grounds that voting machines are unconstitutional.

Mr. Gillen has thirty days in which to file a protest, but as Mr. Shaw will be sworn into office tomorrow, very prompt action will be taken, although Mr. Gillen recognizes the fact that it may be a year before he gets an opinion on the matter.

Among the claims that will be made against the use of voting machines are that they deprive a voter of the use of the ballot, that he cannot cast a secret ballot, that the machine is an intimidation to the voter and keeps many from the polls, that a man cannot "split" his ticket without the fact being known to everybody in the polling place if they are listening, a feature that is, he claims, an additional intimidation and removal of the cloak of secrecy.

If a recount is demanded it cannot be made, a right, it is held, that every contestant is entitled to; no man if called upon can testify under oath as to just how he voted, and, in fact, after a voter has operated the machine, it is claimed, he does not know whether he has voted or not.

The peculiar actions of many of the voting machines, notably those in Madison last week, as well as those in other places, will be used as an argument against them.

Hunter Drops Dead.

North Branch, Nov. 14—The funeral of Henry Bruer, about twenty-two years old, who dropped dead Saturday near Van Derveer's cut of the New Jersey Central Railroad, while out gunning for rabbits with a party of friends, was held today. County Physician Taylor, of Millstone, granted a burial permit. Death is believed to have been due to heart disease. Bruer had been in this country about three years, having come from Germany. He was residing at the home of John W. Mingst, near this place, and had complained of his health on several occasions. At the funeral Rev. Dr. Doolittle officiated. Interment at North Branch.

Arm Shattered by Shot.

High Bridge, Nov. 14—Suffering from gunshot wounds, Benjamin Trimmer, about thirty-five years old, of East High Bridge, was taken to the Easton (Pa.) Hospital Saturday afternoon. Trimmer was accidentally shot in the right arm and shoulder by David Thompson, who accompanied him on a day's gunning for rabbit. They were hunting through Sutton's swamp, which is heavily covered with underbrush, when in some manner Thompson's gun was discharged. Trimmer, it is said, was a little ahead. His arm was badly shattered.

Gunning Accident Fatal.

Trenton, Nov. 14—Joseph Tyman, nineteen years old, son of Patrick Tyman, of Pennington, died at St. Francis Hospital Sunday from the effects of a wound which he received while gunning Friday afternoon near his home. He was laying his gun down, when it discharged, the contents entering his right thigh. At the hospital his leg was amputated.

AMUSEMENTS.

The attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight is the stirring drama, "The Unwritten Law." It has an absorbing plot and in the hands of a competent cast is sure to prove one of the best offerings of the season.

One of the marvels of the theatrical fraternity is the splendid performance of Horace Wright in "Simple Simon Simple," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night. The character Mr. Wright portrays is that of Tony De Bumski, an Italian fruit vender, and he looks and acts it to the life. In fact many sons of sunny Italy visited the theatre where Mr. Wright was performing in order to hear him sing, actually believing him to be one of their compatriots. Mr. Wright's voice is a lyric tenor of exquisite quality and great range. His singing of "Juno," written expressly for him by Bert Howard, is received with intense enthusiasm.

"Bankers and Brokers" is the title of the new musical comedy in which Yorke and Adams will make their stellar bow at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, and just at this time of seething "finance" is an appropriate and catchy title. It is said to be one of the greatest hits of all the laugh-making plays and seems to be produced on exceptionally good principles, namely: "Nothing prettier than a pretty girl; nothing sweeter than a sweet song, nothing more graceful than a graceful dance," for all these features have received special attention.

Charles E. Blaney's sensational melodrama, "The Curse of Drink," will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday night. The play has been one of the most successful on the road this season, and is said to have been improved and remounted for its trip. The story deals with life among railroad men in the east, and carries heart interest and comedy. A locomotive and several other novel effects are promised.

Campbell Donald, who sings the role of "Guy of Gisborne" in the famous comic opera, "Robin Hood," which comes to this city on Monday evening next at the New Plainfield theatre, was for many years associated with The Bostonians in "Robin Hood," and achieved his splendid reputation in the role he is now playing. Mr. Donald has a finely cultured voice and is well remembered along with the late Jessie Bartlett Davis with whom he sang in the Bostonians'. For their great revival of "Robin Hood" The Aborn Production Co. has spared no expense as regards cast, chorus and costumes and scenic environment. The cast of ten principals and chorus of forty trained voices complete the finest singing organization in America today.

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

Must Have Luxuriant and Glossy Hair, No Matter What Color.

The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of a female mouth, loses something if the head is crowned with scant hair. Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that burrows into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality. The little white scales the germ throws up in burrowing are called dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. Newbro's Herpicide, an entirely new result of the chemical laboratory, destroys the dandruff germ, and, of course, stops the falling hair, and prevents baldness. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

If you wish to nave the clothes look more glossy use soap water in making starch. This also renders the iron less likely to stick.

If when making coffee a little salt is added before pouring on the boiling water it will be found to greatly improve the flavor.

Enameled ware that has become bruned or discolored may be cleaned by rubbing with a paste formed by coarse salt and vinegar.

White paint may be cleaned by rubbing it gently wit ha soft flannel dipped in a paste made of whiting and water and adding a little soap powder.

Hard water can be easily softened for toilet purposes if a muslin bag containing fine oatmeal be squeezed out in the water before using. Fresn oatmeal should be used every day.

When using stale bread for puddings always soak it in a cold liquid. Bread that has been soaked in cold milk or water is light and crumbly, whereas that soaked in hot liquids is heavy.

TO WASH SILK STOCKINGS.

Who dances must pay the piper, and who wears fine clothes must go to trouble. And the purport of this is that if you will wear silk stockings and can't afford a maid to wash them for you, you'd better do it yourself, rather than send them out with the ordinary wash.

Some experts say that delicate silk and lace stockings should always be cleaned with benzine, but benzine is so odorous that it should be used only when absolutely necessary, and here it is not. The most cobwebby quality will come out whole and unstreaked if they are washed in bran water.

Buy the bran at a drug store, and if one is going away for the summer take a quantity of it. Put a handful of it into a basin of tepid water, souse and squeeze the stockings in it and rinse in the same way.

Do not wring, and if the stockings are colored be sure to dry in the shade and what is better still, in the dark, that they may not fade. If washed in the afternoon and hung near a window they will dry over night.

FOR YOUR HEALTH.

Don't eat when tired and don't work when tired. It is a mistake to work when not in a fit condition—bad for the work and worse for you. Don't sit down to table as soon as you come in from work or a round of social duties. Lie down, or sit down, for ten minutes, waiting until you can partake of your dinner with the physical machinery rested and refreshed.

Sleeping between blankets is a great preventive of chills, as by so doing the body is not chilled by coming in contact with cold sheets. Those who suffer from cold feet should wear loose, white woolen bed socks. Heat giving foods, such as butter, dripping, suet puddings, milk puddings, cocoa, soups and broths, produce heat in the body, which flannel, as a non-conductor, prevents from leaving the body.

Grind common starch with a knife until it is reduced to the smoothest powder, put it in a clean tin box, so as to have it by you for the prevention of chapped hands. After washing your hands, rinse them thoroughly in clean water, wipe them, and while they are yet damp rub a pinch of the starch thoroughly over them, covering the whole surface. The effect is magical. The rough, smarting skin is cooled, soothed and healed.

At the first sign of a corn or bunion the feet should be bathed every morning in the cold or warm water to which a little alum or vinegar has been added. This is a soothing bath also for swollen feet, and leaves a nice sensation of freshness. Feet that are inclined to corns or bunions should be sponged at night with lavender water or very slightly diluted vinegar. People who suffer from weak ankles should put plenty of salt in the water in which they bathe their feet, and should use the water cold.

For whooping cought, a syrup that the children like is made by slicing onions fine, sprinkling plentifully with brown sugar, then allowing the onion to stand between hot plates under a heavy weight until all the juice is extracted. As a cure for insomnia the onion is excellent sliced raw and eaten just before retiring, while as a blood purifier it surpasses most of the so-called "skin cures." To sweeten the breath, eat a little sugar after the onions. Coffee or parsley moistened with vinegar, are also excellent for this purpose.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt." "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Full 500 yards, almost due south, march the doubled lines in blue, Meade's little division of Pennsylvanians alongside and east of Doubleday's. Hatch's old brigade is on the left of Gibbon's, Patrick in its rear, in support, and for a time the Sixth Wisconsin, at the post of honor, has the Hagerstown road on its right for a guide. But now comes a thin patch of woods and a turn—only a slight turn—in the line of the pike, and here, little by little, through pressure from the center, the first company begins to edge out over the highway, the second follows, and by the time they are bursting through the barnyards and farm enclosures at Millers, and the shells have changed to shrapnel and men are dropping fast, the entire right wing of the Sixth is across the pike and wading through that westward field. Then up the pike, just as at Gainesville, comes galloping battery "B," and into the farmyard it turns, and there, whirling the guns in line to the south, delivers its resonant answer. The Sixth is just striding out from the cornfield and into the woods to the west of the road when, sudden as a thunderbolt, there bursts the crash of an infantry volley, and from front and right flank, so close that the smoke jets forth in their faces, a low-aimed lead storm shrieks through their ranks and down goes half the wing. Then blaze the whole west wood and the hedgerow south of the cornfield, and as from an unseen foe! Flesh and blood cannot stand such a gale in the open. The survivors swing back to the highway, rallying instantly at the edge of the field, and there, flat on their faces, they take vigorous hand in the fight, while Patrick's men, close at their heels, rush in to prolong the line to the right and fill the gaps at the front. Five minutes—and both woods, east and west, and the intervening cornfields are in dense clouds of sulphur smoke, for Ricketts, too, has come up with his division on the left of the corps, and a battle of giants is on.
